SENATE.—Seventy-third day.—The Governor has approved the bill repealing the law relative to the confinement of United States prisoners in the prisons of this state, and the Normal School appropriation bill. A communication from the House calling for a committee of conference on the special committee to investigate the Agricultural College, was laid on the table. Bills passed: Amending the law relative to the number of peremptory challenges of jurors; providing that one sewing machine for each family shall be exempt from levy and sale on execution; making it unlawful for foreign insurance companies legally admitted to do business in the state from placing or causing to be placed insurance on property in offices outside of Michigan; relative to the taking or catching of fish in the inland waters of the state; amending the general railroad law so as to prohibit persons from passing through or under gates at crossings; amending the law for the prevention of the spread of cholera; making telegraph companies common carriers. A bill providing for seats for lady clerks in stores did not pass; but was reconsidered. HOUSE.—Representative Zimmerman's emery wheel bill was passed. A bill providing for the incorporation of the supreme commandery and subordinate commanderies of the United Friends of Michigan, with an insurance clause, came up on the order of third reading, and a motion to refer it to the committee on insurance was lost and the bill passed. The name of Jessie Woodley was changed to Jessie Elizabeth Fisher, and she is now an heiress. A bill was passed to authorize the county of Menominee to aid in the construction of a bridge across the Menominee river. A bill to provide for the incorporation of the state and local organizations of the Happy Home club of America, designed for the cure and prevention of drunkenness, the capital stock being $500,000, was referred to the committee of the whole. A Senate bill amending the act relative to the dissolution of corporations, was passed. A Senate bill providing for the release of girls from the state public school by the board of control, and for their return for bad behavior, and making it a state prison offense to aid or assist girls to escape from the school was passed. Also, a Senate bill appropriating $5,000 for the state Pioneer and Historical society for books and publications. The anti-free pass bill came up for a third reading, and a motion was made to lay it on the table. The clerk called the roll three times before a quorum was disclosed, but in the end the motion was lost. The bill was finally defeated and free passes are still in style.

SENATE.—Seventy-fourth day.—The bank half-holiday bill was taken from the table and referred to the committee of the whole. Senators Steele, Fox and Morrow were appointed a committee of conference to confer with the House committee upon the disputed question of a special committee to investigate the Agricultural college. Bills passed: Authorizing the village of Davidson, Genesee county, to borrow money for the purpose of making public improvements; authorizing the council of Escanaba to make reassessments for street improvements; changing the name of Jennie Woodley to Jessie Elizabeth Fisher; appropriating $10,000 for the mining school; amending the law prohibiting the soliciting or issuing of unauthorized fire or inland marine insurance policies; making an appropriation of $8,000 to increase the efficiency of the state board of health; authorizing the Lansing City Railway company to extend its line to the Agricultural college. The following bills were passed in committee of the whole: Amending the charter of the city of Detroit so as to prohibit bogus bankrupt sales; amending the law establishing a state agency for the care of juvenile offenders; to require the use of safety valves on all cylinders, drums or other vessels, appliances or receptacles containing and confining carbonic acid gas, nitrous oxide gas and like acriform substances. HOUSE.—A bill for a jury commissioner to consist of six members, to be appointed by the governor, for St. Clair county, was passed. An attempt was made to reconsider the vote by which the anti-free pass bill was lost, but failed. Appropriation bills were passed as follows: $74,250 for maintenance, two cottages and additional land for the Traverse City insane asylum; $5,000 for a new insane asylum in the Upper Peninsula; $20,000 for the Kalamazoo insane asylum. Other bills passed were: To amend the act for the prevention of the introduction of cholera, etc.—It provides for a rigid quarantine against persons coming to this country from districts where communicable diseases prevail; to prevent the shooting of sparrows from traps by sportsmen—so amended as to prohibit the propagation of the "pests and was then passed and given immediate effect.

SENATE.—Seventy-fifth day.—Bills passed: Authorizing the village of Hancock to acquire water works; requiring the use of safety valves on cylinders, etc., containing and confining carbonic acid and other like gases; authorizing the city of Menominee to join with the city of Marinette, Wis., in constructing a bridge across the Menominee River; amending the sparrow bill by suspending the bounty from April to November. Gov. Rich sent to the Senate a communication from Gov. Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, asked that ten commissioners be appointed from Michigan to meet in an interstate conference with the other states of the union to consider the matter of the gigantic coal combines—referred. The Weiss bill for the selection of electors of President and Vice-President of the United States by a direct vote of the people was agreed to in committee of the whole. HOUSE.—The new rule of two sessions per day went into effect today. The judiciary committee reported out a bill for the construction of a home for widows, orphans, mothers, etc., of deceased union soldiers, with amendments, and with a recommendation that it do pass—referred. The clerk of the Senate sent back the Agricultural college investigation concurrent resolution again reasserting its determination to have three members of the committee as well as the House, and announcing a committee of conference. The House finally conceded the point. A bill requiring the filing of notes of hand, contracts, etc., with township and city clerk, was taken from the table and referred. The Ionia reformatory bill and the bill consolidating the offices of city attorney and city counselor of the city of Detroit were passed as were the following bills: For the propagation of whitefish in Manistique lake; providing for the commitment of boys from 12 to 16 years of age to the Industrial Home for Boys; amending the laws relative to township boards of health so as to increase their powers.

A FINANCIAL CRISIS.

TWO LARGE LANSING FIRMS IN THE HANDS OF A RECEIVER.

Over $700,000 Liabilities—The Fact That the President of the Companies is President of the Central Michigan Bank Causes a Run and the Bank Closes.

Lansing has had such a fright over financial matters as would almost turn its citizens' hair gray. For several days it had been noised about that a crisis was imminent in the affairs of the Lansing Lumber company and Iron and Engine Works, both of which institutions Orlando F. Barnes is president. The climax was finally reached when both companies gave Orlando M. Barnes, father of Orlando F. Barnes, mortgages upon all their property; real and personal, to secure their paper, upon the greater portion of which he is the sole indorser.

The two mortgages therefore secure a total indebtedness of $701,000, which approximately represents the total liabilities of the two companies. By this arrangement, which was effected with the consent of all the Lansing banks which held a large proportion of the paper, O. M. Barnes practically assumes the ownership of both properties involved, and will combine his personal fortune, which will reach $1,000,000, with the assets of the companies, which represent an additional $800,000, for the purpose of meeting liabilities which will not exceed $900,000. Mr. Barnes is entirely confident that he will be fully able to meet the emergencies and says that every dollar of indebtedness will be paid. He will give the business of both concerns his personal attention.

The fact that O. F. Barnes was also president of the Central Michigan Saving Bank precipitated a run on that institution and in a short time $29,000 in saving deposits was withdrawn. After consulting with Bank Commissioner Sherwood, who is in the city, Cashier Bradley decided that it was unfair to the majority of the depositors to permit the run to continue and so closed his doors. Commissioner Sherwood at once took possession and the bank will remain closed pending his examination of its affairs.

The Village of Plymouth Receives a Very Costly Scorching.

A very severe conflagration destroyed a block of the best business portion of the village of Plymouth. The alarm was given just before midnight, and for more than two hours the entire able-bodied population of the village was engaged in fighting the fire. The postoffice, a small one-story frame, was gutted, although the contents were removed to the town hall.

The total loss is estimated at from $50,000 to $60,000, and involves the stock of about a dozen of the leading business firms. The block is a smouldering mass of ruins, not even the walls remaining standing. The burned portion is not large in dimensions, but it embraces the principal business part of the town, including the National bank. Just how it originated is considerable of a mystery, although it is believed to have been incendiary. It started on the outside of the wooden barber shop owned by George Van De Car. The Detroit fire company No. 8 reached Plymouth in time to aid in extinguishing the smouldering ruins.

This is not the first time that the pretty little village of Plymouth has been severely visited by fire. It was practically wiped out on May 17, 1856. At that time the loss was almost total.

Big Masons at Bay City.

Bay City did the honors to the men who have obtained front rank in the Masonic order. It was the first time that city had been selected by the officers of the Michigan Sovereign Consistory as a place for conferring the Scottish Rite degree, and the new Masonic Temple was dedicated at the same time. The officers of the Michigan Sovereign Consistory, Mt. Olivet Chapter of Rose-Croix H. R. D. M., Carson Council, Princes of Jerusalem and Detroit Grand Lodge of Perfection conferred the degrees. After the work was concluded a banquet was served to the Princes of the Royal Secret.

Another Careless T., A. A. & N. M. Fatality

A freight train and lone engine collided on the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan road near Whitmore Lake. Fireman Swineford's legs were both broken, and he died soon after being cut out of the wreck of the cab and tender. The freight train had been ordered to stop at Emery to wait for the engine. Both engines and five cars were badly wrecked. The engineers and firemen were all non-union men. They misunderstood their orders Swineford was a Chicago man.

Ripped Open by Falling on Saws.

John M. Clark, half owner of the Freeman Manufacturing company's plant at Kalkaska fell forward upon a gang of small saws and two parallel gashes, three inches deep and five inches apart, were cut from his breast to his abdomen. He was instantly killed. Mr. Clark had a wide and extensive acquaintance and was very popular. He leaves a wife and four small children amply provided for.

DEATH IN THE GALE.

14 PEOPLE DROWNED IN LAKE MICHIGAN AT MILWAUKEE.

Crew of 11 People go Down in the Lake With the Schooner Hayes—The Wind Blew 70 Miles an Hour and Did Great Damage.

Lake Michigan has been the scene of some harrowing windstorms, but the one related in the following dispatches are doubtless without a parallel in the history of the great lakes. The disaster which occurred at Milwaukee could not be foreseen:

The crib at the end of the intake tunnel of the city water works, situated some 3,000 feet out in the lake, was washed away and of 15 men who were employed there in the shaft which reaches to the shore, but one is known [illegible] were washed off by the huge billows which have been tumbling on the shore and others perished in the air shaft, where they sought shelter, and which filled with water. At daylight no vestige either of the crib or the house that surmounted it could be seen and there were but faint traces here and there of the government breakwater that was hidden in the mountains of surf that broke over it. The entire prospect as far as the eye could reach was one awful spectacle of seething, boiling roaring billows that seemed to unite with the clouds in the sky. On the beach were two lumber-laden crafts that had vainly sought shelter behind the breakwater, while the shore was strewn with wreckage.

About 200 feet of the breakwater, which was thought to be staunch enough to withstand the severest storm, had been washed away, and the massive timbers and planks were tumbled in disordered heaps upon the shore.

LATER.—Thousands of people gathered on the shore when the news of the disaster had been made known. About 9 o'clock when the crowd which had been straining their eyes to see the bottom of the crib (which, being anchored by stonework to the bottom of the lake, still remained), which was visible between the huge waves. Suddenly some one cried out: "I see a man." Powerful glasses were soon sweeping the angry waves, and sure enough there was a man clinging to the pump, the only remaining piece of machinery.

The tug Welcome, with a lifeboat and men, started at once for a battle with the waves. It was a heroic struggle, and when Capt. Peterson finally reached the crib with a rope and a life preserver a sorry sight was presented. Three corpses were rolling about the crib, and James Miller, the sole survivor, was too week to longer help himself. After being cared for at Emergency hospital he told the following story: "It was 5 o'clock in the morning when we found that water was entering the air tight compartment of the shaft where we had taken refuge for the night. We took a vote to decide whether we would risk leaving the shaft. It was decided to leave. Only five of us succeeded in reaching the outside. The nine men who were not strong enough to get out were drowned by the water coming into the shaft and four out of the five who got out were mangled or drowned by the tremendous floods which were lashed over the crib. At what hour the house was washed away I do not know. It had disappeared when we got out of the shaft."

Schooner Hayes and Crew Went Down.

Chicago special—First reports: The steamer A. P. Wright left here at 6 o'clock with the schooners Hayes and Danforth in tow for the lower lakes. An hour afterward they encountered a terrific east gale. The tow line of the Danforth parted, and she drifted ashore four miles north of the harbor entrance, parted in the middle and soon went to pieces. The Hayes was burning torches for an hour before the Danforth broke adrift, and reports are current that the Hayes has foundered. She was commanded by J. P. Minskey and had a crew of 10 men. Her cargo was corn for Buffalo. The crew of the Danforth was taken off by life-saving crew.

LATER.—After the Danforth had cut loose from the Hayes and the Wright the latter two continued to battle with the storm. For almost 36 hours the crews kept the vessels safe from the demon wind, but the fight was unequal and the crew of the Hayes had to signal for assistance. The Wright took the crew off and not much too soon, for the Hayes stayed above the waves but a short time. The Wright finally made port.

The Storm in Detroit, and Vicinity.

The Detroit weather office reports that for the first time since the office was established its wind instrument, signal pole and signal lights and flags were carried away. As the wind becomes a gale in weather office parlance when it reaches 34 miles an hour, this 70-mile gale is entitled to be called a howler, and made things lively for the few early navigators on the lakes. The Detroit and Cleveland boats made good time in spite of the gale of which fact the officials are very proud. One of the lofty electric light towers was blown down and just missed a number of residences the occupants of which slept no more that night. Signs were blow down and windows broken—several of the latter being valued at from $50 to $150 each.

The gale did a large amount of damage among the boat houses along the river front in the neighborhood of the Belle Isle bridge. Steam yachts and cat boats anchored close to the docks were smashed against each other, the roofs of the boat houses were carried away, and the floating docks lifted up on the land. The total damage will reach about $15,000.

The Storm at Varibus Points.

At Racine, Wis., the schooners Kewaunee and Bertha Barnes went on the beach and the former went to pieces.

At Toledo, O., water entered some of the big grain elevators and the schooner Tuxbury, with coal, went down, as did the steamer Pillsbury, near Turtle Island light.

Throughout the upper peninsula heavy snow as well as winds prevailed and caused a cessation of traffic. Telegraph wires were down in all parts of the state and in some localities fruit and grain was injured.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

The Wood machines, as made for 1893, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

I ALSO SELL THIS SEASON THE

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER,

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground." We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crop, and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peaceful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

WHEREAS:—In God's providence, it has pleased Him to call from labor to reward our beloved co-endeavorer, Mertie A. Comstock.

WHEREAS:—We are constrained, in so far as words can do so, to show our recognition of her high moral and religious worth as a member of our society.

RESOLVED:—That while we bow in humble submission to the will of the Most High, who has for the first time, visited our ranks by death, we do not the less mourn for the co-worker who has been taken from us.

RESOLVED:—That in the death of our sister, the society loses a faithful and valuable member, one, who, in her daily life, evidenced her earnest consecration to God. By her constant cheerfulness of disposition and Christian kindness of heart, she won the friendship and esteem of all with whom she came in contact.

RESOLVED:—That while we feel deeply our own loss, we would not forget those to whom she was more dear, extending to them our most heartfelt sympathies, and commending them to Him who ever looks with pitying eye on those weighed down with sorrow.

RESOLVED:—That these resolutions be spread upon the records of our society, and be published in the Michigan Messenger, Sylvania Times, and Tecumseh Herald, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved family.

There is a rumor afloat that the Canadian Pacific R'y will send its World's Fair passengers over the Lake Shore R'y from Detroit. If it does they will pass through Adrian to Chicago. There seems to be some reason for placing credit in the rumor, from the fact that the road between Monroe and Lenawee Junction is to be ballasted with gravel and relaid with new rails. The work train began Tuesday unloading gravel through Monroe.

Mrs. Breamish, who several years ago purchased the Central Hotel property in this village, of A. W. The first of this week, with her case under the supervision of J. H. Pound of Detroit and W. C. Burridge of this place, she received judgement to the tune of $3500.

Harper's Weekly, published May 3d, will be largely devoted to the illustration of the great Naval Review at New York. Occupying the front page will be a characteristic picture of striking naval incident drawn by T. de Thulstrup. A double-page illustration will present a view of the fleet as it appeared at the time of the review, while a superb eight-page Supplement will illustrate the passage of the vessels from the bay to their anchorage in the North River. Other scenes and incidents of the occassion will be appropriately illustrated. The number will also contain an attractive miscellany of timely articles on other subjects of current interest.

A Moist Spring.

The deeply frozen ground will gradually relax under the warmth of spring while the earth will throw off its moisture and dampness will fill the air. No condition could be worse for the development of rheumatism. Extreme cold is bad for it, but a moist spring is worse. WORLD'S NAVAL REVIEW

A GATHERING OF WAR SHIPS SUCH AS THE UNIVERSE NEVER SAW BEFORE.

Cruisers of Foreign Powers.

THEIR SIZE AND ARMAMENT COMPARED WITH AMERICAN VESSELS.

Distinguished Guests From Abroad.

The naval review of 1893 in New York harbor will go down to history as the most imposing marine spectacle the world has ever seen. Never before has such an array of war vessels been gathered together.

School children, as well as many "children of a larger growth," have been taught to regard the "Invincible Armada," with which the misguided Philip II., King of Spain, fondly imagined that he would be able to effect the conquest of England, as the most formidable naval demonstration ever known. This is of course a ridiculous error, for on many occasions since then there have been gatherings of war vessels which would have annihilated the misnamed "Invincible Armada" in an hour.

The great Spanish armada was made up of 65 galleons and large ships, 25 urcas of 300 to 700 tons burden, 19 tenders of 70 to 100 tons, 13 small frigates, 4 galleoses and 4 galleys, in all 130 vessels, with a total tonnage of 75,868 tons. This is less than one-third of the tonnage participating in the great naval review. One vessel of the new United States navy, the Columbia or the New York, could lie at anchor and permit the entire armada to pepper away at her for a week without making a return, and she would not be injured at all. Any one of our rams could destroy the entire armada without suffering any damage and without discharging a single gun.

UNCLE SAM'S SHIPS.

Roll of Our Vessels Taking Part in the Review.

These are the ships of the United States navy taking part in the review, Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, commander-in-chief:

Philadelphia, first class cruiser, Capt. A. S. Barker, 29 guns.

Charleston, first class cruiser, Capt. H. T. Picking, 22 guns.

Cushing, torpedo boat, Lieut. McR. Winslow.

Miantonomoh, monitor.

This places America at the top of the list, as it should be, with the greatest number of ships in line.

Strength of Our Cruisers.

The cruiser Philadelphia, the flagship of Admiral Gherardi, is one of the best known vessels of the navy. She has been in commission nearly three years, and has been the flagship of the North Atlantic squadron. On her trial trip, in July, 1890, she won $137,000 for her contractors by surpassing the terms required in the specifications. She developed a speed of 19.678 knots per hour, the best record made up to that time by any vessel of her class.

The Philadelphia is 327.6 feet long, is 48.6 feet broad, draws 19.2 feet of water, has a displacement of 4,324 tons and a maximum horse power of 8,815. Her armament consists of twelve 6-inch breech-loading rifles, with a full outfit of smaller guns. The cost of building her was $1,325,000.

The Atlanta is a steel protected cruiser of 3,519 tons, engines of 4,030 horse power, and a speed of 15.6 knots. The Bancroft is a new steel practice vessel of 858 tons.

She has engines of 5,084 horse power and has a displacement of 4,500 tons. Her speed is 15.38 knots per hour. Her armament consists of four 8-inch breech-loading rifled cannon, eight 6-inch rifles, two 5-inch rifles, two 6-pounder and two 1-pounder rapid-firing guns, seven Hotchkiss revolving cannon and two Gatling guns.

A correspondent of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Despatch makes this curious statement: "In Uruguay, some of the rivers are so impregnated with the roots of Sarsaparilla as to possess sanitary qualities for bathing purposes, and the people who drink their waters are said to be exempt from skin diseases arising from impurities of the blood." The Uruguay sarsaparilla is probably the same variety of plant as that of the neighboring state of Honduras, of which Ayer's Extract of Sarsaparilla is made, and which is richest in medicinal qualities of any sarsaparilla root known to science; hence, of course, the extraordinary curative properties of Ayer's famous blood medicine.

Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at Orr's drug store. Large bottles 50c and $1.00.

An old tree in Carroll county was found to contain 200 rings. It was the only thing in Maryland that was ahead of Somerset county politics.

"The man who called sarsaparilla a fraud, had good reason; for he got hold of a worthless mixture at "reduced rates." He changed his opinion, however, when he began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It pays to be careful when buying medicines.

PRIDE OF THE STATE.

Dedication of the Michigan World's Fair Building.

A Brief Account of the Ceremony—Description of the Building—Something About the State's Exhibits at the Great Exposition.

DEDICATED.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 29.—This was a great day for Michigan. Her state building at the fair was dedicated. The ceremonies were held at Jackson park, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m. Hon. John T. Rich, governor of the state, members of the senate, house and supreme court and nearly all of the state officials participated. The following programme of exercises was carried out:

Presentation.....Hon. J. M. Weston, world's fair commissioner.
Response.....Gov. John T. Rich.
Address.....President of the national commission, ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer.
Address.....Director General George R. Davis
Address.....James B. Angell, president of the University of Michigan.

Other addresses than those noted above were made by prominent residents of the state and by world's fair officials. It was the intention to hold a reception during the evening in the house, but owing to disappointments in the electric lighting arrangements it was transferred to the Hyde Park hotel, where the functionaries from the state were quartered. The evening programme consisted of musical and literary features, dancing and a reception to Gov. Rich and staff and the members of the state legislature. The house, during the fair, will be under the care of the matron, Miss Beebe, formerly of Jackson, Mich.

The Michigan building is not the least pretentious of the state buildings. It is, in fact, one of the finest of that magnificent collection of state buildings at the north end of Jackson park. It is located at the intersection of two of the finest avenues in Jackson park.

The building is very houselike and the interior is very homelike. It has a ground area of 100x140 feet. There are three stories and on each are large, comfortable rooms, with open fireplaces, easy chairs, tete-a-tetes, etc. Of course it is all made from Michigan materials. Over the mantels are heads of Michigan deer. Throughout the building are pictures of noted Michigan men, Michigan scenes, etc. The first floor of the building is a general reception floor, the second contains three large exhibit rooms, one of which will be used for meetings both of business and social nature.

On the first floor the gentlemen's reception room, 43x37 feet, was finished and decorated by the city of Saginaw at an expense of about $5,000. Muskegon did her duty by putting $4,500 into a reading room. Grand Rapids spent $10,000 for the ladies' reception room, which is also on the first floor. It is finished in stucco, and hung with beautiful tapestries. The woodwork is enamel white.

The house is not only a home, it is a show. On the second floor the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, the finest institution of the kind in the west, will show a fine collection of native birds, animals and reptiles. In another room are to be shown the resources of the state, specimens of copper, iron and gold, salt, woods, etc.

The second floor has a large assembly room. The house will have pianos in the main rooms and in one a large pipe organ, made expressly for use in the Michigan building. The Michigan newspaper men will find accommodations there and files of all home papers of note. The building has check rooms, post office, barber shop, information bureau, private rooms, and everything to render ease to tired visitors from Michigan.

The outside of the building is pretty and imposing. The main tower has large, illuminated clocks which may be seen a long distance and from all the passing railroad trains. The rotunda has balconies, and these run around the outside, and the whole effect is harmonious and pretty. Its total cost to the state is about $30,000, and contributions of about $20,000 more have been advantageously used. The plans were by M. S. Smith & Co., Detroit, C. H. Pelton, of Grand Rapids, was the contractor, and E. A. Russel, of Muskegon, superintended the construction.

Michigan has more space in the Mines and Mining building than any other state in the union. Here are shown every species of mineral to be found in the state, arranged in shapes as best to show off the beauty and utility of the various specimens. Over the entrance to the exhibit is a vast archway, built of Michigan sandstone from four different quarries, and set in it are shields of different Michigan ores and mineral products. There are some beautiful specimens of verde antique, white marble, conglomerate copper ore, etc. Inside the arch, or rather under it, is a fountain, from which will flow mineral waters from the state, and above it is a frieze made of copper, showing bronzes at work in the mines.

Perhaps the first thing that the sightseer will notice is the long line of paintings around two sides of the space, showing the mines of the upper peninsula. There are views of Lake Angeline, the Pittsburgh, the Barnum, the Salisbury, the Calumet and the Hecla and other mines. The whole process of making copper from the native ore is shown by working models.

The exhibit of minerals is one of the finest ever put together, and is taken in part from private collections. There are specimens of copper in all sorts of kinds, rag copper, nail copper, block copper and every other kind found. Then there is iron ore, some of the richest ever dug, gold found near Ishpeming, and the specimens shown would assay at least $10,000 to the ton. Then there are silver, marble of different kinds and colors, verde antique, serpentine, which is a finer grade of verde antique, granite, whetstones from native navacalite, graphite, fire clay and common clay, fire sands, coal, amethyst, agate and chlorastrolites. This is an exceedingly beautiful mineral. It is found only in Spain, and on Isle Royal in Michigan. Carnelian of all sorts of colors is shown, as well as red amalcims, staphylites, prehnite, datholite, stilbite, dolomite, calcite, mileaceous hematites, grape ores, kidney ores, epidotes, needle iron ore, amygdaloid, pipe ore, calcite crystals containing native copper and so on through the entire list.

Michigan's vast forestry interests are displayed, not alone by a model of a logging camp, but by a display of all the native woods, pine, maple, beach, oak, elm, walnut, butternut, hickory and other hard woods. In addition to the woods themselves, there will be exhibited the methods of making lumber, which the lumbermen of Michigan have perfected. The extensive pine lumber mills of Saginaw and Bay City, Muskegon, Alpena, Oscoda, Tawas, Cheboygan, Big Rapids and all the other lumber cities will be represented by exhibits in the Forestry building.

In its agricultural exhibit Michigan again comes to the front. In the Agricultural building, in almost the center, the Michigan space for her agricultural exhibits is found. It contains about 2,000 square feet. Here will be found a collection of the varied agricultural products of the state. On top of the central pavilion will be two deer, both brought from the woods of Michigan. The exhibits comes from all parts of the state, and will comprise wheat, corn, oats, peas, beans, buckwheat, rye, clover and other kinds of seeds, timothy, popcorn, butternuts, walnuts, hickory nuts, beechnuts, hazlenuts, turnips, beets, cabbage, cucumbers, tomatoes, potatoes, rutabagas, melons, citrons, peppermint, blackberries, raspberries, squash and many other products of this fertile state.

The state is known as a great fruit-producing country, but the greatest part of this exhibit will be in Horticultural hall. Maryland is her only competitor in the peach-raising industry. She is a leading state in the culture of fish, for the lakes are filled with them, and the state is filled with lakes. At Petoskey is a branch of the government fish hatchery in charge of Ralph Connable, but this interesting feature, that is a source of pride to Wolverines, will be more fully exhibited in the Fisheries building. There will also be exhibits of pomology, horticulture and live stock. There will be exhibits from the peppermint farms, the celery fields and the cranberry marshes of the state.

A large section of space will be devoted to an exhibit by the Agricultural college, located at Lansing, the capital of the state. It has about 800 students, who work the experimental farms. In the Manufactures building the students will have an exhibit of the work done in their machine shops, laboratories, etc.

because the alleged steel wheel is not built by mechanics, as manufacturers have given the down-trodden artisans to understand, but that the Steel Wheel is made—bodies and all—only by the Aermotor.

In this year's blizzards and cyclones the Aermotor has proportionately much less than any wooden wheel, while the loss of the imitation steel ones has frequently been total.

45 sold in '88

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. ☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermoter. Where one goes others follow, and we "Take the Country." Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one $100, write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO. 12th and Rock Well Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

GALVANIZED It is not enough to make a wheel of galvanized iron, as the Aermotor is, but the parts exposed edges and ends must be galvanized after being completed, thus all are protected from rust and decay.

The Aermotor Pneumatic Water Supply System enables you to supply every part of your house with water without an Elevated Tank.

THE GREAT WORLD'S FAIR OPENED

A Memorable Scene Which Calls Up Memories of the Last Three Years—Tableaux in the History of Chicago's Mighty Effort—Success at Last.

WORLD'S FAIR, May 1. — [Special.] — Nothing like it was ever seen before. Neither Solomon nor Nero ever dreamed of so much magnificence. It was precisely at noon today that President Cleveland, standing in the midst of a multitude, pushed a little button no larger than his thumb. Instantly the electric current loosened the mightiest forces of steam and electrical energy ever bottled in one spot, tore down the veil from a number of beautiful statues; started columns of water playing toward the sky from many fountains; floated in the breeze thousands of flags and streamers from as many tall staffs planted upon the roofs and towers of a score of palaces; set in motion acres on acres of the most intricate and wonderful machines man in his best century has invented and perfected; sparked into brilliancy more than a hundred thousand electric lamps, a modern defiance at noon-time of the darkness of midnight.

Thus the World's Columbian exposition of 1893 was opened this day. As I sat near the president on this occasion—a moment which will survive vividly in the memory as long as one may live—my thoughts wandered in retrospective paths. All this splendor nominally in honor of that Columbus who four centuries ago landed on the low shores of Watling Island—his San Salvador—in the Bahamas. The people of that island are to-day suffering famine and pestilence. The only good fortune that has visited them in recent years was when an enterprising Chicago newspaper sent an expedition thither to erect with much expense silver coin a monument on the where Columbus' feet first touched soil of the new world, that lucky luckless Columbus, shortly afterwards returned to Europe in chains. As this Columbian fair is opened his descendant, now loaded with wealth and honors, sets within ten feet of me.

Seven Grecian cities praised Homer dead
In which the living Homer begged his bread.

Who first suggested this form of celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery? Probably we shall never know. Claimants for the honor appear every day or so, the caveat of each newcomer carrying him farther back than the earliest date given by his most previous rival. There can be no doubt, however—and it is a fact worth clearing in this connection in behalf of the truth of history—that the man who first made the idea of a Columbian exposition, known and talked about as a serious, practical proposition was Col. A. D. Anderson, of Washington, D. C. He interested the people of the capital, and statesmen lent a hand, too. Apparently it was determined there was to be an exposition, and it was to be held in Washington under government auspices. They had the site selected, on the shores of the Potomac. Other plans were perfected. But clouds soon appeared in the horizon. The mayor of Chicago had called a meeting of citizens to discuss the proposition to hold an international exposition in this city. New York heard of it, and called a meeting, too. St. Louis not to be outdone in enterprise, nominated herself.

Then ensued one of the most interesting, spirited contests for supremacy ever seen in this or any other country. In fact, all history may be ransacked in vain for a parallel. It was a municipal tournament which brought out the energy, the characteristics, the good nature, the wit and the public spirit of all the rivals. Early it was seen that New York and Chicago were evenly matched. Washington and St. Louis were not factors. The east was pitted against the west. What a campaign it was! Chicago won. All the reasons why have never been made public—never will be. The superior energy and stronger public spirit of Chicago were quickly manifested. While the easy-going New Yorkers were giving dinners to congressmen hustling Chicago had its men in every state in the Union, working boards of trade, legislatures, railway corporations, public sentiment—controlling the influences which controlled congressmen.

Then not many people appreciated the significance of that decision of congress. Now everyone appreciates it. Chicago's victory was the victory of the Mississippi valley, the interior and the farther west. It moved the actual center of the country two hundred and fifty miles to the west at one fell swoop. It pushed Chicago ahead twenty-five years at a bound. Today Chicago is the first city of the world. All this summer she will be the first city of America. After this year she will fall back beside her great and only rival, and the future race between New York and Chicago will be at hot pace.

As I look over this throng, gathered for the supreme moment in the most magnificent spot of the exposition, I see scores of Chicagoans who have devoted their energies for two years or more to the cause of the fair. They are proud and happy now, as they have a right to be. Nothing in this world but love is sweeter than triumph, and love is triumph itself. But there have been times, during the past twenty months, in which many of these men, and nearly all men in Chicago, have said they were sorry New York did not beat them in congress. At the same time New York chuckled and pretended to congratulate itself upon its escape. Neither expression was sincere.

Chicago has had her troubles, and at times the outlook has been very dark, indeed. But there was never any surrender, never any cessation of effort. As the human acre in the center of this wonderful scene, this culmination of the struggle, this victory, shouts with joy after the pressing of the mighty button, my thoughts still run to the hours and days of the busy past.

It has been a series of tableaux. Only three years and two months ago it was that we had in congress the memorable scene of Chicago's victory over New York. A month later Chicago was brought face to face with the serious side of her undertaking. Bitterness erupted in her stockholders' meetings. Dissension, disruption were threatened. One ringing voice, that of a little man no bigger than the finger of the statue of the republic which stands in the basin yonder facing Grover Cleveland—Thomas B. Bryan—quelled the storm. "The eyes of the world are upon you," he shouted; "be men!" Those words have been ringing in Chicago's ears ever since. They quelled many more storms.

Then the conflict, the inevitable conflict about the site. This was raged long and bitter. Predictions were made that Chicago would fall in an epileptic riot, result tions of the city, and that the fair would perish. It was the autumn of 1890 before the site was finally chosen—wisely chosen as the most zealous advocates of other locations now admit.

The Illinois legislature was not going to pass a law enabling the city of Chicago to issue bonds in aid of the fair, and the people wouldn't vote the bonds, anyway. So said the pessimists. Without municipal aid Chicago couldn't raise the money and the whole enterprise was going to the dogs. In sixty days the bonds were sold in the money market. All predictions and cavilings that Chicago could not raise the ten millions of dollars required of her by congress thus came to naught.

Before the enterprise was fully on its feet another danger, the greatest danger of all, appeared. Congress had created a national commission and recognized a local board of directors. The inevitable conflict between them arose. More bitterness, doubt, contention, darkness. So great was the tension that one or two of the Chicago papers began to throw out hints of abandoning the enterprise. Eastern papers were not slow to act on this hint, and soon it became a mooted question not only in this country but in Europe whether there would be a fair or not. Indeed, it was at one time generally believed in Europe that the Chicago people had confessed the task to be too great for them and given up the job. They did not know Chicago!

This difficulty was finally adjusted. Then it became necessary to disabuse the world of the notion that there was to be failure in Chicago. A score of men were sent traveling through Central and Southern America to secure governmental cooperation and private exhibits. Other agents were sent to Asia and to Africa. A commission of prominent men traveled all through Europe, and turned toward the fair the tide of continental opinion that had been running strongly away from it.

Two years ago this marvelous spot on which we stand today was a mud-hole. Big dredges were at work scooping out lakes and using the earth thus acquired for the construction of islands and building sites in the swamp. A year ago I stood right here and saw one half-finished building, four or five with complete foundations, a dozen more existing only on the map or in piles of material. The transformation that has come over this scene in the short space of one year the most sublime thing I have perceived in this whole enterprise. It is a thing which cannot be described and which must go forever unrealized except by those who saw it. If some photographer had had the wit to prepare a series of views illustrative of the rise in two years of this city of palaces on its mud-hole site, he might have made his fortune with it. The pyramids, St. Gothard, St. Petersburg, Suez, Pacific railroad, were memorable examples of the power of organized human energy. Greater, far greater than any of these, considering the time employed, is the achievement of which to-day is the climax.

Three years ago Chicago shouting in the capitol at Washington.

Two years ago dredging and scooping as if she were constructing a canal.

One year ago laying broad acres of floors and contracting for more work atop them than she had money in sight to pay with.

To-day, the world at her feet!

How will Chicago come out financially? Don't worry. Chicago will attend to that. But do not forget that she did this: When a ten million dollar fair was perceived to be too small she went ahead and made it a twenty million dollar fair, regardless of consequences. She bonded and borrowed and turned corners and even conquered in small measure a congress which all the experts thought was unconquerable. She modified none of her plans on account of expense, but rather enlarged them and spent more. This was nerve. It was courage. It deserves its reward.

No American stands in this great presence today and views this majestic opening without feeling proud of Chicago and of his country. ROBERT GRAVES.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen.

Lord Aberdeen, formerly lord lieutenant of Ireland and the next governor-general of Canada, has arrived at New York en route to Chicago. He was accompanied by Countess Aberdeen, Lady Arnote, Miss Arnote, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Sullivan. Both Lord and Lady Aberdeen are well known in this country and Canada and are not strangers in Chicago. The Irish village has Lady Aberdeen as chief patroness, and she will give her personal attention to many of the details in connection with the exhibit.

Bureau of Awards.

John Boyd Thatcher's bureau of awards has been installed in pavilion B of the Administration building. As there are thirteen main departments of the exposition, the bureau will consist of thirteen departments, all of which will be subordinate to the chief. Articles to receive the bronze medal and accompanying diploma, which constitute an award, will be selected by the executive committee on awards.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Tecumseh, Mich., on Friday April 28, 1893, Miss Fannie Stocking, aged 59 years. Miss Stocking was the daughter of Amos and Theodosia Stocking, who were among the earliest and most respected settlers of the town of Tecumseh. The house in which she was born, being the first one north of Theodore Crane's, was one of the first frame houses built in the place. Miss Stocking was born in November 1833. Her life has been one of the most quiet and yet one of the most useful of lives, having been spent, nearly all of it, in or near her native place, and in occupations which are more honorable and self-denying than conspicuous or remunerative. She early developed a taste for books and was a pupil of the Tecumseh school, of that of Prof. Estabrook and of the State Normal. She began teaching in Franklin at the early age of sixteen. She taught many years in Clinton also, where she is lovingly remembered for her labors. But it is in this, her native town, that she was best known and most widely and fully appreciated. Here she united at an early age with was warmly attached, and of which she was a consistent, and until the loss of her health an active and useful member; being for a long term of years the teacher of a large class in the Sabbath school. Here in Tecumseh also she conducted a private school, of whose advantages many parents were glad to avail themselves. Here for some years she discharged with loving faithfulness the duty of caring for her invalid father. All the work she undertook was performed in such a quiet cheerful way as to convey the impression that it was easily done. Her pupils were always greeted with a pleasant smile and addressed in gentle tones even when her nerves were ready to give way on account of the strain placed upon them, and they always remembered her with affection after they ceased to be children and grew to the stature of men and women. An impression has been left by her on the mind and character of many of the youths of Tecumseh, which will never be entirely effaced. The secret of her attaching so many to herself as she did, was no doubt in part the naturally aimiable and refined disposition which she possessed. But above and beyond this it was her beautifully developed christian character which caused so many to trust and love her and which will cause her memory to be long cherished with affection and respect. It was both her natural virtues and her christian graces which caused her to be the recipient of so many spontaneous and tender ministrations in the time of her illness and on the occasion of her death. For all these tender ministrations a grateful brother and sister desire to express to those who rendered them their heartfelt thanks. W. H. B.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. feel very grateful for the excellent sermon given them by the Rev. Varner on the evening of the 9th, and wish we might often be encouraged in the same way. We feel that it was not alone for our good but strengthened and increased the interest in the great cause in the hearts of all who listened to it. The result was seven new members that night and more to come.

Build on the rock of all thats true,
Our door is open; my friend, we welcome you:
Our home is large and strong; our hearthstone wide;
Enter, my friend, and with thy friends abide.

Our mission is to help the weak against the strong.
Our hope to banish evil and to conquer wrong
To make this land of ours, so richly blessed,
A land of blessing, not a land oppressed.

No more the tyrant's power shall hold its sway
Nor rum its tolls collect in God's highway,
Its toll of broken hearts and blasted souls—
A thousand human wrecks its daily tolls!

Nor shall the powers of darkness rule the land,
And cast its withering blight on every hand—
Nor rob the people of the wealth of toil,
And claim they own the earth and all its soil.

A wakening race is rising from its sleep,
The goats are separating from the sheep—
A shepherd's hand can already be seen
To lead us to the hills and pastures green.

Fifty thousand children in one hundred and five schools were examined by English physicians. Over thirty per cent. were suffering from physical and mental defects attributed mainly to the drinking habits of their parents. Three million women in Spain can neither read nor write. Sixty-one women serve on school boards in the little state of New Hampshiae.

SHINGLING THE RUMSELLER'S ROOF

One night a poor wretch in a wayside saloon,
Who lingered half drunken about,
Heard the voice of the rumseller's wife, as she said,
"Go put yonder drunken fool out,"
The rumseller laughed as he shrewdly replied,
In tones that would brook no reproof,
"Let him stay, if he will; he's doing no harm;
The fellow is shingling our roof"
The months passed away, but he came not again,
The rumseller noted with pain,
And seeking him out with a hospitable air,
He begged bis "old friend" to explain,
"You want me to visit again your saloon,
And ask why I linger aloof?
With thanks for your kindness, allow me to say Because I am shingling my roof!"
—WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"I've got orders, positive orders, not to go there—orders that I dare not disobey," said a youth who was being tempted to enter a smoking and gambling saloon.

"Come, don't be so womanish; come along like a man," shouted the youths.

"No, I can't break orders," said John.

"What special orders have you got? Come, show 'em to us, if you can; show us your orders."

John took out a neat wallet from his pocket and pulled out a neatly folded paper. "It is here," he said, unfolding the paper, and showing it to the boys. They looked, and one of them read aloud: "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of wicked men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away,"

"Now," said John, "you see my orders forbid me going with you, they are God's orders, and by his help I dont mean to break them.

I had a severe attach of catarrh and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as I ever could, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases, catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1,000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh. A. E. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

GONE TO HIS FINAL REWARD.

The death of William Bresie, at the ripe age of 76 years, removes from the social and business circles of Tecumseh, one of our foremost citizens. But few men typified better than he the restless energy and activity of the western Pioneer, and his life was a long and eventful one. He was born in Tioga Co., N. Y., April 25, 1817, and when six years of age his father's family moved to Conesus, Livingston Co., N. Y., where the subject of this sketch lived for ten years, obtaining such a meagre education as the schools of those days afforded. At the age of seventeen he caught the prevailing western fever, and started for Buffalo afoot and alone. Upon arriving there he took a boat to Detroit and thence walked to Michigan City, Ind. Here he obtained work at driving stage and for about two years subsequently, he made his headquarters in Chicago. In the spring of 1839 he returned East, and upon the 20th of March in that year he married Mary A. Johnson of Groveland, Livingston Co., with whom he lived a most happy domestic life for over half a century. Soon after where he kept the village hotel for about six years. He then lived on a farm in Groveland for a time and from there moved to Dansville, Livingston Co, where he kept the Western Hotel for several years. In 1850 he moved to Hornellsville, Stouben Co., N. Y., and began work on the Buffalo and New York City R. R., now the N. Y. L. E. & W. Ry. He was employed first as baggage master and then as passenger conductor for a period of seven years on a run between Buffalo and Hornellsville. He then resigned to take a position with Mr. Geo. B. Gates, who was proprietor of the first sleeping car line—the first sleeping car having been put in use about 1858—and he served in this capacity for Mr. Gates during a period of ten years running on the N. Y. Central, the Buffalo and Erie and the Cleveland & Ashtabula railroads, the two latter now forming a part of the Lake Shore system. Mr. Bresie enjoyed the distinction of being the first regularly appointed sleeping car conductor. He was in several wrecks but always escaped unhurt. At the expiration of his ten years' service here he took charge of a sleeping car line between that city and Chicago. He then moved to Glenville, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland, where he dealt largely in real estate. While a resident of Glenville he became a pioneer in the operation of street railways. He obtained the right of way and the original charter of the St. Clair St. R. R. Co., a street car line running from the heart of Cleveland to Glenville. To encourage the enterprise the owners and citizens along the route donated the use of the line without rent, and he managed it very successfully for ten years. His property in Glenville increased very much in value and gave him a handsome competency.

In 1874 he moved his family to Tecumseh and took up his abode on forty acres of land just north of the village, which has made a model home for him during his declining years. His house was a historical landmark, being in an early day the homestead of Gen J. W. Brown, one of the founders of Tecumseh. Within its hospitable walls he celebrated his golden wedding on the 20th of March 1880, and here he passed the remainder of his earthly pilgrimage. For nearly twenty years he was a resident of this village. He served as township supervisor, as village councilman, and as janitor of the cemetery, in all of which positions he displayed the same business tact and ability which made his early life such a marked success. Four children blessed his married life: Wm. R. Bresie, of Decatur, Ill., Mrs. Elizabeth Crowell, of Cleveland, Mrs. Sarah Betts, of Edmore, and Amanda, who died at the age of three years. The three surviving children and the widow have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

Although he had always enjoyed rugged physical health, still his whitened locks betokened that he was surely approaching that goal to which all mortals tend. Early in April he went to Cleveland to visit his daughter, Mrs. Crowell, and while there was taken seriously ill. He recovered sufficiently to return home, but was taken worse upon his arrival and on Sunday evening, April 23d, he surrendered to the messenger, who summoned him to the other shore. The funeral obsequies were held at the family residence on Wednesday afternoon, April 26th, and were attended by a large concourse of friends, who assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed. The Baptist choir sang two beautiful selections, Rev. H. A. Smith spoke words of comfort to the mourners and his earthly remains were then consigned to the tomb in the same burial grounds, which had received the impress for so many months of his own supervising care. We shall all miss his genial salutation and hearty greeting, his family will miss his fatherly care and kindness, the community will miss an honored citizen, and his church will miss a generous hearted Christian. He has fought the good fight, he has finished his course, he has gone to that "sinless, stirless rest, that change which never changes."

Is backed with a guarantee of $500 for an incurable case. $1.00 bottles or trial samples free at Jno Orr's.

first three, those nations have no navies at all, or none to speak of, and the defense ships of China and Japan are never permitted to leave their own shores. Moreover, China and Japan do not specially desire to have their war ships inspected by other nations.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

The Importance of the Affair Greatly Diminished by the Early Date.

Had congress fixed a seasonable time of year for the review its importance would have been greatly increased. Twice the number of foreign ships might have been in attendance. In a "function" of this kind each of the leading maritime nations is largely influenced by the display that other navies make. For instance, Great Britain would have sent whatever ships were necessary to outshine the fleet of any other power. Similarly France and Russia certainly and Germany and Italy probably would have sent some of their most powerful ships if each knew that the other would be so represented.

Owing to the delay in getting the necessary appropriation from congress our government was unable to push preparations until the last moment, and as foreign nations could not be expected to take action any earlier than ourselves, no arrangements were definitely made until very recently.

Russia Set the Pace.

Now, in this matter a great deal depended on Russia. The sympathy of that nation for us in 1861-65 has been well remembered here, and whenever the warships of either nation have appeared in the waters of the other the occasion has been one of hearty welcome. If, therefore, Russia decided to send to our Columbian review a strong squadron of powerful ships Great Britain would be forced to outdo her; but if Russia sent only a meagre display of force Britannia could afford to rule the waves with a very much weaker detachment.

Russia's choice for the parade was one that showed a continuance of her warm regard for this country. Seven of her most powerful ships were detailed for duty in our waters and if they could have arrived here in time for the review Great Britain's big battle ships would have been found leading the foreign end of the parade. But alas! our worthy legislators made no change in the date assigned to the review in their bill, and in April it had to be held. Consequently the Russian armorclads, blocked in the Baltic by ice, could not be got away in time to take part in the review, and the Russian squadron that could be present was limited to a few light cruisers.

A Limited Representation.

That limitation set the keynote for all the other powers. England sent only one first-class ship—the Blake—and a few indifferently good cruisers; France only one more vessel than she sent to the naval parade last October; Germany a couple of modern cruisers and Italy one or two more than she had last fall.

But if Russia could have sent her seven stately battle ships, Great Britain could not have sent less than ten, the tricolor of France would have been seen on seven or eight. Germany would have had to keep step with her Gallic foe, and even Italy would have been forced to send something better than the Bausan and the Dogali.

AMERICAN NAVAL OFFICERS.

Rear Admirals Gherardi, Walker, Harmony and Benham.

Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, commanding the fleet, was made a lieutenant-commander in 1862; in 1863-1864 he successively commanded the gunboat Chocorua and the steamer Port Royal, and in the latter vessel took part in the battle of Mobile Bay, where he distinguished himself. He was promoted to a captaincy in 1874, was made commander in 1884, and became rear-admiral in 1887. In 1886 he succeeded Admiral Ralph Chandler as commandant at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and in February, 1889, was appointed to the command of the North American station.

Acting Rear-Admiral John Grimes Walker, whose flagship is the Chicago, saw service on the Atlantic coast blockade in 1861, in the steamer Connecticut; was transferred to the Winona in 1862, and participated in the blockade and capture of New Orleans, and in the subsequent operations against Vicksburg. He had command of the Baron de Kalb in 1862-1863, and after the fall of Vicksburg was in charge of the naval operations on the Yazoo river. He was made captain in 1877; was appointed chief of the Bureau of Navigation in 1881, and was promoted to the rank of commander in 1889. He was appointed to the command of the South America station in 1880.

Rear-Admiral David B. Harmony, whose flagship is the Philadelphia, served with distinction in the civil war. He took part in the capture of Mobile and its defenses, and commanded eight vessels in an expedition to Montgomery, Ala., in 1865. He became a captain in 1875, commodore in 1885, and rear-admiral in 1889. He was appointed chief of the Bureau of Docks and Yards in 1885, and assumed command of the Asiatic squadron in 1890.

Rear-Admiral A. E. K. Benham is the fourth ranking officer of the United States navy, and was appointed to the service in 1847 from the state of New York. His earliest services were in the East Indies and in the home squadron. In 1855 he was promoted lieutenant, and in 1860-61 was attached to the Crusader, of the home squadron. He took part in the battle of Port Royal, was attached to vessels performing blockading and cruising duties, and in 1862 received his promotion to lieutenant-commander. He served with the famous West Gulf blockading squadson, sharing its fortunes and participating in all its excellent work, and after the close of the war was detailed to the Susquehanna. In 1867 he was promoted to commander, and after duty at the navy yard, New York, and as lighthouse inspector, was ordered to the command of the monitor Canonicus, and subsequently of the monitor Saugus. After being promoted to [illegible] commanded the Richmond, on the Asiatic station, and when his cruise was done returned home, and was assigned to duty at the Portsmouth navy yard, and later to the command of the lighthouse district, New York, the most important assignment in that line. In 1885 he was made a commodore, and commanded the navy yard at Mare Island, and upon his promotion to the rank of rear-admiral was ordered to the command of the South American station.

THE NEW SANTA MARIA.

Almost an Exact Counterpart of the Original Caravel.

The new Santa Maria, counterpart of the caravel in which Columbus sailed, is 22.60 metres (74 feet 2 inches) long, and has 7.80 metres (25 feet 7 inches) breadth of beam. Her depth at the centre or main deck is 4.10 metres (13 feet 5 inches), which the high upper works increase to 4.90 metres (16 feet) at the bow, and 8.20 metres (96 feet 10 inches) at the stern. These measurements are believed to be those of the original caravel. It will be seen that the hull is short, narrow, and very high as compared with modern ships. The curves are also different from those of any ship built at the present time.

Two small anchors, relics of the time of Columbus, which have been preserved in the navy yard of Carraca are on board the caravel. Although they are in very good condition in spite of their four centuries of exposure, they are more for ornament than use.

The officers' quarters are in the upper part of the ship at the stern. The furniture of the commander's cabin is like that of the ancient ship, which was fully described by Columbus. It consists of a bed with the famous red curtains which were such a source of delight to the Indian chief Guacanagari, a wardrobe with drawers for maps and books, one armchair, two small chairs, and a little table at which two persons can dine.

THE DUKE OF VERAGUA.

Sketch of the Distinguished Descendant of Chistopher Columbus.

The Duke de Veragua, who, with other distinguished foreigners, came to this country to see the naval review and attend the World's fair, is the thirteenth in descent from Christopher Columbus, and for this reason alone is a notable man. But he is not one of those indolent beings who are content with ancestral honors. On the contrary, he is noted for his vigorous personality and for the originality of his views on those subjects to which he has given a lifetime of thought—namely, cattle breeding and agricultural improvements. Moreover, he is a statesman of no mean calibre and his opinion carries considerable weight in the liberal councils of Spain.

Though comparatively wealthy, the duke is by no means as rich as some of the older families of Spain. His income, much of which is derived from his extensive and well managed estate, is estimated at $50,000 a year, and this is small when compared with the incomes of a few very old families, whose ancestors were potentates when Christopher Columbus was unknown. The duke, however, is one of the greatest grandees in Spain, and the prestige which necessarily attaches to his descent from Columbus is very great.

The Ingham County Savings Bank, at Lansing, Closes Its Doors.

Confidence of the Directors Shaken Because of Troubles a Week or So Ago—They Brace Up and Declare That They Will Resume.

SUSPENDED BUSINESS.

LANSING, April 28.—The Ingham County savings bank has closed its doors. This is the bank on which the run began April 19. At that time Bank Commissioner Sherwood made a speech which calmed the excitement for the time. The closing of the bank was due to its inability to realize on securities, and to the severe shock given the confidence of the directors by last week's trouble. The directors met on Wednesday night and decided that it would be best to close the bank for a time. They attribute the bank's difficulties to the unsatisfactory condition of the money market as much as to the Barnes failure.

The directors declare that the bank is entirely solvent and there is ample evidence that this is so. None of the other banks have experienced any difficulties or unusual experiences of any kind during the day. The Ingham county bank had, according to its last report, made December 9, last, a capital of $50,000, surplus of the same amount, and $50,000 in undivided profits. Its deposits Wednesday night approximated $26,000.

Notwithstanding the bank's action there was no excitement in local banking circles. The citizens have confidence in the solvency of all the financial institutions of the city. The directors of the Ingham county bank realize that their decision not to open for business Thursday was entirely unwarranted, and are perfecting arrangements which will enable the bank to resume business not later than Thursday of next week. The bank has not rediscounted a dollar's worth of its paper, and with $250,000 worth of gilt-edged securities will probably experience no difficulty in securing the necessary currency.

Commissioner of Banking Sherwood has completed his examination of the Central Michigan savings bank, which closed its doors last week, and his statement shows the assets are sufficient to pay depositors in full, even though the Barnes paper should be wholly worthless, a contingency in no wise probable.

AT LANSING.

A Synopsis of the Business Transacted by the Legislature.

LANSING, April 21.—Gov. Rich sent to the senate a communication from the governor of Minnesota requesting the appointment of a commission of ten to cooperate with a like commission from each of the states to meet in convention and organize an interstate conference to consider the attitude and effect of the coal trust. It was referred to the committee on federal relations.

The house committee of the whole agreed to a bill setting apart the use of West Manistique lake, in the upper peninsula, for the purpose of experimenting upon the feasibility of the propagation of whitefish in the inland lakes. The senate committee of the whole agreed to a bill reenacting the old law providing for the election of presidential electors, which was in force when the Miner electoral law was enacted.

LANSING, April 25.—The world's fair bill appropriating $25,000 additional for the Michigan exhibit at the Columbian exposition passed the senate in the afternoon after it had been twice defeated there. The bill, as it passed the house, provided for the appropriation of $5,000. The house concurred in the senate amendment, however, so the bill as amended has gone to the governor.

Representative hall was given up to the opponents of the church taxation bill. Arguments against the passage of the bill were made by a number of ministers representing all denominations. John McAdam, of Detroit, spoke in favor of the bill.

A truce has been patched up between the warring political factions in the house, and today the Barkworth protest, which the democrats unsuccessfully sought to have the supreme court order spread on the journal, was received and will appear on the printed record.

LANSING, April 26.—After passing the world's fair appropriation bill of $25,000 yesterday both houses of the legislature endeavored to recall the measure for the purpose of making some amendments, with the apparent desire on the part of some of the members to kill the appropriation. The attempts of both houses failed, however, and the governor lost no time in affixing his signature to the bill, thereby placing it beyond recall. The senate passed the bill making Saturday afternoon a half-holiday.

The house passed the bill which permits Detroit to expend $200,000 for a contagious disease hospital, and makes the mayor, controller and members of the board of health the hospital commissioners. The money is to be borrowed and bonds issued therefor. There was a further hearing on the bill for the taxation of churches by the judiciary committee of the house.

LANSING, April 27.—After an animated discussion the senate passed the bill for the incorporation of lodges of Orangemen, amending it by providing that none but citizens of the United States shall be admitted as members of such institutions, and the purpose thereof shall not be repugnant to the constitution of this state nor the United States.

The house passed a bill appropriating $2,000 for the expenses of a commission to locate the position of Michigan troops on the battlefields of Chickamauga, Chattanooga and Mission Ridge, also a bill requiring the closing of barber shops on Sunday.

LANSING, April 28.—There is a probability that murderers will be hanged in Michigan. The house judiciary committee Friday made a favorable report on Representative Kline's bill to punish by hanging those convicted of murder in the first degree. There is a proviso that no sentence of death shall be imposed where the conviction is had wholly upon circumstantial evidence. In no case, however, shall the punishment for murder be less than confinement at hard labor for life. Considering how much those street bands practice every day it's a wonder they don't get to play better than they do.

As naturally results from taking Hood's Sarsaparilla as personal cleanliness results from free use of soap and water. This great purifier thoroughly expels scrofula, salt rheum and all other impurities and builds up every organ of the body. Now is the time to take it.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

It does the work. Mr. Chas. Gocha, of Gaylord, Mich., says: "I am asked 'did Brant's Balsam do you any good? Well, I should say it did! Can heartily recommend it; it's a great medicine." 25 and 50c bottles at Orr's drug store.

TO HORSEMEN AND BREEDERS.

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6, Reg. Vol.

1884. Bred by Glenview Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:25 without much work. He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. He had 19 sons and 18 daughters that had produced trotters in 1892. 31 of his sons and 25 of his daughters [illegible] he got so with records from 2:30 to 2:15 1-4. This is the best showing ever made by any sire, living or dead, to date. His sons and daughters produce early and extreme speed. His daughter, Manette is dam of Arion, 2-year old record 2:10 3-4, as a 3-year old 2:10 1-2; the fastest colt ever foaled, and sold for $125,000 cash. He made the season of 1892 for $2,500. Only one Stallion in the world produced at 4 years old a yearling colt that got a record below 2:30, and that is Woodline by Nutwood.

Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. Miss Russell is dam of Nutwood 2:18 3-4, Maud S. 2:08, 3-4, Rustique 2:21, Cora Belmont 2:24 1-2, Russia 2:28, and six sons that have produced extreme speed, also 4 daughters that produced speed. Lord Russell out of Nutwood's dam got Kremlin, 2:07 3-4 the acknowledged race horse stallion of the world.

Nutpatch's first dam, Patchen Maid, is the dam of Astral, 2:18, and Marshal Kiefer, sire of Mistake 2:29 3-4, etc.; she by Mambrino Patchen 58, brother to Lady Thorn 2:18 3-4, and sire of London, 2:20 1-2 and 28 others. Dams of Crawford (p) 2:09 3-4, Riley Medium (p) 2:10 1-2, Constantine 2:12 1-2, and 80 other standard performers; also grandsire of Nightengale 2:10 1-2, Walter E., 2:11 3-4, etc.; second dam Lady Eleanor, by Mambrino Chief 11, sire of Lady Thorn 2:18 1-4, 5 others, and dams of Director 2:17, Piedmont 2:17 1-4, Iona 2:17 1-2, and 21 other standard performers. Also sire of dams of 62 speed producing sires, including Red Wilkes, Almont, Belmont, etc.

TERMS—The terms have been placed at the very low figure of $25.00 for the season.

TO THE FARMERS OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

For the season of 1893 I wish to bring to your notice the great advantage you can derive during your harvest of hay and grain by the use of the latest improved and best harvesting machine in the world—made by Wm. Deering, of Chicago.

Here are a few reasons why you should buy a Deering:

1st—It has a jointed platform which when folded will allow the machine to pass through the same space as an ordinary buggy.

2nd—In ease of handling and lightness of draft it stands at the head.

3d—It never fails to tie, never chokes nor clogs, and uses less twine than any other competing machine.

4th—It needs no expert to understand its construction. It requires no bothersome tinkering.

5th—All running journals are mounted in brass boxes, insuring easy running and long wearing qualities.

6th—The levers are so easily adjusted that any boy can run the machine who can drive a team.

7th—No weight on the horse's necks, as the machine is rear geared.

8th—Best material only is used in the construction of the Deering which is guaranteed by one of the oldest and best known firms existing.

Furthermore this company make their own twine and are not in the combine. Much more may be learned by calling at my warehouse and looking at the machines always on hand. Can prove their merits.

Yours truly,

C. L. Albaugh.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines, as made for 1892, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

I am again in the field with a full line of the celebrated WALTER A. WOOD Machinery for 1893. See the list.

I ALSO SELL THIS SEASON THE

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER,

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground." We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crops and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peacful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

THE GLOBE MOWER NO. 8.

STRONG,
LIGHT,
SIMPLE,
DURABLE.

The Lift Spring and the Foot Lever are two advantages possessed by no other Mower.

Aside from the above cut which we introduce to illustrate the mechanical structure of these machines we feel that it is necessary to say very little. We claim for our "Globe," or No. 8, that it is the PEER OF ANY SINGLE SPEED MACHINE ON THE MARKET. No other Mower is built with so wide a truck as our 8. One advantage gained by the use of a wide truck is the reduction of vibration to the minimum. This will tell in the long life of the machine, and the user who has occupied the seat of a narrow truck Mower will instantly recognize the difference, and praise the wide trucks.

Call at our warehouse in Holloway and examine the "Globe."

THE DOCTOR.—"One layer of paper is bad enough, you have three here. Baby may recover but cannot thrive."

EVERYBODY knows that wall paper, with its vegetable paste and its colorings in animal glue, is unsanitary, and that to apply repeated layers of such is a very "nasty practice," as well as dangerous. Kalsomine is temporary, rots, rubs off and scales; paint stops "wall respiration" needed to purify walls. Send to us for a paper from Michigan State Board of Health report on this subject, recommending Church's Alabastine and plastico only for walls of dwellings.

Alabastine forms pure, permanent and porous coatings, and does not require to be taken off to renew from time to time; is a dry powder, ready for use by adding water (the latest make is used in COLD water and is never sold in bulk); can be easily brushed on by any one; made in white and twelve fashionable tints, and in three shades, from which decorators make the balance of forty shades shown on their card.

N. B.—It is not claimed that all who live within papered walls die much before their time, but they will enjoy better health with wall coatings (PPPP) Pure, Permanent, Porous and Pretty.

For Sale by Paint dealers everywhere.

American Gardening for May.

The contents of the May number are unusually varied and interesting. A timely article on spraying is given by men who ought to know all about it, and the preparation of mixtures for the purpose is also fully illustrated. Reforms in cemetery and school-yard gardening are again urged in a manner that is both entertaining and convincing. Besides some excellent plans for school gardens Mr. Long gives some bright glimpses of Golden Gate Park, California, by means of pen and camera. A number of writers help us to keep pace with the evolution of fruits and flowers, some of the best new varieties and types being well described. G. A. Woolson's "Development of a Pine Stump," and his presentation of it as an ornamental factor will help many a home gardener to make beautiful some homely object.

Have you looked at your apple orchards? Those we have examined have very few fruit buds, but peach, pear, plum and cherry trees are full of buds.

What ails the wheat? It looks very much like the answer of the eccentric Peter Cartright, when asked if he had attained the blessing of sanctification, and replied, "yes; in spots."

Between one and two thousand pounds of milk are carried through Pentecost each day to the Elgin butter factory at Wolf Creek, and now the cry is for butter, for all the milk goes to the factory and all the butter goes to the large cities, so the small dealers can hardly get enough for the retail trade.

A PURE FOOD BILL

Before The Michigan Legislature.

"A bill for the preservation of the public health, and to provide against fraud and adulteration in food, drink and drugs," has been introduced in the Legislature at Lansing, by Mr. Newkirk. This bill is intended to prevent the adulteration of food and drink, and should it become a law, would no doubt go a great way toward protecting the public against the manufacturers of Alum and Ammonia baking powders. The leading medical authorities everywhere condemn the use of Alum in baking powders.

The Chicago Tribune, refering to the question of legislation on Alum and Ammonia baking powders, says: "It deals in a direct manner with an evil that must be cut down."

Following is a partial list of the names of the brands sold in this state that have been examined and found to contain either Alum or Ammonia. Many of the Alum and Ammonia powders are labeled and advertised as "absolutely pure" in order to mislead the public:

Kenton, Calumet, Chicago Yeast, Grant's Bon Bon, Hotel, Forest City, Silver Star, Monarch, Rocket, Home, Perfection, Unrivaled, Town Talk, Loyal, Snow Ball, Climax, Western Prince, Crown, White Cross, Fos Fon, Imperial.

In addition to the above list there is a multitude of brands sold with a prize. It is safe to reject all baking powders sold with a prize as the tests show they are composed largely of Alum and cost but a few cents a pound. Also refuse any baking powder sold for twenty-five cents a pound, or less; it is sure to contain Alum.

Surely nothing but their cheapness could induce the public to experiment with unwholesome baking powders, at the risk of health. Aside from the question of health or wholesomeness, and viewed from the standpoint of economy alone, a pure grape cream of tarter baking powder like "Dr. Price's" from its greater known strength and unquestioned purity will prove more economical to the user in every way.—Lansing Journal.

The McKinley bill is a failure even from McKinley's own standpoint, for imports are still increasing in spite of its extraordinary rates.

The musicians at the World's Fair are in a tangle. It was bound to come sooner or later, but the crisis has arrived earlier than was anticipated.

Ingersoll says there will be no more political contests fought in this country on the record of parties during the war. But there are a good many coming on the record of the Republican party since the war.

The President of the Whisky Trust refuses to tell how much he has contributed to campaign funds. All the trusts seem to feel it their interest to shield the Republican party as much as possible.

"It will cost you 15 cents just the same," are the reported words of a New York druggist when he was told that the use of his telephone was desired in a case of life or death. Of course the 15 cents was paid.

Gov. Pennoyer may be a fine example of wild Western candor, but even the Western man is expected to conform himself to the amenities of official intercouse when he is representing a commonwealth.

The Wall street conspiracy to force the administration to borrow gold and issue bonds therefor has miscarried. Secretary Carlisle is running the treasury department at present, and is likely to continue doing so.

During the New York "stringency" the other day, some of the brokers who were being crowded had to pay the banks as high as 40 per cent for temporary loans. They ought to like the gold basis and to be devoted to the Scarce Money idea.

Next Sunday the World's Fair grounds will be thrown open to visitors at one half price, twenty-five cents, but the buildings will remain closed. It seems likely now that the vexed question of Sunday opening will be settled in this manner permanently.

Thomas Bracket Reed is in Louisville in the lightning rod business. But he might as well retire from it. The next President of the United States will be a Western man. There is no possible doubt of it. It will be many along year before any one from the Northeast corner will get into the White House again.

The New York Tribune ventures to predict that Chicago will take good care of its guests, if they will only consent to take reasonably good care of themselves, and that its reputation for hospitality will be still greater and more extended than its reputation for energy and thrift before the summer is half over.

Louisville is not a suitable place for holding a great Republican convention. The people there are so hostile to the Republican party that they have allowed a local ring to rob them for years rather than effect a reform with the aid of Republican votes. They will drink with a Republican, or bet with him, but vote with him—never!

If the Prohibitionists are to make any headway in Philadelphia it stands them in hand to help along the movement in that city for an improved water supply. A correspondent of "The Philadelphia Press" complains that the current supply of drinking water is "nasty, beastly stuff," and even the most radical of the Prohibitionists may well decline to drink that sort of beverage. Water to be popular must be truly good.

The Tribune continues to repeat the false statement that "Secretary Carlisle expressed at one time a determination to redeem the Government obligations in silver." Secretary Carlisle never expressed any such determination, though the Republican Silver-Purchase law gives him discretion to redeem in silver and provides for coining the Treasury bullion for that purpose. The same organ berates the Democrats for not repealing the Sherman act, though it knows that the bill repealing it would have passed the House at the last session if thirty-four Republicans had not voted against the proposition on a test vote; simply to leave an embarrassing legacy to the incoming Democratic Administration.

TAX REFORM DEPARTMENT.

(This department aims to give everybody's ideas about taxation (not tariff). Write your opinions briefly, and they will be published or discussed in their turn by the editor or by a member of the Taxation Society. Address, "Taxation Society," this office or P. O. Box 88, Buffalo, N. Y.)

Tax Laws Should Not Discriminate Against Corporations.

In every scheme of taxation proposed by the farmers, stock corporations have been the target at which all the darts have been hurled. While professedly no difference has been made between corporate capital and individual or firm capital so far as general taxation is concerned, yet the requirements of them as to an exhibition of the affairs of their business for the purposes of assessment are such as to be absolutely inquisitorial, and would not for a day be tolerated by the people if required of individuals or firms. Such requirements might perhaps be properly made when they are for safeguards to the public as to the financial responsibility of corporations; but in the proposed tax they are only for the purpose of getting at evey dollar of property for the purposes of taxation, while the individual or firm is in no wise interrogated on such matters. The result is that every corporation covered by the tax bills is brought to strict account, while capital employed by individuals or firms, even though it be just as large, may go absolutely free according to the diligence or caprice of the assessor.

The corporation is but an aggregation of individuals associated together under a statute for the purposes of business, and it seeks to add to the sum total of wealth to the state and to its individual shareholders in the same manner that the efforts of a firm or individuals do. Why then ought they to be discriminated against and heavier burdens be imposed on them than on capital employed in other ways? In theory there may be no discrimination, but the merest tyro in business knows that such is the practical result. The result will be that corporate capital will be driven from the state and will be employed elsewhere, and the state will be the loser of the wealth that otherwise would be created within its limits.

It has always been the policy of the state to encourage manufacturing and business corporations, consequently every community has seen many of its old and successful business houses reorganized under the corporate laws of the state and thus the business saved to the community from disintegration, which would have resulted in the event of the death of its founder and financial head. Is it just that such corporations should be treated other than their competitors who may be doing business under the copartnership laws?

A New Yorker's Suggestion.

As a frequent visitor to Baltimore on business from New York, and interested in the effort that is being made here, as in my own state, to introduce broad economic principles in the levying of taxes, permit me to call attention, in view of your reference to our work in your able editorial to-day, to the fact that, strangely as it may seem to some, it is mainly the real estate interest in the city of New York which is urging the bill in our legislature for local option in the matter of taxes. It is done with the view of making real estate shoulder all the taxes, and doing away altogether with personal taxation; the hoped-for gain being in a general advance of the city's prosperity. This would, it is believed, react to the advantage of real estate owners in the end, by establishing a place where capital can come and be unmolested; a place where the farce of trying to collect a personal tax will not be enacted; a tax which always has and, in the nature of things, always will, be unequally distributed, a tax which does not stay where it is put, but passes on till it reaches the consumer, except in the few instances where it is at once laid on property in the home of the consumer. Even here, however, it has the disadvantage, to the extent of the sum drained from him, of preventing him from gratifying his never-ending desire for more property, and which this demand would call into being, of course, for his use, or that of others.

Baltimore is making an effort to induce capital to take advantage of her natural resources, which are so great. Is not this the most promising way for her to secure it? Or, will she let New York, with less natural advantages, all told, get ahead of her again because of being first to adopt a principle of political economy that may be said to be established—the inexpediency of taxing personal property.

Of course, you can do nothing in this way with the Maryland Declaration of Rights confronting you. But with that, as with a bad law, it is best, as you seem to hint, to make it odious by carrying it into effect to the letter.—Henry L. Hinton, in Baltimore News.

How You Pay

"Jersey City, Hoboken, and all the Jersey coast are growing more rapidly than they ever grew before, filling up with people who want to live in New York and can't find room, and are scared away from Brooklyn by its fearfully high taxes. Not only is every tax payer and rent payer in Brooklyn interested in this matter, but every real estate owner, every real estate agent, building material man, carpenter, plumber, mason, bricklayer, and every other person in any way connected with the building of houses, stores, and flats, is vitally interested in this."—Edw. C. Graves.

Taxes for Free Lunch.

If our aldermen can not have champagne and turtle soup at the expense of the people on the day of the naval parade, then are the traditions of the service indeed fallen into innocuous desuetude. What are taxes levied and collected for?—Morning Advertiser.

Suburban Mortgages.

My attention is called to a mistake I made two weeks ago when, speaking of the mortgage indebtedness of Connecticut, I drew the inference that the cities were the first to feel the effects of the transfer of land from the many to the few. I hastily inferred this from the fact that the increase in mortgages in Connecticut is almost entirely confined to the debts on city lots. My critic says:

"I do not think this a fair inference from the premises. When free and clear suburban lands are cut up they are almost always mortgaged by purchasers for purchase money or improvements. I think this would account for much and the great modern buildings for most of the rest of the increase."

On reflection I think he is quite right. It is the country districts that feel the strain first, although there is more dire poverty in the cities. The very fact which I mentioned in the same paragraph, that people are abandoning their farms rather than pay the taxes is evidence of this. No one is abandoning city property. This would go to show that farm lands are overtaxed, while city land owners, even with the added burden of mortgages, are undertaxed.

Another inference is that relief from taxation on personal property and products—the lessening of taxes on labor—when it comes, will first benefit the farmers, who are now the very ones to cry out against such relief.

Most of the opposition, even to such bills as Mr. Farquhar's, which simply provide for home rule in taxation, comes from the country districts because the farmers somehow have a superstition that the sharp city folks are trying to get the best of them, and evade a fair share of the state taxes. I do not know that they are very much to blame. They have not such opportunities of knowing each other's thoughts as in the cities where exchange of ideas, rapid communication of though and a press teeming with literature of all kinds, even such papers as the Advance adding their mite, give better facilities for education.—T. B. Preston.

Defying Natural Laws.

A man who boasted of his practical, matter-of-fact way of looking at any question submitted for his opinion, was asked what he thought regarding the possibility of inventing a perpetual motion machine. With fine scorn for the visionary theorists who maintain that since action and re-action are equal and opposite, perpetual motion is an absurdity, he replied: "It is evident that if a siphon can draw water from a cask into a barrel it can also draw it back again. Therefore, it is only necessary to utilize the force of the running water, in order to operate a machine for an indefinite period."

When the theorists laughed at him, he at once proceeded to demonstrate the truth of his assertion by taking hold of his bootstraps and lifting himself off the floor.

A farmer, who was a practical man, taking no stock in theories of taxation which did not agree with his "common sense," devised a method by which all the farmers would escape paying taxes. His plan was the very simple one of putting all taxes on personal property. When a tax theorist told him that since taxes on capital hampered industry, decreased the farmer's markets, and increased the price of the goods he bought, such a system would hurt the farmer more than it would help him, he said: "That's all well enough in theory, but it won't work that way in practice."

When last heard of he was trying to make a brook on his farm run up-hill.

Strange Shrinkage of Values.

This is about the time of year when the annual decline in the value of personal property sets in. The assessor will soon be abroad in the land, and diamond headlights will disappear from expansive shirt fronts. Gold watches will be sent to the watchmaker's for repairs, and silver turnips will take their places for the assessor's benefit. Horses worth a thousand dollars will have a very haggard look while the assessor is around and show up on the tax roll as worth $22.27, while $500 pianos will slump to $21.18. The man who hesitates or fears to swear himself poor when the assessor calls is a very rare bird indeed. What nonsense our recent tax laws are. Ever since the birth of civilization tax assessors have been trying to find personal property, and have failed utterly and completely. They are still trying to find it, and they are still failing. They never have found it and they never will.—The Courier, St. Louis, Mo.

From an Interview in the N. Y. Evening Post.

The New York Tax Reform Association believes that trust companies, or any other concerns, should be taxed only for such special privileges as they enjoy. We can see no reason why personal property or money should be taxed any more when held by a company than when owned by an individual. Where a private individual or company has special privileges granted them by the government, we think they should pay a tax representing a fair value.

"Tax not thou the things which come in or go out of the valleys, for thereby the people of the valley are made poor; tax not the cloaks which cover their nakedness, nor the food which satisfieth their hunger; for if thou taxest such many shall suffer in the blast, and many shall die of "hunger made by the laws." For these the children of the poor shall "do without."

Haven't the Farmers' Alliance or the State Grange Some Good Ideas on Taxation?

The personal property taxationists are a little backward about coming forward in these columns. Don't be shy, speak up, we are waiting to hear your side, including comments on the populist taxation planks.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the Liver be inactive you have a Bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a Dyspeptic look, and if your Kidneys be affected you have a Pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and tonic which acts directly on these vital organs. Cures Pimples, Blotches, Boils and gives a good complexion. Sold at J. J. Orr's drug store, 50c. per bottle.

"I see Lamport has offered his house for sale. Doesn't it suit him?" "Yes, but he lunched three times at the Fair, and he hadn't anything left.

If ever a man feels like a poor worm of the dust it is when he suffers from that tired feeling. Ayer's Sarsaparilla removes this discouraging physical condition, and gives life and energy to every nerve, tissue, muscle and fibre of the whole body.

Recovers His Speech.

Alphonce Hemphling, of Summitt township, Butler Co., Penn'a made an affidavit that his twelve-year-old son, who had St. Vitus Dance for twelve years, lost his speech, was completely cured after using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and recovered his speech. Thousands testify to wonderful cures from using it for nervous diseases, dyspepsia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, headache, etc. Four doses of this Nervine cured Mrs. W. E. Burns, South Bend, Ind., who had been suffering with constant headache for three months. Sold by Baker & Hall.

The Modern Invalid

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

Mrs. Newed (anxiously): Well, what do you think of my biscuits, dear? Are they good?, Newed: Good! I'm sure if they were to be weighed in the balance not one of them would be found wanting.

Strength and Health.

If you are not feeling strong and healthy, try Electric Bitters. If the grippe has left you weak and weary, use Electric Bitters. This remedy acts directly on the liver, stomach and kidneys, greatly aiding those organs to perform their functions. If you are afflicted with sick headache you will find speedy and permanent relief by taking Electric Bitters. One trial will convince you that this is the remedy you need. Large bottles only 50c. at J. J. Orr's drug store.

Do not wear impermeable and tight-fitting hats that constrict the blood-vessels of the scalp. Use Hall's Hair Renewer occasionally and you will not be bald.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning N. Y.

Running Sore on the Face.

Vinnie Davis

Constantine, Mich.

"I cannot tell in this letter all that Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for us, but can say this much: Our son Vinnie had a running sore on his face, beginning on one side and moving under his chin to the other side. We tried every thing to cure it, but no help came, and for four long years it continued, unsightly and very troublesome. Several persons urged us to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we found that he improved while taking the first bottle. We kept on giving it to him until he had taken four bottles. The sore has entirely healed up, nothing remaining but the scar, which he will carry all his life. He is sound, strong and healthy, and we give all the praise to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MR. and MRS. G. DR. A. OWEN:

Dear Sir—I take pleasure in stating that the Owen Electric Belt purchased from you last May has been worth more than all the medicines in the world to me. On the 27th of January, 1892, I was taken with La Grippe and from that to nervous prostration of the stomach and spine, the latter complaint, exfoliation of the lungs and constipation. About this time I went to consult the above named doctor in the county for treatment. I stopped at my mother's home on my return, as my present condition was so great that I could not reach my own home which I dearly loved. My mother is a widow, married wife of six months and had kept house only four months. My hopes seemed all blasted, as I gradually failed under the care and treatment and nursing by my kind and willing brother and mother, one of the best of mothers. I could not get up or be moved, so my husband sold his farm and turned all of his attention to me. Time passed, and I suffered more than tongue can tell. I could eat nothing to speak of, and what I did eat hurt my stomach. At times I seemed to die, and then I would get worse. I remained in this condition about sixteen months, or up to the time I purchased your Belt. Then I commenced to improve at once, and life has been brighter since. My husband has purchased another farm and we commenced to keep house on Thanksgiving Day, and I have done our work with my husband's help ever since. Before I purchased Owen Electric Belt I of your Belts I could hardly stand on my feet. May God bless you, as the means of saving my life and giving me health and strength to live and enjoy life with my husband once more. I cannot say enough for your Belt if I should write for a day. My sudden improvement caused a good deal of excitement, as the doctors and everyone around said I would die of consumption. I can eat my three meals every day. If you wish to publish this letter you will answer all correspondents who wish to inquire fully about my case, by sending directed and stamped envelope.

Yours very truly,

MR. EDWIN and HATTIE McGOWAN, KEELERSVILLE, Mich.

DR. A. OWEN:

Dear Sir—Six months has passed since I wrote my first testimonial letter in praise of your Electric Belt. I cannot say enough for your Belts. I have been improving rapidly since I first wore you the first letter six months ago. Now I am able to do my work, and this week I rode 22 miles to Thunder Knob on the banks of Lake Michigan, camped out over night, and came back the next day over hills and rough roads, 44 miles in all, through the hot sun. I could not have done the same one year ago for the wealth of Michigan. My health has improved so rapidly that others are waking up to the idea that the Owen Electric Belts are the only means by which they can be cured.

I remain as ever your friend, HATTIE H. McGOWAN.

A Friend

Wishes to speak through the Register of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are

"Between the ages of five and fifteen, I was troubled with a kind of saltrheum or eruption chiefly on the legs, and especially to the bend of the knee above the calf. Here, running sores formed which would scab over, but would break immediately on moving the leg. My mother tried everything she could think of, but all was without avail. Although a child, I read in the papers about the beneficial effects of Ayer's Pills, and persuaded my mother to let me try them. With no great faith in the result, she procured and I began to use them, and soon noticed an improvement. Encouraged by this, I kept on till I took two boxes, when the sores disappeared and have never troubled me since."—H. Chipman, Real Estate Agent, Roanoke, Va.

"I suffered for years from stomach and kidney troubles, causing very severe pains in various parts of the body. None of the remedies I tried afforded me any relief until I began taking Ayer's Pills, and was cured."—Wm. Goddard, Notary Public, Five Lakes, Mich.

HIS ROOMMATE.

How He Ruined an Honest Young Lawyer's Reputation.

I am a plain, honest lawyer, and, before a certain young man moved into my double office, my reputation was spotless. He moved in for the ostensible purpose of sharing the expense of rent. He was a nice-looking young man and had a fair exterior. The day following his arrangement with me he moved in. That is, he appeared in person. Otherwise he did not have much to move. But poverty is no crime and I took a fancy to him on account of his principles. It is so pleasant to meet some one nowadays with principles. He had plenty of them and it did me good to listen to him. "A lawyer," he would say, "has no right to defend a criminal when he is guilty," and, although I did not agree with him, I respected his extreme virtuous and congratulated myself upon having such a righteous roommate. There was a marked peculiarity about our being in the same office together. People said that we resembled each other in personal appearance, which I construed as a compliment to me.

He worked up a good business at once, for only a week after he entered the office he had a case. Other cases followed, and at the same time singularly enough my practice decreased. When the first month's rent was due he hit me on the back in his hearty, familiar fashion and said: "You pay this month, old man, and I will next." As that was fair I did so. One day when alone in the office I was pondering upon the vicissitudes of fate and the scarcity of fees when a man rushed into the office in an unceremonious manner and stood glaring at me. Rejoiced over what seemed to be the immediate prospect of a client in pursuit of a dishonest partner or a wife who had eloped, I assumed a soft, insinuating smile and politely waved him to a chair. My courteous invitation was declined and the man, taking a step nearer, exclaimed: "Scoundrel!"

I presumed that he was referring to some one who had injured him and from whom he desired redress in the courts, and so laughed in a conciliatory manner.

"Come, come, my dear sir, you must not give way in this manner," I said. "Calm yourself, I beg of you."

"Ah, you dare jest?" he cried. "But you shall settle with me, sir. Do you know Maggie Klien?"

It chanced that I did know the young woman, who lived in our neighborhood. I responded in the affirmative, and added something about her being a very charming girl. "And now, sir," I said tartly, "will you tell me who you are?"

He drew himself up as though about to impart startling information. "I am Maggie's best fellow, or at least I was before you came along and alienated her affections from me."

"What?"

"Alienated her affections."

"I?"

"You! The corner grocer told me all about it; how you used to meet Maggie every night near his store and take her to the theater and other places. Maggie was contented enough until you came along, and then I began to see a change that I couldn't account for until the grocer told me about you, and now I am going to wipe the floor with you."

I started to argue the matter with him in my most persuasive professional style, but he resorted to the tactics of the ring and proceeded to carry out literally his last statement. My sensations the next few moments were those of a man falling from a balloon or going through a thrashing machine. When I recovered he had departed; my coat was torn; a chair was broken; pens, papers and books were scattered here and there, and the office looked as though it had been struck with a cyclone. "Upon my word," I thought, raising myself on my elbow in the corner of the room, "a strange visitor!" When my roommate came in he expressed the greatest sympathy, and so genuine were his words of consolation that I seized his hand gratefully and said: "Thanks, dear boy, thanks! You are a friend indeed."

After that mishaps came thick and fast. I seemed to be a special mark for the cruel shafts of fate. One day a gentleman whom I had never seen before came into the office and accused me of having cheated him at a game of poker. His claim was that I had two aces in my sleeve. Now, as I never play poker nor gambled in my life, this was remarkably strange. I told him that the festive game had no attractions for me, and he stared at me in amazement. He admitted that he was rather "under the shadow of the vine" the night before, but that his perceptions were perfectly clear, and that I had beyond a doubt swindled him in a gentleman's game out of one hundred and fifty-seven dollars, which I had better return at once. I retorted that I did not know a flush from a full and I had never sat in a jack-pot in my life, at which he looked unutterable scorn.

"Then you refuse to return your ill-gotten gains?" he asked.

"I certainly do."

"Very well; you will hear from me."

And I did. The story got around that I played a crooked game of poker, and, although I carried myself with the bearing of a man who is innocent, I could see that I was regarded with suspicion. Even the young lady whose company I was keeping at the time apparently knew something, for one night she said with a twinkle in her eye: "Do you play poker, Tom?" Of course I denied that I did, at which she looked grave, and added: "Pshaw! What's the use in denying it? Why, do you know, I—I play sometimes myself."

Naturally I expressed my horror at this confession and told her that I hoped she would reform and that I did not approve of young girls playing cards. Then she actually winked. "Oh, you are too good," she remarked. "Say, how do you do it?"

"What?"

"Keep those cards up your sleeve? Please tell me. The girls have been winning all my spending money lately and I want revenge. Show me the trick, Tom, and I'll marry you next June." I responded indignantly and told her that I was a member of the Anti-Poker society. She said "Bosh," and when I got up to leave she refused to permit me to cull from her sweet lips the customary parting salute. The misguided young woman actually thought that I was trying to conceal my iniquities from her. But there was worse to follow. A few nights later when I called she greeted me with marked coolness. This I attributed to mere feminine caprice and so chatted away in a happy manner about various matters to which she listened with a sarcastic smile upon her adorable face. But I was accustomed to doing most of the talking and she the listening, so that her persistent silence did not seem at all remarkable. Among other topics I broached was a description of a temperance meeting I had attended a few nights before. I am a teetotaler in every sense of the word and I stated proudly that I had been elected secretary of the new organization. Then her pretty mouth assumed an expression of scorn.

"Oh, you hypocrite!" she cried.

"My darling!" I cried, in amazement.

"Don't call me your darling!" she retorted, with flashing eyes. "I've had a talk with papa and he says everything must be off."

"Everything off?"

"Yes, our engagement." He saw you last night. He said that you"—sob—"were standing on the street corner"—sob—"with your hat in your hand"—sob—"holding the lamp post with the other"—sob—"and singing about"—sob—"'We won't go home till morning'"—sob.

I started in amazement. "My dear Lucinda, there is some horrid mistake. Last night I attended a meeting at our Sunday school and—"

Here she wiped away the tears and assumed her indignant attitude once more. "Don't make me hate you," she said. "Why don't you confess and—well, I know boys will be boys, and, if you said you would never do it again, why, perhaps, I might overlook this one fault and—and forgive you—"

I sprang to my feet in anger. "I have been slandered and—"

"Is that your reply?" she asked, frigidly.

"It is."

"Then there is nothing more to be said."

With that she took the ring from her pretty finger and handed it to me.

"Good evening, sir."

I bowed myself out in despair. So all was over? Those visions of a neat little home were lost forever. The next morning when my roommate presented himself I fancied that he looked tired and sleepy. He explained this by saying that he had been up all night with a bad headache. He noticed my melancholy appearance, and, when I told him all about it, he again offered his sympathy and remarked in a jocular manner: "Never mind, my boy. There are just as good fish in the sea as have ever been caught." I told him there was only one Lucinda, but he shrugged his shoulders. He then went out to attend a case in court, and I seated myself in a disconsolate manner in my easy chair in the inner office. I had slept little to speak of the night before and nature asserted itself in spite of my heartache. I dozed off. After a time I was aroused by voices in the outer office and heard a woman ask for me.

"He is not in," was the reply of my roommate, and I was about to step out when a few words that followed arrested my attention and I remained where I was, listening: "If you have come on legal business, madam, I will answer your purpose just as well. I am authorized to act for him. I am his partner as you see by my name on the door." His words filled me with amazement. "Be seated, madam, and state your case." The visitor did so and he listened with the greatest complacency, offering a suggestion here and there and occasionally asking a question. When she had finished, he remarked: "I think you have a good case." In this I knew he was wrong. The case was a bad one and no conscientious lawyer would have touched it.

"Then would you advise me to take the matter to the courts?" she asked.

"I would. It would be foolish to settle."

When she was about to leave she asked: "What are your charges?"

"Twenty-five dollars retainer fee and fifty more if we win."

She took out her purse and gave him the money. "You are really to be congratulated, madam, that you found me in instead of my partner," he continued. "He is one of those scrupulous lawyers who always lose their cases. Now I always win because I am full of resources. Ha, ha! I am just smart enough to dodge all technicalities. That partner of mine is such a conscientious idiot that I think I shall have to break with him. I hate to do it, for the poor fellow would not make a living if I—"

Here I broke in upon them. The scene that followed I forbear description, as writers say, and so I will not describe it. Now I understood why my practice had decreased. It also flashed across my mind that all my trouble lately was in some way connected with him. We looked alike—and I saw everything! For a month I had been paying the penalty of his misdeeds. I had been vigorously handled by Maggie's best fellow on his account; it was he whom the father of my Lucinda had seen holding up the lamp post; the principal figure in the gentlemanly game of poker had been this exemplary young man. I rushed into the outer office, and, after a vigorous scene, this young man took his departure and I have never heard of him since. It was six months, however, before I again won the regards of Lucinda. I have an office all to myself. Even now people are running there with bills contracted by him and somehow they look upon me as his partner in crime.—Omaha Bee.

Because the alleged steel wheels put out by inexperienced manufacturers have gone down in ordinary winds, a feeling has grown that the Steel Wheel is unsafe. Judge it only by the Aermotor.

In this year's blizzards and cyclones the Aermotor loss is proportionately much less than any wooden wheel, while the loss of the imitation steel ones has frequently been total.

45 sold in '88
2,288 sold in '89
6,268 sold in '90
20,049 sold in '91
60,000 will be sold in '92

GALVANIZED It is not enough to make portions of the wheel galvanized, as the cogs and braces are now galvanized after punching, thus absolutely protecting the steel where it is exposed edges and is not so well protected from decay.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermotor. Where one goes others follow, and we "Take the Country." Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing we manufacture exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relative to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO. 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

THE MAY PARTY.

The morning of May 12th dawned cloudy and unpromising, and during the day the sunshine and rain contended vigorously for the mastery, with honors much in favor of the latter; therefore when Wolfe's orchestra began playing the opening strains for the May party concert the galleries were not crowded as we have been in the habit of seeing them on like occasions. However, those who braved the storm were well repaid by the finest efforts of a fine orchestra. At the conclusion of the concert, the dancers filed onto the floor and under the guidance of Capt. Hayden and Miss Hatch, executed the ever changing movements of the Grand March. The last notes of the march had scarcely ceased when the music of the waltz "After the Ball" floated to the ears of the guests, and the evening's pleasures had virtually begun.

As the couples took their places for the march, neat programs of the dance were distributed, and at the conclusion of the opening waltz, all was activity. Programs were hastily being filled, presentations made, and greetings with visiting guests exchanged.

The rear of the stage had been tastily arranged as a dining room, the walls being draped with orange bunting and trimmed with willow branches and mirrows, and furnished with antique oak sideboards and tables. Separating the dining room from the front stage was a screen of Juniper branches and flowers. At eleven o'clock refreshments were served, after which the dance again commenced and lasted until the early hours of the morning.

The decorations in the main hall were not as elaborate nor striking as at some of the previous events but showed a simple and tasty beauty, a new feature of the arrangement being the willow screen, enclosing the entire front of the stage. Although the attendance was not large everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, and the general verdict was that the May party of '93 was an unqualified success.

The following guests from abroad honored the occasion by their presence: Misses Wise and Davis and Messrs. Ingram and George, of Ypsilanti; Miss Hatch, Mr. Meade, Miss Mary Burridge, and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Adams of Ann Arbor; Mr. Hodges, of Jackson; Miss Stevens and Mr. Kennedy, of Clinton; Mrs. Fred Montgomery, of Chicago; Miss Corey, of Quincy; Misses Bray, Wilcox, Lyons and Powers, Messrs Gorman, Hawley and Auchampaugh, of Adrian.

SAFE CRACKING.

Last Friday evening, while the May Party was in full blast, the outlaw gentry were out getting in their nefarious work in the village. The strong box in the office of H. Brewer & Co.'s brick and tile machine foundry was blown open and the cracksmen secured about $35 in cash and a quantity of checks and drafts which will be worthless to them. The safe door was blown off with some powerful explosive and the lock torn to pieces and scattered in all directions. The tools used were secured from Richart's wagon shop, and with these an entrance was made through one of the windows. As no watchman is employed and the plant is some distance from any residence the burglars were in no way hampered by fears of being disturbed, although several people claim to have heard the explosion, but labored under the delusion that one of the late and frequent celebrations was in progress.

There seems to be no clue to the perpetrators, but as this is the second safe blowing scrape, coupled with several attempts at housebreaking and depot cleaning during the past three or four months, circumstances point strongly to local talent, or at least not imported from any great distance.

An Electric Railway.

Application was made to the village council Monday evening for the right of way and franchise for the purpose of building an electric railway connecting the towns of Adrian, Tecumseh and Clinton. The projector of the enterprise says: "We ask nothing of Tecumseh but a franchise and the right of way through the village, so the question of its being a paying enterprise is not one of financial interest to any but the company. Philadelphia capital already at our command builds the road, and the road is what we want."

The proposition to the council provides that unless the road is completed within two years, the company forfeit their rights. The decision of the council was deferred until the first Monday in June.

The route through the village would be as follows: Beginning at the C. J. & M. depot, thence north on Maumee street to Chicago street, thence west to Evans street, north to the Lake Shore depot and return to Chicago street, thence west to Adrian street and south to the corporation line.

Mr. Nesmith informs us that the old Saline road bed will not be used, as has been stated, but an entirely new route will be laid out.

Frederick Willis Merritt.

We clip the following from the Cloverdale, Cal., Reveille of May 6th.

Died, at the residence of J. A. Kleiser, Clovervdale, on Sunday, April 30, 1893, Frederick Willis Merritt, age 74 years.

Frederick Willis Merritt, was born in New York State, Jefferson county, Sept. 14, 1819. With his parents moved into the then territory of Michigan when he was 5 years of age. He lived in that State, in different parts, 52 years. Married Sarah Jane Ayers, Aug. 1, 1849. Six children, 4 are dead, and 2—Mrs. Chas. L. Ingram, of Lake county, and Frank W. Merritt with the mother survive him. Three brothers living in the east also survive him.

He came to Cloverdale in December, 1876, having come from the east the preceding spring.

He has always been a very active man with pioneer characteristics. There are five bearing orchards today in the [illegible] him—the land taken from the virgin State.

He lived for many years in Hillsdale, Michigan, prior to his coming to Cal., where he has many old time friends.

During the residence of the decoased in this vicinity he so conducted himself as to gain the esteem and universal respect of all. For a number of years he was toll-keeper on the Geyser road, but since the road was declared a public highway he and his faithful wife have had charge of the country home of Mr. H. J. Crocker in this vicinity. His funeral took place Monday.

Crop Report for May, 1893.

The outlook for wheat on May 1 was not as promising as one month earlier. It is now estimated that five per cent. of the acreage sowed will be plowed up because winter killed or otherwise destroyed. The average condition in the southern counties is 78 per cent., in the central 70 per cent. and in the northern 83 per cent. of vitality and growth of average years. Compared with April 1, the decline in the southern counties is 8 per cent., in the central 12 per cent. and in the northern 10 per cent. This decline, however, is due to the fact that the extent of injury could be better estimated May 1 than April 1, rather than to actual damage to the crop during April. The weather during April was cool and wet, and neither wheat nor grass made the growth usual in this month.

The average condition of wheat May 1, 1892, was, in the southern counties, 84, and in the central 81, and the crop in the State that year was 24,141,000 bushels. The average condition May 1, 1891, was, in the southern counties, 104, and in the central 99, and the yield in State that year was 28,039,000 bushels. The average yield per acre in 1892 was 15 bushels, and in 1891 18 1-2 bushels.

In their general remarks correspondents in the southern counties almost without exception report wheat in bad condition. The fields are spotted, large areas being killed out by ice, wind and water. Insects, also, have done much damage.

The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in April is 811,348. Of this amount 185,576 bushels were marketed in the first or southern tier of counties, 144,583 bushels in the second tier, 161,798 bushels in the third tier, 246,603 bushels in the fourth tier, 49,933 bushels in the fifth and sixth tiers and 22,795 bushels in the northern counties. At 35 elevators and mills from which reports have been received there was no wheat marketed during the month.

The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in the nine months, August-April, is 12,341,618, which is 1,030,834 bushels less than reported marketed in the same months last year.

The average conditions of clover meadows and pastures is 89 in the State and in each section of the State. This is fully 10 per cent better than one year ago. The average condition in 1891 was 100 in the southern counties and 99 in the central.

Nothing has yet occured to injure fruit buds, and the outlook is favorable for nearly a full average crop.

JOHN W. JOCHIM,

An Interesting Exhibit at the World's Fair.

One of the most attractive and interesting exhibits at the World's Fair is that of the Keystone Watch Case Co., of Philadelphia, which enjoys the unique distinction of being the largest watch case manufacturing concern in the world. The exhibit is centrally located in Section O, Block 1, of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, on the main or Columbia aisle. The booth is designed and finished on a scale of richness that admirably harmonizes with the goods exhibited. A pavillion classically proportioned, quaintly carved, and finished in ivory and gold, forms an imposing background; while the show-cases, with their lavishly expensive finish, are a fitting repository for their glittering contents. Every possible description of watch case is numerously illustrated, and in a variety of designs that reveals the limitless ingenuity of the modern goldworker.

The enormous factories of this company occupy an entire block of ground in Quaker City, give employment to 1,300 individuals, and have an output of about 2,000 watch cases per day! The entire resources of the concern are confined to the manufacture of cases only, just as the entire resources of the Elgin and Waltham factories are limited to the manufacture of movements only. Not a few of our readers may learn now for the first time that the cases and works of the watches in their pockets are made in different factories, having no connection whatever with one another—case manufacturing and movement manufacturing being entirely distinct industries. The Keystone cases are made by machinery of the most complicated character, much of which was invented by and is the exclusive property of this Company. They are also the sole proprietors of many well-known patents; the now world-famed thief-proof Non-pull-out Bow being one of the most valued. All their products, the best known of which are the popular Jas. Boss Filled Cases, are handled by our local jewelers.

I had a severe attach of catarrh and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as I ever could, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases, catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1,000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh. A. E. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

The High school nine played ball with the Woolen Mill boys of Clinton, Saturday, and were defeated by a score of 14 to 2. A game for Decoration Day between the High School and a Dundee nine is being worked up.

Two York farmers were traveling in [illegible] recently and came to a city where they had to change cars. It was a union depot, but they did'nt know it so engaged an honest hackman to transfer them; he drove them around town for half an hour and brought them back to the depot and charged them $5 apiece.—Milan Leader.

A notable article, giving the Chinese view of the Geary bill, written by Thos. D. Riordan, of San Francisco, appeared in the last number of Harper's Weekly. Mr. Riordan is the representative of the powerful Chinese corporation known as the Six Companies, and is one of the lawyers employed to assist in testing the constitutionality of the Chinese Registration law. In the current number the other side of the Chinese question is presented by the Hon. Thos. J. Geary, member of Congress from California, and the author of the famous bill which bears his name.

A certain physician in this place, has an account of long standing against a party out of town. The other day an attempt at collection was made, and shortly after, Doc was called upon by a very irate gentleman, who immediately showed his colors and gave chase. Out through the open door dashed pursuer and pursued, with Doc five seconds in the lead, and still gaining. After the space of several exciting minutes the hunted man took refuge in the parlor behind the friendly cover of the ladies of his family. The pursuer gave up the chase, and the doctor files a solemn declaration that he is of the opinion that any physician who will try and collect his bill for doctoring a man's mother, ought to be licked.

One of the most interesting sights in connection with the World's Fair is that which is vouchsafed the one fortunate enough to obtain access to the interior of the studios of "The Chicago Spectatorium." These studios cover almost 400,000 square feet of ground. In the various rooms one can see the preparation of the massive scenery to be used in the spectatorium, "The World Finder." In one immense room there is a small forest composed of the flora imported from Jamiaca, W. I.; in another reproductions of the three caravels of Columbus' fleet and in still another a faithful copy of the famous monastery of LaRabida. Work on the scenes is progressing very rapidly, much more so, in fact, than on the building.

The May number of the Literary Century is a Columbian Souvenir number of the Michigan Woman's Press Association and is the finest thing of the kind ever published in the State. It contains sketches of the members, and twenty-seven fine half-tone engravings, including those of Mrs. L. H. Stone, the honorary president, Mrs. Belle M. Ferry, the president, and Mrs. Beatrix Johnstone, editor of the Household. It is the first time Mrs. Johnstone ever permitted her portrait to go into print and probably will be the only opportunity her many friends will have of securing a sketch and picture of her. A fine portrait and sketch of E. Cora DePuy, editor and founder of The Literary Century, also appears. The cover is in white and the double number as a whole, an elegant one. Single copies twenty cents. New subscribers sending in one dollar for a year's subscription now, will receive this elegant number free. Do not send postage stamps. KNOWLEDGE Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

WITHOUT THE

it is easy to steal or ring watches from the pocket. The thief gets the watch in one hand, the chain in the other and gives a short, quick jerk—the ring slips off the watch stem, and away goes the watch, leaving the victim only the chain.

This idea stopped that little game:

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

AN AWFUL DROP.

Ten Employes of a Michigan Mine Dashed to Death.

The Cage in Which They Were Being Brought Up Breaks Upon Reaching the Surface, and the Unfortunates Fall to the Bottom.

A DROP OF OVER 3,000 FEET.

HOUGHTON, May 15.—Ten timbermen were dashed to pieces in the Red Jacket perpendicular shaft of the Calumet and Hecla at noon Sunday. The miners were coming up in the cage to dinner and the engineer hoisted the cage against the timbers of the shaft, when the coupling pin broke and the men and cage dashed downward, over 3,000 feet, to the bottom. The names of the killed are as follows: Allen Cameron, James Cocking, Andrew Edno, John Hicks, Michael Leavitto, Joseph Pope, John Rodgers, Con Sullivan, James Trevni and Robert Wuopia.

Never in the history of copper mining has so serious an accident occurred as that of Sunday. Sunday work in the mine is only done in the line of repairs to the machinery and timbering up the wall of the shafts. The ten men killed went down in the morning to timber the mine, had worked all the forenoon and stepped into the bucket to be hoisted 3,150 feet to the surface to get their dinners. The time consumed in being hoisted is usually but a minute by the powerful engines used.

The cause of the accident was a faulty indicator, which did not show the brakeman in charge of the hoisting apparatus when the cage had reached the top of the shaft. Ernst Tulin, the engineer, says his indicator showed 750 feet more to hoist. Tulin could not stop the machinery in time, and when the iron car struck the beams at the top of the shaft the coupling pin or the steel wire rope by which the car was suspended broke, letting the ten occupants of the cage down to a fearful death at the bottom of the shaft, 3,000 feet below.

Many pitiful scenes have been witnessed at the mouth of the shaft. Most of the ill-fated men had families and when the first rumor of the awful accident spread wives and children hastened to the scene, hoping that the report had been false, but finding instead that it was only too true and that many of them were widows or orphans.

The wife of Joseph Pope, one of the miners, had come to the mouth of the shaft with his dinner. She saw her husband come up, spoke to him lovingly, but was crazed when she saw the cage dart upward and then drop out of sight.

The mouth of the shaft is closed. A searching party has gone down Calumet No. 4 shaft, over a half mile away, and will come through the cross-cut or tunnel to search for the remains. Although thousands of miners and others had gathered around the fatal shaft, all were painfully silent. The terrible fatality seemed to have overawed them. None of the bodies has been recovered as yet. General Manager Whiting and Superintendent Duncan are almost crazed by the awful responsibility which the accident has thrust upon them.

PINCKNEY, May 13.—A cyclone passed 2 miles east of this village at 2 a. m. Friday. It struck the barns and outbuildings of Louis Dryer, completely destroying them. The orchard was also destroyed. The storm next struck the premises of William Placeway and William Thompson, half a mile farther east, destroying all their farm buildings, orchards, windmills, etc. All the members of both families were injured, but it said that none is seriously hurt. Many horses and cattle were killed. One mile east from Placeway's farm the house and outbuildings of John Fitche were completely wrecked, not a post remaining standing. The family, consisting of seven persons, were all injured, but none seriously. So far the damage is estimated at $15,000. The cyclone started 1 mile southeast of here and traveled northeast 1¼ miles. Mr. Placeway's family escaped injury. A stone anchor to a windmill weighing a ton was carried 3 rods, and debris from buildings was carried over a mile. Fitche's house was moved 2 rods from its foundation and completely upset. The family remained terror stricken in the dismantled house till daylight. The width of the cyclone was about 6 rods.

Financial Institutions at Charlevoix, Hillsdale and Lawton Close Their Doors.

CHARLEVOIX, May 13.—The bank of Charlevoix closed its doors Friday morning and placed its affairs in the hands of R. W. Kane as assignee. There was no run on the bank, but its affairs were in such shape that this move seemed necessary to do justice to all creditors. The firm is composed of W. P. Brown and his son, Gardner R. Brown, and while their capital was not large, they were supposed to be doing a safe and conservative business. The Northern Michigan Seed company, for which the Browns furnished the financial backing, has been a heavy drain, parties who expected to put in additional capital failing to do so, and this company is included in the assignment. No other failures will result. The deposits will probably not exceed $10,000.

HILLSDALE, May 13.—The First state bank of this city has gone into liquidation and quit business. The business has been transferred to the Hillsdale savings bank, which will assume all the liabilities and pay depositors in full.

PAW PAW, May 13.—Great excitement prevails at Lawton. The managers of a local bank there did not open up the institution, having left town Thursday night. Citizens have some $18,000 deposited in the bank and are taking legal steps in the hope of realizing something.

DROWNED.

Two of a Party of Fishermen Lose Their Lives Near Lexington.

LEXINGTON, May 13.—The other night a party of six young men were spearing fish in the lake about a quarter of a mile from shore. Through some mismanagement their boat was capsized and the occupants thrown into the water. Jacob Frank, aged 25, and Eddy Madder, aged 17, were drowned. The other four managed to keep themselves afloat until help reached them.

Missing and Deeply in Debt.

HANOVER, May 13.—No one knows where Ed Childs, the wheat buyer of Moscow, has gone. He left one night during the week and has not returned. His property has been heavily mortgaged and it is said he owes farmers for 21,000 bushels of wheat stored in his elevator. The banks in Hanover, Jonesville and Hudson also hold notes for $14,000. The steady decline in wheat caused Mr. Childs' financial difficulty.

Death of Col. Bement.

LANSING, May 16.—Col. Augustus S. Bement, of E. Bement & Sons, manufacturers of stoves and agricultural implements, and uncle of Mayor Arthur O. Bement, of this city, died of heart disease while on his way home from the works. He was a brother of the late E. Bement, founder of the extensive institution, and was 65 years old.

A TOWN RUINED.

Flames Sweep Away the Best Part of Spring Lake.

Property Worth About $175,000 Destroyed in a Blaze Which Started from a Spark—Eighty Families Left Homeless.

DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE.

GRAND HAVEN, May 12.—Spring Lake, the summer resort village across the river from this city, suffered the loss Thursday of sixty dwellings, two churches, a large union school building and an engine house and four stores by fire, caused by sparks from a passing river steamer. Eighty families are homeless. A 50-mile gale was blowing at the time, and the fire was soon beyond human control. Assistance was sent from here and Muskegon. Few of the losers carried insurance. The loss will be about $175,000. Among the more important losses are the following:

Union school and contents, $9,000, insurance $5,000; Methodist church $8,000, insurance $1,000; Baptist church $9,000, no insurance; DeVries residence, barn and contents $3,000, no insurance; Dr. C. S. Hazeltine, two houses, $8,000, insured; A. D. Bell, of Grand Rapids, residence, $6,000, insurance, $3,000; occupied by H. F. Harbeck, loss, $2,000, insurance, $1,000; engine house, $1,000, no insurance; Alexander Wood, $4,000, insurance, $1,000, James Emery, residence, $5,500, insurance, $1,800; Warren Gee, residence, $10,000; insured. Sisson & Lilly lost three dwelling houses and the Savidge estate several buildings; insured.

If the burned district is rebuilt it will be for summer resort purposes. After the fire had become fairly under control a heavy rain set in, which completed the destruction of household effects which had been saved from the fire.

[Spring Lake is on the line of the Detroit Grand Haven & Milwaukee railway in Ottawa county. The town contained five churches, several sawmills, three hotels and a graded public school. It has a population of over 2,000.]

THE LEGISLATURE.

A Synopsis of the Most Important Work During the Week.

LANSING, May 9.—The Michigan legislature resumed business again to-day and from now until May 29, the day set for final adjournment, no time will be lost and the usual Saturday and Monday adjournments will not be taken. Full time must be put in if half the important measures now before the legislature are enacted into law.

The house slaughtered the bill providing for the incorporation of companies for the establishment of homes for the care of children to whom parents shall release all right in favor of such corporations. The measure was advocated by the Seventh Day Adventists, who proposed to erect a home for such children on an extensive scale at Battle Creek. The bill which gave such corporation the care of children until they reached the age of 21 years was defeated on the ground that the state and not a private corporation should assume the care of dependent children. The McLaughlin grade crossing bill and a bill amending the general law for the incorporation of manufacturing institutions were passed in committee of the whole.

The senate completed the consideration of the general tax law; killed the bill reducing the legal rate of interest to 6 per cent.; passed the anti-Pinkerton bill and the Baum bill establishing a Saturday half holiday for banks; appropriated $74,000 for the support of the state public schools and $55,000 for the erection of new buildings and the purchase of land at the Northern asylum for the insane at Traverse City.

LANSING, May 10.—The senate committee which has been investigating the affairs of the state prison submitted a voluminous report recommending a general revision of the prison rules. Bills were passed making Labor day a legal holiday; requiring trolley wires to be strung at a height of at least 20 feet; requiring persons to have resided in their respective counties before being eligible to appointment as deputy sheriffs, thus prohibiting the importation of Pinkerton men, and establishing a Saturday half-holiday for banks. The elections committee reported favorably on a bill allowing the use of any voting machine in municipal elections, and the committee on state affairs reported without recommendation the house bill establishing an asylum for the insane in the upper peninsula.

The house passed the bill abolishing days of grace on commercial paper and making paper falling due on Sunday or a legal holiday payable the succeeding day. This bill is to take effect January 1, 1894. The house also passed senate bills providing for the incorporation of home protector fraternity associations, which embody both building and loan and life insurance features, and also authorizing the incorporation of gold cure organizations, known as happy home clubs. This bill was amended by altering the capital stock of such corporations to $25,000. The house judiciary committee reported favorably a bill for municipal woman suffrage.

LANSING, May 11.—The Kline capital punishment bill was made a special order in the house for Wednesday evening, May 17. Bills were passed prohibiting the caring for United States prisoners at the Detroit house of correction; amending the franchise tax law, making it apply to corporations organized outside the state; joint resolution for the submission of a constitutional amendment to allow inmates of the soldiers' home to vote where the institution is located. Mr. Chamberlain's bill providing for the organization of companies for the agricultural development of lands in the upper peninsula failed of passage.

LANSING, May 12.—The general tax bill, upon which the senate has spent nearly two weeks' time during the session, was taken up and passed by that body. It proposes a return to the state system of collecting delinquent taxes and annihilates the most important features of the tax law of 1891. By concurrent resolution the senate authorized the attorney general and commissioner of railways to commence proceedings against the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway company in order to test the validity of the law of 1891 repealing the special charter of the company and placing it under the operations of the general railroad law, by which the company's taxes were greatly increased.

The congressional apportionment bill was made the special order in the house for Tuesday. The committee on the state prison made an exhaustive report upon the management of the institution under Warden Davis, questioning the accuracy of his system of bookkeeping by which he showed a considerable surplus to its credit.

LANSING, May 13.—A congressional reapportionment bill, creating ten districts which, according to the vote at the last election, will be safely republican, and two which upon the same basis would be overwhelmingly democratic, was agreed to in committee of the whole by the senate.

It is now pretty certain that the legislature will adjourn May 29, and if half the needed legislation is passed great haste must be made.

A GOOD SHOT.

A Detroit Business Man Puts a Stop to a Burglar's Career.

DETROIT, May 13.—Anthony Renka was shot dead by Martin Wieznwski, a saloonist and grocer at 830 St. Aubin avenue, about midnight Thursday night while attempting to break into the latter's place. Wieznwski is in custody and will be held to await the result of the inquest. The bullet crashed through the burglar's brain, striking him fairly between the eyes. The police recognized the dead man as a petty thief.

GILL GETS OFF.

The Indictment Against the Ex-Prison Official Quashed.

JACKSON, May 13. — Judge Peck handed down his decision on the motion to quash the information in the case of Capt. Gill, late of the prison, charged with criminal carelessness in allowing Latimer to escape. The motion of defendant's attorney is sustained and the information quashed on the ground that no crime is charged in the original information.

Two Million, Two Hundred and Twenty-Eight Thousand, Six Hundred and Seventy-Two bottles sold in one year, and each and every bottle was sold on a positive guarantee that money would be refunded if satisfactory results did not follow its use. Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as" Pearline. IT'S FALSE. Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing — send it back.

PARTY BEFORE COUNTRY.

The Despicable Policy of Calamity-Howling Republicans.

One of the most deplorable features developed by the financial difficulties which the present administration is called upon to encounter is the unpatriotic attitude assumed by those who are professedly the spokesmen of the republican party. They were not content with the persistent misrepresentation of the purpose and the policy of the administration which led to an official contradiction from the president. They still magnify the dangers and misrepresent the course which will be pursued in averting them. Nothing could be more complete or more explicit than President Cleveland's denial. He meets all points of assault by saying that silver redemption has not at any time "been determined upon or [illegible] of the treasury or any other member of the present administration;" and that "the president and his cabinet are absolutely harmonious in the determination to exercise every power conferred upon them to maintain the public credit, to keep the public faith and to preserve the parity between gold and silver and between all financial obligations of the government."

There is not a weak point in this comprehensive assurance which partisanship can attack, and party meanness is thrown upon its inventive resources. Stories of every conceivable kind are manufactured with no other purpose than to impair public confidence in the administration, and are made the basis of editorial attacks aimed at the same unworthy result. The disgruntled and discredited republican leaders would rather weaken the hold of the democratic party than to avert a great financial calamity. They would rather serve their party than to serve their country. They invoke disaster with a hope of leading the people to believe that it was brought upon them through the weakness and mismanagement of a democratic administration.

In this policy of desperation there is the fatal mistake of having underestimated the wisdom, strong common sense and patriotic spirit of the people. They are far from being engulfed in the ignorance which the republican calamity howlers have assumed as a basis for their despicable line of action. The masses clearly understand that the danger which menaces the business and the prosperity of the country is the direct result of republican legislation and administration. They see through the perplexities involving the present administration the causes which produced them. An emptied treasury, an impaired gold reserve and a silver law that increases treasury notes with only silver bullion behind them are all legacies of republican rule. For more than thirty years the republicans have controlled one or more branches of the administration, and when not able to make laws to their own liking have been in a position to defeat such reformatory legislation as was presented from democratic sources. Republican rule not only exhausted the treasury, but it mortgaged the future by obligations which the government must meet and left untold evils of legislation which demand time for correction, to say nothing of the burdens which they have already imposed upon the people. But against all this the national credit is proof, and President Cleveland has made no mistake in relying upon the good sense and patriotism of the people. Their confidence is not to be disturbed by those in whom they have so lately expressed an utter want of confidence. —Detroit Free Press.

AN OFF-YEAR FIGHT.

The Republicans Have an Up-Hill Struggle Before Them.

The present is what is called an off-year, politically, but the Ohio republicans evidently propose to make up for this by the length of their campaign. They have called their state convention for the 7th of June. Gov. McKinley will undoubtedly be renominated, and the leading issues will be those of which he is a typical representative.

If, as now seems probable, congress is called together in special session, we shall have the McKinley tariff attacked both in congress and on the stump in Ohio simultaneously. Gov. McKinley has a strong and enthusiastic personal following, but the prestige of the democratic party victory in the national election is a political wet-blanket for the other side which only the most inspiriting campaign rally can throw off. The absence of definiteness in the programme of the party in power dulls the points of attack also. There is nothing to be gained by under-estimating the blocks in the way of republican success this year.—Boston Traveller.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——Mr. Cleveland may not have "broken any trusts," but the republican party's trust in its own strength has been badly shaken up.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

——Gov. McKinley wants an early convention and a long campaign in Ohio. The governor is right. His fun will end with the election.—Detroit Free Press.

——The democratic party has the knowledge, the will and the ability to maintain the public credit and to find a solution for every question that confronts the American people.—St. Louis Republic.

THE RECIPROCITY HUMBUG.

Losses to American Commerce Under Republican Rule.

In August, 1890, Mr. Blaine, recognizing that there was a growing demand for larger markets, suggested "reciprocity" as a palliative of the evils of protection. In a speech delivered at Waterville, Me., August 29, 1890, Mr. Blaine said: "I am here to speak of an expansion of our foreign trade." Comparing the returns for 1889, he declared that with the countries to the south of us we had by commerce "lost," $142,000,000 in one year. With Cuba we "lost," according to Mr. Blaine, $41,000,000, as we imported $52,000,000 and exported only $11,000,000. With Brazil we "lost" $51,000,000, importing $60,000,000 and exporting $9,000,000. With Mexico we "lost" $10,000,000, buying $21,000,000 and selling $11,000,000. That that was his plea for "reciprocity."

Turning now to the record of 1892, under reciprocity we find an alarming condition infinitely worse, according to Mr. Blaine's philosophy, than in 1889. In 1892 we "lost" with Cuba $60,000,000, as against $40,000,000 in 1889, importing $78,000,000 and exporting only $18,000,000. With Brazil our "losses" in 1892 were $104,341,731, as against $51,052,723 in the "dark year" of 1890. In 1892 we imported $118,633,604 and exported only $41,240,009. With Mexico our "losses" in 1892 were $13,813,526, against $9,766,705 in 1889, our imports being $28,107,525, our exports only $13,696,531. Throughout the record is the same. The discrepancy between imports and exports is growing at an enormous rate, and if this discrepancy represents a "loss," as Mr. Blaine contends, then we are rushing headlong to ruin.

That there should be some increase in our exports was inevitable. Every obstruction, natural or artificial, lessens commerce; every removal of an obstruction increases the volume of commerce. The relaxing of the protective principle led to an increase in exchanges, but absolute free trade would have led to a fair exchange and to larger exports. Of course this discrepancy between imports and exports is in no sense a "loss," but it has its lesson. Brazil, Cuba and Mexico offer us their products at prices we are willing to pay, and so they sell to us in great quantities.

We offer to Mexico, Brazil and Cuba products of our mills at prices greater than those named by Germany, France and England, and so our neighbors send their orders across the water. Commerce will continue to run in these channels until we revise our tariff for our own benefit; until we relieve our own people, manufacturers and consumers of outrageous burdens and enter competitive markets on equal terms with other nations. What we need is not reciprocity, but free trade. We must be able to show all nations that our manufacturers do not need "protection;" that they are able to hold their home markets against all comers and are ready to undersell Europe in any American market.

Our protective tariff is a proclamation to all nations that the American manufacturers cannot compete on equal terms with the manufacturers of Europe. What would be thought of a city merchant who advertised that he could not sell goods at prices named by his competitors? That is what America does with its protective tariff and its alleged treaties of reciprocity. For these reasons we should abandon the hypocritical pretense of reciprocity and substitute for it the offer of Jefferson's "free commerce with all nations."

But other reasons remain for this change. A Washington dispatch says: "Spain has imposed an excise tax really equal to the duties remitted by the McKinley bill."

The same dispatch says the Brazilian government is also making trouble over the treaty with that country, "but it is not apparently violating the treaty so flagrantly as the government of Spain. It was understood when the schedules of discriminations in favor of the United States were made that the general scale of Brazilian import duties might be raised. The discriminations in favor of this country were based upon reductions of 25 per cent. on the duties levied on imports from other countries, whatever those might be. Brazil took advantage of this arrangement to raise her dutiable schedules after the reciprocity arrangement was made, and she was obliged to do so in order to obtain sufficient revenues for carrying on the federal government."

Well, America needs this duty—which must ultimately be paid by the consumer—as much as it is needed by Spain or Brazil. A slight tax on coffee and on sugar would relieve the treasury of its embarrassments and supply the deficit in the revenue. Abolish reciprocity and give us as near an approach to free trade as the necessities of our government justify.—Louisville Courier Journal.

——Col. Clarkson doesn't know just what the republicans are going to do at their Louisville May party, but he is quite sure they will adhere to "protection and sound money," and he hopes the organization will "make human right, liberty and fair election still its cardinal doctrines." In other words, Col. Clarkson wants the republican party to rally for the congressional elections of 1894 around the same banners that the voters hauled down and trampled on in 1890 and 1892. Mr. Clarkson will do the democratic party a great favor if he will just keep the republicans to their platform of force bill, McKinley tariff and monopoly finance.—St Louis Republic.

——In addition to the rumor of the establishment of a one hundred million-dollar rival to the Carnegie interests, which may be only a rumor, other big iron and steel plants in that region are being started or enlarged, while Carnegie himself is taking steps to greatly increase his productive capacity. This does not look like these men believed in their old campaign cry that Cleveland and a revenue tariff would drive them out of business.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TO HORSEMEN AND BREEDERS.

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6. Reg. Vol. VII. Bay Stallion, 16 hands; foaled 1884. Bred by Glenview Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:25 without much work. He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. He had 19 sons and 18 daughters that had produced trotters in 1892. 31 of his sons and 25 of his daughters produced fast ones, while he got 26 with records from 2:30 to 2:15 1-4. This is the best showing ever made by any sire, living or dead, to date. His sons and daughters produce early and extreme speed. His daughter, Manette is dam of Arion, 2-year old record 2:10 3-4, as a 3-year old 2:10 1-2; the fastest colt ever foaled, and sold for $125,000 cash. He made the season of 1892 for $2,500. Only one Stallion in the world produced at 4 years old a yearling colt that got, a record below 2:30, and that is Woodline by Nutwood.

Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. Miss Russell is dam of Nutwood 2:18 3-4, Maud S. 2:08 3-4, Rustique 2:21, Cora Belmont 2:24 1-2, Russia 2:28, and six sons that have produced extreme speed, also 4 daughters that produced speed. Lord Russell out of Nutwood's dam got Kremlin, 2:07 3-4, the acknowledged race horse stallion of the world.

Nutpatch's first dam, Patchen Maid, is the dam of Astral, 2:18, and Marshal Kleber, sire of Mistake 2:29 3-4, etc.; she by Mambrino Patchen 58, brother to Lady Thorn 2:18¼, and sire of London, 2:20 1-2 and 23 others. Dams of Grayford (p) 2:09 3-4, Riley Medium (p) 2:10 1-2, Constantine 2:12 1-2, and 80 other standard performers; also grandsire of Nightengale 2:10 1-2, Walter E., 2:11 3-4, etc.; second dam Lady Eleanor, by Mambrino Chief II, sire of Lady Thorn 2:18 1-4, 5 others, and dams of Director 2:17, Piedmont 2:17 1-4, Iona 2:17 1-2, and 21 other standard performers. Also sire of dams of 62 speed producing sires, including Red Wilkes, Almont, Belmont, etc.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be promptly advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

The Things We Prize Most

are not the gewgaws and gimcracks we gather about us. Every life, of course, has its sacred tinseled treasures, but in this practical work-a-day world man is prone to value most those things which serve him best.

Not much sentiment in this, perhaps, but some sense all the same.

The McCormick Machine of Steel

takes first rank the world over. Hundreds of thousands of grain growers call it the best harvester and binder that ever went into a grain field, and they prize it accordingly. It isn't sentiment with them—it's just plain, old-fashioned common sense. They like it best because it serves them best.

It costs more money than some harvesters, but that's because it's more valuable. Its advantages more than offset the added cost.

The "Machine of Steel" is built to harvest the grain crop of the world, and to do it better than any other machine.

Perhaps you may care to know more about this harvester. Our catalogue will interest you.

The "Twice-a-Week" St. Louis Republic is unquestionably the best and cheapest national news journal published in the country. It has led the fight for Tariff Reform, and stands without a rival as the leading and representative Democratic paper of the United States. It is issued each Tuesday and Friday, fourteen to sixteen pages every week, for only one dollar a year—a great semi-weekly paper for the price of a weekly. It gives the news at least half a week earlier and much more fully than any weekly. Everybody should subscribe for it at once and get the news, fresh and complete, now, as for the first time in 32 years the Democratic party is in absolute control of the Executive and Legislative Departments of the National Government. An extra copy will be sent free, for one year, to the sender of each Club of four new subscribers, with four dollars. Write for free sample copies and raise a Club. Death of Dr. Solon R. Snell.

The Indianapolis Journal of Monday May 1st, contains the following, which will be of interest to many of our older residents.

MUNCIE, Ind., April 29.—Dr. Solon R. Snell, aged eighty-six, died at his home in this city to-night. Mr. Snell was one of Muncie's oldest physicians, with a highly interesting history.

He was born at Ashtabula, O., in 1807, and went to Tecumseh, Mich., at the age of twenty-five. There he engaged in business and accumulated some money. He went to Louisville from Tecumseh and engaged in the milk business. He sold out at Louisville, and with several negroes, horses, wagons and all his possessions, started down the Ohio river for St. Louis, near near where he purchased a farm, intending to start a dairy. His boat was capsized in the ice near Evansville, two of the children, the horses and some negroes were drowned. The wreck cost Mr. Snell nearly $100,000. He saved his wife and two children on a large cake of ice. In 1849 his wife died at LaSalle, Ill., of cholera. He then went to California, and there amassed his second fortune. From there he went South and operated a large general store at Itry Tenn. When the war broke out he took advantage of Jeff Davis' order that all persons sympathizing with the North must prepare to leave in thirty days. Mr. Snell received $80,000 in Southern scrip for his store. The money was soon valueless, and another fortune was gone. He moved to Indiana and became a part owner in the old Wabash canal. He next went to Nauvoo, Ill., and made a third fortune of the property left by Joe Smith and the colony of Mormons. He first practiced medicine at Indianapolis twenty-five years ago and came to Muncie soon after that. He leaves a fortune, but it cannot be estimated until the will is opened. At his own request the remains will be taken to Cincinnati and cremated and his son Thomas is to carry the ashes to the center of the suspension bridge and throw them in the Ohio river. He would never eat after 4 o'clock and was never sick in his life until the fatal illness that carried him off.

MEMORIAL DAY.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MICHIGAN, GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC, Ionia, April 20, 1893.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 5.

I. May 30th is the day when we lay our offerings on the graves of our soldier dead. Custom, gratitude, remembrance, have but strengthened its observance by citizen and soldier. Where sleep the boys in blue, there living comrades, loving hearts and willing hands, cover the mound with beautiful flowers and decorate the grave with fadeless green.

The warp and woof of the Nation's prosperity have been woven in the loom of these years, largely by the hands now stilled in death. Humanity's heart beats quicker, freer, because of those who fought and died that the Union might live. These comrades of ours gave all they had to give for their country—their lives. Heirs of immortality and joint heirs with us who survive for liberty we gather that day to teach the lessons of patriotism, inculcate the principles of loyalty, and remember the dead once our companions in arms.

Proud of "Michigan in the War," let citizen and soldier be prouder still of Michigan's part in the observance of this day. Its pathos should touch all hearts. Its memories should make tender and holy every feeling. It is a day for neither gain, selfishness nor frivolity, but one of memorial, decoration and remembrance. Every hand should give a flower, every heart a tribute of gratitude.

Throughout the Department of Michigan let there be a general and decorous observance of the day. The Department Commander desires above all else that its observance be made impressive and sacred to our soldier dead. No amusements that shall invite unfavorable comment, or plans of gain that may invoke criticism, should be indulged in or sanctioned by Post Commanders.

II. The posts of this department should lead and take charge of the observance of the day, and invite citizens and public schools within their respective jurisdiction to co-operate and participate in the exercises that may be held.

The Department Commander would urge upon Post Commanders that the Sunday preceding Memorial Day, services be held in some one church in their respective communities, where a memorial sermon shall be preached, the comrades in a body, as a post, being present.

Comrades! The dead have done their work, the living have a few more years to remember them. Peace to their ashes! Honor to the Comrades who decorate their graves!

By Command of
J. H. KIDD,
Department Commander.

J. J. PHELPS,
Assistant Adjt.-Gen.

OBITUARY.

Maggie J. Boyd, who died very suddenly at her home on Saturday, April 29th, 1893, was born December 5, 1845, in County Antrim, Ireland. She was at the time of her death 47 years, 4 months and 5 days old. She had been a resident of Macon township for 34 years and a member of the Reformed Church of South Macon for 25 years. A firm and true friend of the church of her early choice, a consistent Christian woman, greatly beloved by all who knew her, her life of faith and her labors of love for the church and Sabbath School won the confidence and love of all associated with her and she will be sadly missed. Her confidence in God's word and promises was unshaken and up to her last moments were her solace and joy.

Her mother died just three years and one day previous to her daughter's death, thus leaving to her the care of the household and the father who survives them. Her wonderful executive ability in financial as well as household duties made her truly the mainstay and comfort of her father, Mr. John Boyd, who is so sadly afflicted by this dispensation. He feels his loss deeply—the more so because of the suddeness of the affliction. A favorite of all, but to him a daughter whose place cannot be filled. He has the sympathy of his neighbors and friends. His son, who is in business in Detroit, is all that is now left to him of his family. G.

American Gardening for May.

The contents of the May number are unusually varied and interesting. A timely article on spraying is given by men who ought to know all about it, and the preparation of mixtures for the purpose is also fully treated. Reforms in cemetery and school-yard gardening are again urged in a manner that is both entertaining and convincing. Besides some excellent plans for school gardens Mr. Long gives some bright glimpses of Golden Gate Park, California, by means of pen and camera. A number of writers help us to keep pace with the evolution of fruits and flowers, some of the best new varieties and types being well described. G. A. Woolson's "Development of a Pine Stump," and his presentation of it as an ornamental factor will help many a home gardener to make beautiful some homely object.

Wall street has passed through another rough and tumble panic. The big Cordage trust passed into the hands of a receiver and several brokers were forced to the wall, but the legitimate business of the country sails along serenely. The time has gone by when the whole nation is thrown into a spasm of sneezing, if Wall street takes snuff.

The injustice and farcical character of the Sunday closing plan at the World's Fair was shown last Sunday. All persons having passes were admitted to the grounds, but laboring men who could not attend on a week day without losing a day's work were excluded. Although we are naturally partial to deadheadism, we think this is carrying the rights of deadheads to an extreme.

It looks now as though the Fair would be opened on Sunday, but the goal will be reached by easy approaches. It is announced that the park will be opened on Sunday next but not the buildings. A prominent official is reported to have said: The park will be open every Sunday during the fair and in a few weeks the exhibit buildings will all be open, but the machinery will not be turned on during the Sabbath day.

Secretary Carlisle found the gold condition of the Treasury much easier when he returned than it was when he went away. The 'free gold' now amounts to something like $7,000,000, and there has been a very decided 'let up' in the demand for gold for export. No man can say with any certainty whether the sudden cessation in the demand for gold to be sent abroad is permanent, or only temporary; but anyway it is very welcome to the administration, as it has given it an opportunity to strengthen its gold reserve and to prepare for future demands.

Mr. Frederick Dillon, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, at present visiting Washington, thinks the Canadian sentiment for annexation has been grossly exaggerated. He said, speaking on that subject: "I do not think that our people care for annexation to the United States. The present status is good enough. We are practically independent of Great Britain; levy a tax on all imports she sends us, and contribute not a dollar of taxes to the mother country. If trouble should come, there is the British army and navy that would rally to our protection. There is no hurry to dissolve such an advantageous connection.'

A morning paper represents a Chicagoan as asking what the circumstances of T. W. Palmer are, because he beats the Chicagoans blind in the matter of giving fine entertainments. It may be well for the Chicago people to know that Thomas is a farmer in comfortable circumstances, who has lived in a fairish-sized log cabin most of his life, and has been kept so busy looking after his Jersey cows and Percheron horses that he hasn't had time to spend all the money he has. He's got money enough to throw away. He has money to burn. His ordinary tip to a colored waiter is a half century bill. Our Uncle Thomas will make Chicago's eyes bulge out like walnuts before he gets through showing the peoples of the earth what a good-natured and polite old gentleman he can be when he has the whole planet for his guest and the American people as his staff of waiters.—Evening News.

TAX REFORM DEPARTMENT.

(This department aims to give everybody's ideas about taxation (not tariff). Write your opinions briefly, and they will be published or discussed in their turn by the editor or by a member of the Taxation Society. Address, "Taxation Society," this office or P. O. Box 88, Buffalo, N. Y.)

A Sample of Popular Notions About Taxes.

CHADILLA FORKS, N. Y., Mar. 9 '93.
TO MR. WHIDDEN GRAHAM. Dear Sir: I received yours of the 1st inst. yesterday, in which you request me to give my reasons for wanting the personal property of the state to pay its share of the taxes.

1. Because there is no other just way. The personal (as a whole) brings more interest to its owner than the real property and requires just as much care and expense of government and is easier to be assessed. Its value is always known, or nearly so, while the real estate changes materially from year to year and it is always impossible to get at its value.

2. Because to put the tax all on real estate will ruin and discourage all the young farmers. It would drive the farmers that are in debt (which is a large percent, above half) out of the business, the farms would get into the hands of capitalists and trust companies, and labor will be performed by foreigners and the whole country go to ruin.

3. Now the way to do this thing is to make all personal property taxable and payable in the districts where the owner lives; make the stock of all banks, railroads and all companies, trusts and combinations of whatsoever name or nature taxable and payable in the district where the owner lives. But you will say: "companies pay tax on their business wherever it is!" yes, but that don't prevent the stock being good property to its owner and it should be taxed the same as mortgages and other loans on real estate. You can see that this would equalize the burden upon all kinds of property and all classes of people and help all classes to take an interest in good government and would encourage the young farmers to stick to their business and pay for their farms, and young mechanics to buy a home and pay for it, and start the whole country on the road to prosperity.

In hopes you will change your front and take hold on this line, I remain, Yours,—William L. Brown.

REPLY.

1. Personal property earns no interest unless invested in, or used upon, real estate. The idea that money locked up in vaults can earn dividends, is widespread but unfounded. Instead of being easier it is much harder to estimate the value of personal than real property. Land is out of doors where it can be seen, and its value readily discovered. The hundred forms of personal property can not be assessed with any degree of fairness. The facts are just the opposite from what you say. It is real estate values which are nearly always known, and personal property which continually changes. For instance: In your township any farmer can tell you what his neighbor's farm is worth. But where is the man who can set down the exact value (not cost) of the horses, cattle, machinery, furniture, implements, grain, etc., on that farm?

2. In the absence of any proof of your assertion that to levy all taxes on real estate would ruin the farmers, I presume you mean that under such a system of taxes on farm lands would be increased. On the contrary they would be decreased. Personal property pays a much larger proportion of the taxes in the farming districts, than it does in the cities. The farmers who are in debt would be able to borrow money at much lower rates of interest if capital invested in mortgages were freed from taxation. They would also profit by the stimulus which trade and manufacturing would receive by the exemption of all industries from taxes on the money used in business.

3. The experience of mankind in every country on earth has shown that it is impossible to tax all personal property. Wherever the attempt has been made the effect has been to make capital scarcer and dearer, while in the long run the taxes have always been shifted to the consumer. Stock in a company is not property, but merely the paper title to real estate in the form of factories, mines, railroads, etc. As the latter are taxed where they are situated, how can you claim that it would be just to levy a second tax on the mere evidence of their ownership? You are mistaken in supposing that to tax personal property would equalize the burden of taxation. The result would be to lay more taxes on the farmers, whose personal property can be found much easier than that in the cities.

I am sorry that you have no better plan for starting the country on the road to prosperity, than to fine by taxation all the producers or owners of capital. Think it over, and I am sure you will see that the true way to make the country rich and prosperous is to encourage as much as possible the production and investment of wealth.

WHIDDEN GRAHAM.

County Option in New York.

Mr. Bolton Hall's address to the committee of the legislature was as follows:

The county option tax bill would not bear hardly upon the farmer. I know very well the burdens that the farmer suffers, and that measures for his relief ought to be found. I represent here, personally, for my family, and as trustee, much more than one million of dollars in real estate in New York, vacant and improved. I represent also the Tax Reform association, with about 450 members, selected because they are the owners of real estate. We have only a few whose interest in personal property are anything like predominant. Now, why should we want to oppress the farmer? His prosperity is ours and his misfortunes are our misfortunes. Where roads are bad in the country and the farmer can not get in to pay his debts our collections are slow; then the merchants can not pay their debts. If they can not collect for a long enough time our merchants fail. Then we lose our rents. Why should we wish to take away from the farmer the power to pay his debts? It would be our ruin.

This association which I represent, as holders of real estate, say they would like to pay more taxes. Someone asks where is the justice of a real estate owner being forced to pay and the owner of personal property exempted. The answer is perfectly clear. Suppose it is unjust to make us pay—we want to do it. Won't you let us? Says someone, "That is all right for you city fellows; we don't want to do it." "Well, then," we say, "don't do it. You pay on what you wish; we will pay on what we wish." This bill is not a new thing. It has been thoroughly discussed, and to-day no one opposes it.

[illegible] speakers to oppose it, but they didn't understand it, partly because at that time there were defects in the bill which have since been cured. Now, it is impossible to hear nearly all those who wish to speak. I don't want to trouble you with the names of all those who appear, but I can show you from those who are here from all classes and all parts of the state how universal this endorsement is, and that it does not come from any clique or district. It is a popular demand, a demand for home rule. We want to govern our own homes and cities and counties, just as we would like to govern our own state and not the rest of the United States.

We come here simply to express this principle, which is democratic in the highest sense—that we want not only that every man should have a vote, but that the interests of every man in these United States should be represented, beginning with himself, going up to his home and next to his country.

A Plan of Relief.

Attention has been called to the act introduced by Mr. Durack, entitled "An act to regulate the collection of taxes on homestead dwellings not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars in value," providing the owner shall not own any other lands in the state of New York.

The question of taxation is one that should be approached with the utmost caution and with good judgment, and legislators should proceed slowly in the matter of this bill. The principle of differential taxation is an unsound one. In the first place we would like to inquire upon what just rule one man's property valued at $1,500 can be exempted, while his neighbor who happens to be possessed of a place valued at $1,600 pays his full ratio of the taxes which assist in giving good government and making more valuable the holding of his fifteen hundred dollar neighbor. While we can sympathize with the motive of those who introduced this bill to legislate in favor of the small property owners, and while we realize that the abnormally rich are ofttimes like the publicans of old—taxgatherers without conscience or sense—yet any attempt to discriminate between the rich and the poor upon our statute books is entirely wrong and will utterly fail of its object.

A Better Reform in Taxation.

The more sensible plan would be to abolish all forms of personal taxation. This is just in principle, and would prove equitable in its workings and results. Nearly all personal property, such as bonds, mortgages and notes, are but evidences of indebtedness, and it is entirely unjust that the thing itself and its shadow should be taxed simultaneously. To remove the burden of taxation from personal property, while it might add a little to the burden upon real estate, would make money more plentiful, more easily to be obtained, and in this way encourage men of small means or those depending upon their daily wages for support, to borrow a little capital and invest in a home of their own. A greater competition would be produced amongst those having money to loan, and much larger results would be obtained in the way of relief for men owning small places. Nearly all of them have upon them a mortgage or some other form of indebtedness, upon which they are paying a high rate of interest, which high rate is maintained and fostered by an absurd attempt of our legislators to get at all forms of personal property.—Long Islander.

Keep Taxes Low.

The Buffalo Evening News agrees fully with The Journal as to the danger of high taxes, under which many a little city is groaning with no hope of relief. Consider these words of the able News: "The Jamestown Journal has the right idea about taxation, and it keeps the sentiment continually before its readers. The cry is, keep down the rate of taxation. Low taxation in an ambitious city is the greatest aid to prosperity. Manufacturers follow the low water mark of city taxation. This is the main attraction for capital—it seeks investment where taxation is moderate."

This is right in line with the inquiries of would-be investors as to the indebtedness and rate of taxation in Jamestown. "Manufacturers are following the low water mark of city taxation." It is not worth while to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.—Jamestown Journal.

Infected by the Single Tax.

"Society is bound, first, to provide for the poor; second, to institute legislation which will tend to lessen poverty and crime; third, to effect these objects society has the right to resort to taxation, and this taxation may be imposed upon property, either uniformly or differentially, as the judgment and conscience of the community may decide.—Abram S. Hewitt, Land owner and ex-mayor of New York.

LOUIS WINDMULLER estimated that one thousand millions of foreign capital is invested in the United States. Does your state or town get its share of this? If so, try to attract it by putting a local tax on it.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarassed, and who was overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to cures. TRADE MARK. DR. A. OWEN.

A STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

MOUNT PLEASANT, MICH., August 15, 1892.

THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO.:

Dear Sirs:—I now am able to say, after having purchased one of your No. 4 Electric Belts with Spinal Appliance about one year ago, that I thank God I have found relief from my terrible suffering through the wonderful healing influence of your wonderful Body Belt. August 20, 1891, at which time I was a great sufferer, and had been for more than four years, from extreme nervous prostration, so much so that, on the least excitement, my whole nervous system would be all of a tremble from head to foot, and unable to control myself in the least, and would affect me to tears like a little child. I am a farmer by profession; in the fields, or at work on the farm, or at any excitement, it had the same effect. I could not lift the weight of five pounds. It so continued with increased suffering, until I was unable to help myself, and for eight long months my suffering was intense. My stomach was so weak that I could not take any food but crackers and warm water for the above time. My kidneys were so weak that I could not retain my urine, it would pass from me continually, and I was under the necessity of leaving my couch from six to eight times of a night to void my urine, which was very painful. I was also troubled with severe constipation and piles, so that I was obliged to use injections to produce evacuations of the bowels; it was very distressing, so much so that I had to be lifted in and out of my bed for several months. The doctors could do me no good whatever, and I had made up my mind that there was no help for me this side of the grave. My limbs would become numb and cold, seemingly as ice, and I would try with hot bricks, rubbing and all other methods to restore the circulation and natural feeling, but all to no effect, and then it would pass off. Then again another attack would occur which would leave me helpless, and so continued periodically, and I could get no relief. The doctors told me that I must not do any work, and that it would be three years at least before I would be able to work. I agreed with them, for I could not, nor did I ever expect to again. The whole world seemed to me a blank, and my vital forces all had left me, and my life was fast ebbing away from me through the loss of my life fluids, which doctors were unable even to check. I had given up all hope of ever getting help, and death in all its terrible forms stared me in the face, from which there seemed to be no avenue of escape from this living horror, of which no living person is able to know or feel, except his sufferings be as mine has been. In this state of suffering and agony I continued until about one year ago now I met a friend who, on seeing my helpless condition, advised me to try one of the Owen Electric Belts. For several weeks I doubted his statements about what he told me of the wonderful healing properties of it, but he was so earnest and persistent that I finally consented to send for one. He advised me to send for a No. 4 with spinal appliance, which I did, at a cost of $30.00, which is the price for No. 4 and spinal appliance. I will here that it is the best $30.00 investment I ever made in my life in the way of [illegible] remedies or anything else, as I had spent [illegible] up into the hundreds, but could get no relief whatever. As soon as I received the Belt and Appliance, I had it charged and adjusted and put it on, and in a short time after putting it on I began to feel wonderful soothing and genial currents of its healing power passing all through me, clear to the end of my toes and fingers, a prickling sensation like thousands of needles. Many were the sleepless nights I had passed unable to sleep but from one to two hours through the whole night for months. On the third night after wearing the Belt I slept until morning and awoke greatly refreshed, and was not disturbed, nor had I to void my urine once through the night, and I have not been bothered in that way since. All the drains upon the system have ceased, and constipation and piles all have left me as if by magic. My nerves have regained their former strength, my eyesight and mind have become clear, and I have gained in weight about 15 pounds, and I feel like a new man. My stomach has got back its power of digestion, and I can eat almost any kind of food that my appetite craves, without pain or distress. I am gaining daily and I feel better and stronger than I have for the past ten years, and it seems I have a new lease of life. I cannot say enough in favor of your wonderful Electric Body Belt. It is far superior to all medicines ever compounded for the relief and cure of chronic and complicated diseases and broken down constitutions. I would not take $2,000 for my Belt if I could not get another like it. There is no use to like it for relief and cure where all other remedies fail. I can not praise your Belt enough, for what it has done for me words can not express. I will say here that I recommend the Owen Electric Belt to all suffering humanity who fail to find relief from other remedies. It is the messenger of quick relief and certain cure of all nervous debility and other nerve troubles. I know it will cure all diseases which you advertise it to cure.

This you may publish to let suffering humanity know there is relief and cure to be found in your wonderful Belt and Appliances.

A BRIGHTER MORROW.

Dark cloud-folds wave above us,
The squadrons of the rain
Bear down upon the forest,
And sweep along the plain.
They break their shining lances
Against our loved retreat,
And trample our sweet blossoms
With swift, unsparing feet;
Yet will our hearts be joyous,
Nor grief nor trouble borrow;
There cometh peace, the storm will cease—
There'll be a brighter morrow!

So, when our lives are darkened,
And clouds of ill hang o'er,
We'll never fear the sunshine
Will fill the world no more;
Let not your hearts be troubled!
Still kindly saveth He Whose mandate hushed the waters
Of stormy Galilee.
He brings the balm of Gilead
To heal the wounds of sorrow;
At His behest, there cometh rest—
There'll be a brighter morrow!

Brave brother, art thou weary,
And is the journey long?
Dear sister, dost thou falter,
Has sorrow stilled thy song?
Rejoice! the sunset reddens,
The clouds are rolling by,
The glorious "bow of promise"
Hangs in the eastern sky!
Thy heaven will be sweeter
For days of earthly sorrow;
The storm will cease, there cometh peace—
There'll be a brighter morrow!

ON THE WAY HOME.

The Happy Ending of a Pleasant Summer Vacation.

"Good-by, girls, good-by! I don't know how to thank you. I feel as grateful as the midgets who profit by the fresh air fund. Yes, of course I'll write, and—be sure to come out and see me as soon as you can—good-by!"

Dorothy Adams spoke rather sorrowfully and leaned out of the car window with reckless disregard for passing trains to catch the last glimpse of the merry party of girls who were waving good-by.

Was it really the end of her beautiful summer?

She settled back in her chair and tried to prepare herself for what looked such an unpromising future; but try as she would her thoughts went back to her life that summer so different from anything she had ever before experienced.

Queerville, Dorothy's home, is a delightful little place, just far enough from Boston to be independent of it, and in this respect it is wonderfully like its inhabitants, who, having themselves or their ancestors lived in Queerville for the past two hundred years or more, are sufficient unto themselves and perhaps a trifle contemptuous of those who have not had such advantages.

The academy at Queerville, like everything and almost everybody else, is an institution of age, and for many years an Adams has been master there.

And it has long been the regret of Dr. Adams' life that Dorothy, his daughter, should not have been Jonathan, his son, so that Queerville could be spared the shock of seeing a Smith—possibly even a Jones—as his successor.

But during the last few years strange notions had crept into Queerville, and Dr. Adams had willingly grown to think that in these days of woman's advancement it would be most fitting for Dorothy, whom he had given a most classical training and who had thrown herself heart and soul into his work—for Dorothy herself to become in time "master" of Queerville academy.

To this project Dorothy had given eager assent, and it was after no little pleading that her Philistine cousin Mildred, who lived in Boston, had won over Dorothy and her father to her own plan for the summer.

Accordingly the last day of June had found Dorothy with the Wards aboard the boat bound for Bar Harbor, and perhaps her gratitude had been shadowed by the thought that it was something of a condescension for one of the Queerville Adamses to be part of such frivolity.

"But it didn't last long," thought Dorothy, peering out of the car window for comfort. "The first glimpse of those grand cliffs bidding us welcome made me humble enough; and if ever there was a grateful girl, you dear cousin Mildred, she is I—and I couldn't tell you half how I felt. Oh, dear, dear! It's all over now, anyhow—yesterday I was in it, and to-day I am not—so I must be sensible or father will wish he had kept me at home!"

For two months she had led the most delightful, the most idyllic life. Society, that mysterious something that Dr. Adams regarded with such scorn, and that Dorothy herself had had a little pharisaical feeling toward—society had taken an outing, and with her.

She had been part of it and she had liked it. Yes, before all Queerville she was willing to become its champion.

"Talk about society being frivolous and hollow," she thought to herself, rehearsing a trifle, perhaps, as she recalled how she, Dorothy, who had her Greek and Latin at her finger tips, and who thought she knew something, had been obliged to remain silent many a time when they were discussing intensely interesting subjects, simply because she knew nothing about them.

"Oh! It's a thousand times better to be part of this living world and interested in the things that are troubling men to-day than to be existing way back in the dark ages and trying to hammer Greek and Latin into heads that are thinking of cricket and football!"

Dorothy looked defiantly out of the window and the trees nodded approval as the train rushed by, taking her back faster and faster to Queerville and the academy.

Yes, it had been a delightful summer, and Dorothy had shown as much eagerness for pleasure as she ever had for learning.

There had been riding and rowing and canoeing. Is there anything much more delightful than canoeing? To feel the water in subjection beneath her gaze Dorothy such a sense of security that she laughed at those who said there was danger.

And the pranks they had played! and the fun they had had!

"Probably it is because people only hear of that side of the story that they call society frivolous," thought Dorothy as she remembered some of the queer notions she had had herself.

"Why, even the men had been a delightful surprise, for with all their assumed indifference they had done some of the best things. How small she felt that morning she congratulated Ned Marshall so gushingly on his bravery, and he replied:

"You're awfully kind, Miss Adams, but you didn't think I'd let the little fellow drown, did you?"

Oh! yes she might even have made a hero of him if he hadn't parted his hair in the middle and talked with a lisp.

If she could only [illegible] as sensible about them all! But how could she help it—he was so different from anyone she had ever known, and he had been so kind—just cousinly kindness, of course.

"And it's all over now," she thought, "and I will be sensible. I was born to be a teacher, I was trained to be a teacher, and a teacher I will be."

Having freed her mind she swung her chair around with a force that did not augur well for the pranks of the coming boys at Queerville academy, and that provoked a smile from the gentleman behind her, who exclaimed:

"Gently, Cousin Dorothy, you almost demolished one of my pet castles in the air. I know you must have been preparing a harangue for the doctor on—confess now, wasn't it the follies of fashionable life?"

"Where did you come from, Cousin Jack? You certainly were not there when I came into the car. Where were you? And where are you going?"

"Not so fast, Cousin Dorothy! Hasn't the doctor always said that a successful teacher should progress step by step. I tremble for the future of the academy!"

"Don't be foolish, please. Where did you come from?"

"Originally? a merciful Providence alone knows. To-day, you say? From Bar Harbor, madam."

"Where are you going?"

"To Boston—if it please you. Can't I go to the head now?"

"I don't understand," said Dorothy, petuantly.

"But you can't blame me for that. I'll help you all I can.

"You see, with my natural modesty I kept aloof from your giddy party on the boat, and at Rockland there were so many tears shed and such sad farewells said that I really could not intrude. I took my chair after the train started and then you—"

"Yes."

"Oh, yes. Then you were lost in such deep meditation that you ignored me until—yes, you certainly did. You flung yourself at me, Cousin Dorothy. What do you suppose the doctor would say?"

"I don't know. You'll have ample opportunity to ask him yourself in Boston."

"Perhaps—but you really did not think I would let you go without saying good-by, did you?"

"I thought we said it all last night. Didn't you say you should see me as soon as you reached Boston? And didn't I tell you you would be quite out of your element in Queerville?"

"Exactly, we are of one mind, Cousin Dorothy. I mean that is just what I think about you, only I didn't muster up courage enough to say so last evening.

"But when you looked so sad just now, dear. I couldn't help feeling jubilant; weren't you a just bit sorry at leaving us?"

"Why, Cousin Jack, how can you? If I weren't sorry I'd be the most miserable creature alive. What has not Cousin Mildred done for me?"

"Confound it! I say, Dorothy, that isn't fair, you know. I didn't mean mother. Can't you say you're sorry to leave me?" His voice was scarcely audible to her above the rumble of the train. "Can't you say you'll come back soon to stay with me forever? You know how much I love you, dear."

"Oh, Jack!"

The look that accompanied her reply must have meant much to Jack, for a blissful silence ensued while he beat a triumphant tattoo on the arm of his chair and Dorothy again peered out of the window at the sympathetic landscape. Suddenly she exclaimed:

"But Jack, what will Cousin Mildred say? And what will papa do about the academy?"

"My dearest, don't you know the mater is longing to have you for her daughter! We're such a woefully ignorant family we need a little academical training."

Now there is no possible chance of an Adams again being "master" of Queerville academy, for Dorothy is now Cousin Jack's wife, and her name, of course, isn't Adams.—Boston Globe.

His Question Was Answered.

A rather vulgar personage, who had been created a marquis a few months previous to our story, managed to get himself invited to a court ball. The new fledged marquis could not contain himself for joy, and exhaled proud satisfaction at every pore. Casting an Olympian glance around the room, he chanced to spy among the ladies the tall, angular figure of an elderly matron, with compressed lips, as though afraid of wasting her breath, and as lean as a lath. She was leaning on the arm of a young gentleman. "Who is that nanny-goat?" said the noble lord to a gentleman who was standing beside him. And the latter replied with a knowing smile: "That nanny-goat is the ambassadress of S——, the mother of the kid who is giving her his arm, and the wife of the old buck who has the honor of speaking with your excellency."—Il Goivedi.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermotor. Where one goes others follow and we "Take the Country." Though sold, we are unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often stand 8 weeks to be filled. But now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

It. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions of relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pay Freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb—the Steel Tilting Tower; and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

The Tecumseh Herald.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

BY FORCE OF IMPULSE.

The G. A. R. Entertainment last Thursday evening was an unqualified success. The play itself was a good one, it was splendidly cast and it was very finely presented. A better amateur theatrical has not been given in Tecumseh for many a day. The fact that the proceeds were for the benefit of the G. A. R. relief fund doubtless had some effect in stimulating the attendance, but a good crowd would have witnessed [illegible] The opera house was crowded and the interest was [illegible] to the end. The play is a military drama, in which comedy and tragedy love and villainy are intermingled in proper proportion. It contains many thrilling passages and some fine tableaus.

The Stern Puritan, was fully portrayed with Levi B. Thompson in that role. His part, though not a lengthy one, was one of the leading characters and he filled it in a manner that pleased all.

Capt. Will H. Hayden played the young hero to perfection. He is personally adapted to such a part and he entered into the spirit of it with a keen relish.

Geo. S. VanTyne was scored against the female sex, that is he was in the play. We surmise that he was only "making believe," but he assumed the part very easily and naturally.

The same might be said of Henry J. Sweet. He is not half as big a scoundrel as he pretended to be on the stage. The villain is a disagreeable and difficult character to assume, but he seemed to appreciate the true invariableness of it and carried it out completely.

The true soldier was finely portrayed by Will J. Ingersoll. He appeared only in two camp scenes but the measure quantity of his acting was fully made up in its quality.

The effeminate lawyer was brilliantly handled by J. W. Wightman. A better man could not have been found for that particular part. Many of the best situations resulted from Mr. Dunlap's actions as a lawyer and he made the most of them.

R. S. Moore as Dick Bold from college did well. Those portraying the title was literally another. Actors in minor parts were [illegible]

Gen. Davidson, Mrs. [illegible] say so. If Gen. [illegible] could have witnessed the performance of his namesake he would have appeared on the scene. His comely form never was [illegible] never saw him to better.

Although Lawyer Dunlap's letter from Flint was carried in a very humorous and attractive manner by Miss [illegible] Mead. Taken as a whole the theatrical honors [illegible] to the ladies. Miss Mead and her assistants [illegible] were all that could be desired. She has a natural [illegible] talents of a high order.

The [illegible] was [illegible] out. The [illegible] was rendered in a very fine manner by Miss [illegible] Hopkins, and the ancient melody of Auld Lang Syne and Blasted Heather was most appropriately given by Miss Edith Ingerson. It is difficult to see how Anastasia could change her dress more quickly and completely, but she managed to do it to the entire satisfaction of the audience.

The "extras" between acts added very much to the general interest of the play. The country dances by the lads and lasses was a very pretty feature. Chas. Joslin favored the audience with a vocal solo which showed that he has lost none of his musical taste and ability since leaving Tecumseh. The quartette, "They've gathered them into the army" brought down the house, as it deserved, the patios of the piano being too exhuberant for anything. The orchestra, led by Geo. Knapp, with Edith Ingersoll as pianist, filled the gaps with some fine instrumental selections. They never played better and that is praise enough. The financial results were also satisfactory, the gross receipts being about $100. This will pay all necessary expenses and leave a good balance in the G. A. R. treasury. The members of the Post are much gratified at the success of the affair.

The Exhibition number of Scribner's Magazine is the contribution which the conductors of that periodical make to the great Exposition at Chicago. They have planned to make it as fine an example of an American magazine as can be produced. It is put forth as a representative number to show the literary, artistic and mechanical resources that are employed in such a publication, and is fully representative of the individual writers who have made the existence of a great magazine possible. This issue contains nearly one-third more matter than the regular numbers of Scribner's, and the illustrations are of extraordinary abundance and richness, including twenty-five full pages, two of them in colors, the frontispiece being a reproduction of a pastel by Robert Blum.

That staunch pirate, the David Bennett Hill, has captured a new coaling station. It is located at Albany and is and is known as the Albany Argus.

STILL IN THE LEAD.

Through the kindness of one of our Tecumseh students at Ann Arbor, we have received a copy of the University Calendar for 1892-93. The University has maintained its reputation as the greatest educational institution in the country. Not only is the number of students larger than last year, but the curriculum places it on the level with the best. Among the new departures noticed in the calendar is that devoted to the graduate school, a department which has been lacking heretofore but is now established on a basis that insures students the best advantages in original research. In the past the university has conferred the advance degrees [illegible] students residing in absentia, but after the present year [illegible] discontinued, excepting upon such students as are already doing this work. The University has 109 schools in the west that have passed satisfactory examinations and whose diplomas from which admission will be given to the literary department without examination. This list includes all the leading schools in the west and send hundreds of students there annually.

The teaching force of the university comprises 197 members. The calendar shows 4,968 names on the rolls and after deducting thirty-five names counted in more than one department, leaves 4,773 students in actual attendance, divided through the departments as follows: Literary department, 1470. Medical department, [illegible] Law department, 600; school of pharmacy, 70; homeopathic medical college, 60; dental college, 139.

The University of Michigan has in the past prided itself on being not only a state but a national and international university and the showing made this year sustains its reputation. Of the total number of students, 1,405 hail from Michigan, the remainder registering from forty-three states and territories of this country and from seventeen foreign countries and provinces.

The following students are registered from this county:

The next number of Harper's Weekly, published May 10th, will be largely devoted to the illustration of subjects connected with the opening of the World's Columbian Exhibition. It will be remarkable both for the attractive quality of its contents and for the amount of matter presented. Among the most striking attractions will be a four-page illustration by Nichols, giving a general view of the Exposition from the lake, and of the Peristyle as seen from the Grand Court; an illustration of the Liberal Arts Building; a view of the German Village; a picture by Graham of Midway Plaisance; illustrations of the Golden Doorway of the Transportation Building, and of the Central Power Plant & next to Machinery Hall, etc.

THE FINANCIAL DIFFICULTY.

Facts Which Condemn the Republican Financial Policy.

When an imminent danger threatens, the first thing to do is to avert it. It is time enough to inquire into the causes of the danger afterwards.

This is plainly the right policy in regard to the existing financial difficulty. But the organs of the discarded republican party are laboring to impeach the sense and the patriotism of a great majority of the people by assertions that "about money the democratic party is not to be trusted," and that the "heavy loss of gold" is occasioned by the fact that "an overwhelming prejudice within the democratic party favors silver payments."

It is due to the truth of history to meet this misrepresentation at once with a plain statement of incontestable facts:

1. When the democratic administration came into power, on the 4th of March, the "heavy loss of gold" under republican rule had left but $987,000 of "free gold" in the treasury, whereas when the democrats went out of power four years before the amount of free gold above the $100,000,000 reserve turned over to Mr. Harrison was $97,874,422.

2. There has been no democratic clamor in favor of silver payments. On the contrary, Senators Voorhees and Cockrell, prominent advocates of free coinage, have approved the determination of the administration to pay in gold.

3. The most active cause of the present difficulty is the republican silver act of 1890, under which, as Secretary Carlisle says, "the government has been and now is paying gold for silver bullion and storing the silver in the vaults, where it is as useless for any purpose of circulation or redemption as iron, lead or any other commodity."

4. The suggestion of and authority for silver redemption are contained in this same republican law, which directs the secretary of the treasury to "coin of the silver bullion purchased under this act as much as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of the treasury notes herein provided for."

In fixing responsibility stick to the facts. But first of all, let all good citizens sustain the government's policy to maintain the public credit and keep the public faith.—N. Y. World.

HARRISON AS LECTURER.

His War Policy Will Have to Undergo a Change.

Ex-President Harrison's services have been secured as a lecturer on international law at the Stanford university in California, and Senator Stanford is reported as saying that he "had an abhorrence of war, and had suggested to Gen. Harrison that in his lectures he should devote himself to any extent he desires to arguments for peace and arbitration." It will be interesting to hear Gen. Harrison lecture in favor of arbitration, considering how much he did when in power to uphold, in his dealings with Chili, that view of national honor which makes arbitration, as a means of settling international disputes, difficult. The Chilians were in great trouble when the Valparaiso riot occurred; there was no reason for believing that the government authorized or approved of it, or were reluctant to punish the rioters. There was no doubt of our capacity to conquer the country in a single campaign, if we chose. The case was one, therefore, which eminently called for delay, and patience and forbearance, for, in short, the display of faith in peaceful methods. President Harrison, however, from the very first, permitted the navy department to shower threats on the Chilians, in such volume as to make it very difficult for a high-spirited people to apologize and make amends, and to commit the American press and public to a war policy towards a small feeble power. His getting in a war message on Monday because, he had no telegram on Saturday is fresh in every body's memory. Should he come out now as a supporter of arbitration, we trust that he will bear in mind that a peaceful, peace-loving state of the public mind is necessary to make arbitration successful, and that to produce this state the duelistic view of honor has to be laid aside. It was as difficult to persuade people, when they found we had a nice new navy, that honor did not require us to fight the Chilians promptly last year, as it would have been to convince a South Carolina gentleman in 1859 that as good gentlemen as he here at the north kept their honor in good condition without either occasionally shooting at anybody or being occasionally shot at. In short, in order to have peace or peaceful modes of settling differences, we have to cultivate a peaceable disposition.—N. Y. Post.

Carlisle's Backing.

Democrats understand very well the pressure to which Secretary Carlisle is subjected by the millionaires and gold speculators, and he will find all democrats ready to support him in carrying out a just and honest policy. He need not ask from these insolent and dictatorial people a single dollar either as a loan or as a favor. If he wants another hundred million in gold, or if he needs two hundred million or three hundred million, to do what the plutocrats call "maintaining the public credit," the democratic party and the democratic congress will see that he gets it. Let him give these people to understand that it is inconsistent with the dignity of the United States under democratic administration to beg from them or to accept favors from them and that it is inconsistent with both law and justice to borrow from them to help them corner money against the people. He can rely on it that the democratic congress will give the treasury all the gold that can possibly be called for.—St. Louis Republic.

——Senator Cullom, of Illinois, is rallying around the flag which was lowered at Hawaii. The senator is always ready to rally in times of peace.—St. Louis Republic.

ACT OF A FIEND.

He Assaults a Ten-Year-Old Girl in Detroit.

Leaving His Victim in a Vacant House, She Tries to Escape Through a Hole in the Floor and Is Found Hanging There Dead.

NO CLEW TO THE BRUTE.

DETROIT, May 5.—An old building at No. 109 Welch avenue, formerly a church, is being remodeled. Wednesday morning when the workmen resumed operations the body of a 10-year-old girl named Millie Narkeweth, whose parents live at No. 85 Hammond avenue, was found wedged in a hole in the floor. The upper half of her body protruded head downward through the ceiling of the first story. Inquiry at the home of the girl's parents showed that she came from school about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and went to pick up kindlings and blocks for firewood in the house where she met her death.

Dr. R. J. Kelly, county physician, made a post mortem and found that the unfortunate child had been the victim of an outrageous assault and had died from the effects of strangulation. The theory of the officials is that the child went into the house and was followed by some fiend, who at once caught her by the throat to prevent her screaming. The child's throat and neck have the marks of finger nails, and were blackened and bruised. There was a desperate struggle. Nearly every particle of clothing was torn from her body, and the fresh plaster on the wall was broken by her falling against it. Every part of her body bore some mark of the terrible struggle through which she had passed and her face had been battered almost out of human shape.

The upstairs room in which she was found had a door fastened with a snap lock, but there was no door knob to open this, and once inside a person was a prisoner unless some means for springing the lock was devised. One theory is that the frightened child escaped from her assailant and fled to the room, shutting the door behind her. Then taking the metal rim out of the stove pipe hole she attempted to escape by squeezing her slender body through it. She went down as far as the armpits, and while in that position could not even breathe, so tightly were her lungs pressed together. There she died, unable to utter one cry for help. Another theory is that the brute who assaulted her forced her body into the hole, after he had choked the life out of her, to attempt to conceal his crime. The child was large for her age, and rather weak-minded. There is no clew to the murderer.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Proceedings of the Senate and House During the Week.

LANSING, May 2.—In the senate the bill providing for the inspection of factories under the supervision of the commmissioner of labor was tabled, as it lacked one vote to pass it. The house committee of the whole passed the bill providing for a food and dairy commissioner. His to be appointed by the governor for a term of two years at a salary of $1,200 per annum. There will also be a state analyst, who is to receive fees not to exceed $1,000 per year.

LANSING, May 3.—The senate committee on finance and appropriations made a favorable report on the house bill appropriating $2,000 for the Michigan educational exhibit at the world's fair, and a similar report on the bill making the one-sixth of a mill tax for the support of the university available for 1893. This will avoid the necessity for making a specific appropriation for this institution this year. The salary bill reported out by the judiciary committee increases the salary of the auditor general from $2,600 to $3,000, state treasurer from $800 to $2,000, and attorney general from $2,500 to $3,000. The committee on taxation recommended the passage of Senator Doran's inheritance tax bill. Should the bill be passed it is expected that $200,000 will come into the treasury each year from the inheritance tax of 5 per cent. on personal property over $5,000.

In the house bills were passed amending the general game law, protecting Antwerp or homing pigeons. It also passed the anti-Pinkerton bill, which provides that a man shall be a resident of a county three months before he can be appointed a deputy sheriff. The bill providing for a state food and dairy commission, which passed the committee of the whole Tuesday, was killed on its third reading, but the vote was reconsidered and there is little doubt that the measure will eventually become a law.

LANSING, May 4.—In the house a joint resolution for the submission of a constitutional amendment granting female suffrage was tabled. The senate bill providing that the one-sixth mill tax in support of the university be made available for 1893 and 1894 was passed, also the bill authorizing the city of Grand Rapids to bond for $800,000 for improving Grand river.

The senate passed the bill which provides that habitual drunkards, upon arrest, must either pay a fine, go to the workhouse or give bond that they will go to some reliable gold cure institution and be deprived of their appetite for liquor.

LANSING, May 5.—The republican members of the house caucused Friday on the final adjournment, and discussed ways and means of bringing the session to a close the 20th inst., in accordance with the resolution adopted two months ago. It is the determination of the majority not to change the date set for adjournment.

The house in committee of the whole agreed to bills providing that employers of females in stores provide seats for them when not actively engaged; to prohibit unauthorized fire insurance companies from soliciting, writing or issuing policies in the state, and reenacting the law in force prior to the passage of the Miner law for election of presidential electors; also to joint resolutions requiring naturalized citizens to have full naturalization papers to enable them to vote, and amending the law so as to require a residence of twenty instead of ten days in the township or ward, and authorizing inmates of soldiers' homes to vote where the homes are located.

The senate committee on finance has reported the Northern asylum appropriation bill at $55,000 for each of the years 1893 and 1894.

Miss Belle Hogan met with quite a serious accident last Thursday afternoon. She backed her horse out of the Baptist church shed without discovering that the bit was not in the horse's mouth. The horse started to run, and turning St. John's corner came up Main street at a fearful rate. When in front of the Edrose House the buggy struck a post, the horse freeing himself. Miss Hogan was thrown out, striking her head against an electric light pole and cutting a severe gash. She was carried into the hotel and in a short time was able to be taken home. She has quite recovered from the effects of the accident.

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6. Reg. Vol. VII. Bay Stallion, 16 hands; foaled 1884. Bred by Glenview Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:25 without much work. He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. He had 19 sons and 18 daughters that had produced trotters in 1892. 31 of his sons and 25 of his daughters with records from 2:30 to 2:15 1-4. This is the best showing ever made by any sire, living or dead, to date. His sons and daughters produce early and extreme speed. Only one Stallion in the world produced at 4 years old a yearling colt that got a record below 2:30, and that is Woodline by Nutwood.

Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. Lord Russell out of Nutwood's dam got Kremlin, 2:07 3-4, the acknowledged race horse stallion of the world.

Chicago's Victory.

With simple but impressive ceremonies the Columbian World's Fair was declared open on Monday by President Cleveland in the presence of an immense assembly of people—variously estimated by the reporters at from a quarter to half a million persons. The formal presentation to the Nation of the result of the colossal labors of two years marks a memorable historical point of time in the industrial and art development of that Nation. The wonderful story of the rapid growth of the city of Chicago is hardly more remarkable than the construction of this new city by the lake. The four hundred buildings in their seven hundred acres of ground form in themselves a splendid and beautiful exhibition, not only vastly greater but incomparably more beautiful than anything of the kind the world has ever known. The plan of the Exhibition, as a whole, is so well balanced and so fitting to the purpose, so noble and fine architecturally, that it may fairly be called a great work of creative genius. The execution of this general design has been carried on with such incessant application and such an intelligent employment of skill and labor that it is truly a triumph of American industry and constructive force. In these points even the least friendly critics agree. That the first day of May should find the World's Fair complete in every detail was not to be expected; such a thing has happened with no exposition. For the last two or three weeks, when every hour of sunshine was of incalculable value in pushing things forward, Chicago has suffered from almost unexampled bad weather, and the management has struggled forward bravely under the most discouraging circumstances. Many of the deficiencies in preparation should fairly be charged, also, to dilatory exhibitors rather than to the management. The installation of exhibits is a matter capable of being pressed forward with great speed now that the structures are practically complete, and every day will see rapid and substantial advance in this direction. The wonder is that so much could have been done and done so well in two years, not that perfection has not been reached at this time.—Christian Union.

WATERY GRAVES.

A Brother and Sister Drowned in the Detroit River.

A Young Lady Meets a Similar Fate in a River at Grand Rapids—Her Companion Rescued, But He May Possibly Die.

TWO SAD CASES OF DROWNING.

DETROIT, May 8.—Willoughby Compton, aged 19, and his sister Florence, aged 22, were drowned in the Detroit river Sunday afternoon. While in a row boat they tried to cross the towline of a barge, which capsized their craft and threw them into the water.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 8.—Emma Rottman and Cornelius Smallengange took a boat at North park Sunday afternoon for a row on the river. Shortly after leaving the boat Miss Rottman insisted upon rowing. The swift current carried the boat against the crib and Smallengange stuck out his foot to push the boat off and capsized it instead. He grasped Miss Rottman by the hair, but the woman's struggles wore him out and both disappeared beneath the waters. Other boaters seeing the accident rowed to the spot and several men dived for the victims. Smallengange was brought to the shore just alive, but his recovery is doubtful.

THE LANSING BANKS.

The Ingham County Savings Institution to Resume—Application for a Receiver for the Central Michigan.

LANSING, May 7.—The Ingham county savings bank, which closed a couple of weeks ago under pressure from a run caused by the failure of the Lansing iron and engine works and the Lansing Lumber company, will resume business at once. Fifty thousand dollars additional capital has been subscribed which, with a surplus of $50,000, gives a working capital of $150,000. The closing was the result of a panic among the directors, as the bank was entirely solvent, having ample cash and gilt-edged securities in the vaults at the time.

LANSING, May 7.—Judge Person, of the circuit court, who has been asked by State Banking Commissioner Sherwood to appoint a receiver for the defunct Central Michigan bank of this city, withholds his decision upon the ground that the interests involved are so varied and important that he must have more time to consider them.

FOUND GUILTY.

A Life Sentence Awarded George Taylor, Who Murdered Miss Comely at Niles.

BERRIEN SPRINGS, Mich., May 6.—George Taylor, alias Hultz, has been found guilty of the murder of Miss Mary Comely at Niles last December and sentenced to life imprisonment.

[In 1890 Taylor was sent to Jackson prison for two years for larceny, the principal witness against him at that time being Miss Comely. He swore that he would be revenged when his time was up. On December 1 last he was released from prison, and subsequent developments showed that he started west. Early in the evening of December 7 Miss Mary Comely was found dead in her house at Niles with her throat cut from ear to ear, and her head badly crushed. Suspicion was at once directed at Taylor, but he could not be found. Finally he was captured at Goshen, Ind., on January 15. He endeavored to prove an alibi, but failed.]

VETERANS CANNOT VOTE.

Inmates of Soldiers' Homes Not Entitled to Participate in Elections.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 7.—Judge Grove, of the circuit court, has decided in favor of the democrats by ordering a verdict of not guilty for the election inspectors who were arrested for refusing to accept the votes of fifteen inmates of the Michigan soldiers' home. The judge cited a decision of the New York supreme court showing that no man gains or loses a residence by reason of his admission to a state institution, and they were, therefore, not entitled to vote here.

Surprised Their Host.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 7.—Sixteen members of the city council of Marquette, Mich., together with the recorder and press representatives, who have been guests of Mayor Kaufman at the world's fair for a week presented their host with a fine chair at the Richelieu hotel Saturday. The chair is of carved rosewood, richly decorated with tapestry, and bears a silver plate on which are Mayor Kaufman's name, the date and the names of the councilmen. The Marquette party left for home in its special car at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

Won by a Michigan Student.

ANN ARBOR, May 6.—In the intercollegiate oratorical contest at Oberlin, O., Friday night, Lindley Grant Long, of Michigan university, won first prize. His subject was "The Relation of Modern Isms to Progress," under which head he discussed nihilism, anarchism, communism and socialism, in a keen and forcible manner. The young orator lives in Quaker City, O.

PATENTS

FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have obtained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be promptly advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

TWO DAYS ONLY

CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATIONS FREE.

If you are interested in the condition of your eyes, call on the noted Dr. Galleher. He is an expert in his profession. Eyesight is precious—more valuable than any other of the special senses. The Docter has treated in the last 12 months more than 3,500 cases of all forms of eye trouble and errors of refractions, such as Glaucoma, Ulceration of the Cornea, Granulation of the lids, Presbyopia, Paralysis of Accomodation, Spasm of Accomodation, Hypermetrobia, Aphakia, Myopia, Astigmatism, Anisometropia, Strabismus, Diplopia, Asthenopia, etc. Have you ever stopped to think how many people in this world are blind from their own neglegence and carelessness in not giving their eyes attention at the proper time? You now have the opportunity of consulting one who gives all his time in treating cronic eye trouble. Thousands of persons in this world that do not use glasses that should, then again there are thousands of persons using glasses they think suited to their eyes, but the truth of the matter is, the glasses do not correct the trouble, but aggravate it and produce headache, spots before the eyes, inflamation, granulation, winking, trembling spells, various nerve and brain affections, catracts, burning and smarting of the eyes, etc.; entailing not only positive injury to the sight, but untold misery and blindness. Dr. Galleher makes examinations that few in this country can make. He has instruments with which he can examine every muscle and fibre in the inside of the eye. He can tell you in an instant after examining your eyes whether he can benefit you or not, and will truthfully say so. It should be understood that Dr. Galleher is well known throughout the Eastern States as a practical and successful electrionist. He invented some of the finest electrical appliances ever imported to this country. Remember that Dr. Galleher does not give one drop of medicine. He is the only man in America who has the exclusive sale of Dr. Edgar Scott's Positive Catarrh Cure. An instrument put up of Compressed and medicated gasses, which is Dr. S's. own invention. Dr. Galleher also has appliances which will remove a tape worm in from two to four hours or no charges made. Testimonials of the best people in this country at his room at the hotel. The students were amply repaid for the terrors of Prof. Hinsdale's visit of inspection when, in Wednesday morning collection, Prof. White read a communication from President Angell of the University, announcing that our present diploma relations with that institution will be continued.

The Phi Kappa Psi gave a highly interesting public meeting May 19th. The program consisted of solos, declamations, readings, pantomines etc., but the best received production was a paper by Vice President Sutton, whose clear and forcible manner of expression is declared by many to have a striking resemblance to that of the late Dr. Charles Rynd, of Adrian. This paper was a model of elegance, wit, originality and pathos and added lustre to that worthy Junior's already shining crown.

RAISIN RACKET.

Mrs. James Paine is under the doctors care.

Mr. Ellwood Hancock of N. J. visited his uncle, J. Taylor.

Little Harry Osgood has just recovered from the measles.

Mrs. Chamberlin and daughter, of ——, were visiting Cass Miller's family last week.

H. H. Osgood has been quite seriously ill. Dr. Stevenson of Adrian was called last Monday and Tuesday morning he was a little easier.

Representative Holdridge and wife called on F. G. Florence and wife Monday, on their return trip from the Columbian Exposition.

This evening expects to witness the ceremony that will make Alexander McWilliams and Miss Jennie Rainey one. We congratulate the happy pair on their new life.

There seems to be quite a mortality in horses in this section. Last Saturday A. D. Macham lost a horse with the spasmodic colic and Monday Henry McVey lost one with the same disease. Both horses were good work horses and are quite a loss to their respective owners, who valued their beasts at $150 each.

The wind of Tuesday morning did considerable damage in this vicinity. It turned F. G. Florence's gasoline house over on its side and about half a barrel of gasoline was absorbed by the surrounding turf. Jerome Pullman's barn, which he had raised and blocked up about ten feet, was blown off its foundation.

Last Thursday, while unloading goods from a wagon onto a car, Philo Lossing met with a severe accident. He was standing on the whiffletree, helping lift a cupboard, when he lost his balance and fell between the horses. The horses ran, throwing Philo under the wheels in such a way that the wheels passed over his neck and left shoulder. No bones broken but he was shaken and bruised considerably. The horses ran off the depot grounds and turned west, when they were stopped by the cool-headed Dr. Nixon near the blacksmith shop.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Mrs. Thomas Butler is a little better.

Uncle Eb. Harmon is in a critical condition.

The new house on the David Boyl farm is ready for the masons.

A number of Lake Ridge farmers are patronizing the Ridgeway creamery.

Fred McCleary cuts a wide swath nowadays from the arrival of a 12 pound boy.

Mrs. Fred Cordon, of Elkhart, has been visiting friends at Lake Ridge for the past two weeks.

The noted case of Frances Gould in the Washtenaw circuit terminated last week in a verdict of not guilty.

James Osgood and wife of St. Johns, Michigan, and Ed Smith and wife of Lodi, N. Y., attended the 86th birthday anniversary of Grandma Osgood the 17 and are still visiting among the friends.

There will be a Prohib club meeting at Jas. B. Hatch's on Wednesday evening, May 31st, when the good road question will be resumed. Rolt Mills and Wm. Hatch having returned from California and Washington respectively will probably entertain the meeting with their specialties. A full house is desirable.

There is a great demand for cows that do not give milk on Sunday. The question arises, which is the most church like, for women of the household to take care of Sunday milk or the hired man at the creamery? It is more of a vexed question than opening the World Fair. Nature's laws frequently come in contact with many society arrangements.

Cambridge Farmers' Club.

The Club met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Daniels Saturday, May 6th. Though it was the first good day for tilling the soil for some time, yet a good number were in attendance. The program was carried out as follows:

Meeting called to order by the president, A. J. Case.

Singing by the club.

Prayer by the chaplain, A. F. Dewey.

Minutes of April meeting read and business session held.

Paper: Ernest Stafford, subject, "Benefits of a business education."

Duet—Mrs. Hattie Daniels and A. J. Monagin.

Refreshments.

A paper was then read by A. F. Dewey, subject, "Retail versus wholesale buying by farmers' associations."

The gentleman read a very well worded and comprehensive paper, which lack of space prevents being printed in detail.

The paper was discussed by Messrs. Edwin Taylor, C. Cooper, Rogers, Isaac Moshe, A. J. Case, and Mesdames A. F. Dewey and Julia Reed.

Others wanted to speak on this interesting question, but owing to the lateness of the hour the president had to dismiss the meeting.

There are 130 members in the club, showing it to be a successful organization.

ATTENTION, COMPANY C.

ARMORY, May 23, 1893.

Order No. 4

An invitation is extended by Beers Post of Tecumseh to participate with them in Divine services to be held on next Sunday evening, May 28, 1893. You are requested to report at the Armory at 6:30 p. m. in full fatigue uniform.

In accordance with orders from military headquarters you are ordered to parade on May 30th, 1893. Your attention is called to Par. 938, Sec. 71, Laws and Regulations M. S. T., as follows:—"Every non-commissioned officer, musician and private of any company, who shall neglect to appear at any company or regimental parade, shall forfeit and pay the sum of two dollars." While I do not deem it necessary to caution this company in this matter, it should be borne in mind by every member of the State troops. You will therefore report at the Armory at one o'clock p. m. in full dress uniform.

As in years past, it has been our sad duty to decorate with flowers the graves of our dead comrades; so on that day will we consecrate to their memory this remembrance. You will therefore leave with Beers Post such flowers as it may be in your power to obtain. It is hoped that you will lend every aid to the Post and assist them in every possible way on that day.

DEATH'S LITTLE GIRL.

The little girl who died last night was such a pretty child
You would have thought that Death, instead of frowning, would have smiled;
You would have thought that he would like to see her at her play,
And that content with seeing her he'd hurry on his way.

For she was such a little thing, with hair like curling gold,
Just big enough to laugh and play, and merely three years old.
So innocent she tried to catch the sunbeams in her hand—
And why he wanted her himself I cannot understand.

There is a little picture book that grievously is torn,
There is a little shoe I know her little foot has worn,
There is a little Noah's ark, with painted beasts and trees—he take these?

The little girl who died last night, what can she be to him?
For Death is pictured black and stern, and pitiless and grim.
And she knew nothing of such things, for she was bright and fair,
And sweet and tender as the smile that angel faces wear.

O! will she fear when she awakes to such a wondrous change,
And will she cry, as children do, at things she finds so strange?
And will Death care for her as we have cared in other days,
And will he love her as we loved her, in all her genius ways?

And if he will not do these things, oh, tell me, tell me why
He stopped upon his way last night, instead of passing by?
And if he loved her less than we, from whom she now is gone,
Why didn't he just leave her here and hurry quickly on?

THAT YELLOW CUSHION.

Its Contents Gave a Start to a Foolish Couple.

It was a sofa cushion of faded yellow silk, badly stained in half a dozen places and clumsily ripped down one edge. A handsome buhl cabinet was its resting place and it stood in the smaller drawing-room.

Everything else around was handsome and tasteful, the general scheme of the coloring being a brownish red. The bilious staring yellow of that dilapidated cushion was the one lamentable spot and the eye was irresistibly drawn to it.

None of the family ever even mentioned the yellow sofa cushion, though I often noticed one or other of them would turn toward the buhl cabinet and stare at its contents mournfully.

However, the tale came out at last without my asking for it. I was dining at the house one Christmas day, and my host after his glass and said:

"My dear, in remembrance of the old yellow cushion, the best Christmas box we ever had," and then the pair of them drank the toast.

Nothing more was said then, but afterward in the small drawing room my hostess nodded toward the buhl cabinet and asked if I knew the history of its curious contents. I said: "No." She seemed surprised.

"I thought Douglas (her husband) had told you the story years ago, but as he hasn't I'll take upon myself to do it now. It will be something to talk about, and we old folks are often hard put to it to find subjects for conversation.

"Now, you always took us for rich squatters from Australia, didn't you? Perhaps, then, if you didn't know you'll be surprised to hear that we had another life before that, a life in the whirl of society in London, a life as different from the other as possibly could be invented or even imagined.

"We married very young, Douglas and I. He was just of age and I was only eighteen when we set up housekeeping on our own account, and I'm afraid we were both very, very heedless. We'd got plenty of money, and our one idea was to have as good a time as possible.

"We went everywhere, did everything and lived in ducal magnificence. The expenses we were let into were something awful to contemplate and our limited income went no way to meet them; but to withdraw from the scene was a thing which we were far too young and happy and foolish even to think of, so we kept on dipping into the capital time after time 'only just for this once.'

"It will complete the sum of our foolishness when I tell you that jewelry was one of our greatest extravagances. I doted on gems, and Douglas loved to see me wear them; he said that I set them off so well, and so they were a good investment, or something usually witty. And we got more and more hard up and had fewer and fewer resources to draw upon; and yet we gave small thought for the future then, so happy was our present.

"One morning a crash came. We woke up to find out that my jewel box had been plundered. By afternoon all London was ringing with the news of the robbery. It was so odd in its details. Nothing but stones had been taken away. The gems had been forced from the settings and the battered goldwork left littered in an untidy heap.

"Under the public attention which watched their efforts, the police authorities strained every nerve. They searched the house for signs from cellar to garret. They watched suspicious persons. They had theories innumerable. They confidently expected to lay hands on the thief to-morrow.

"But nothing came of it. The daily bulletins in the papers became shorter, and at length ceased; and in a month's time we ourselves had given up all hope of seeing the jewels again. Torn from their settings they would be easily carried away and disposed of; and, moreover, it was probable that most of them had been reground, so as to remove the faintest chance of identification.

"To any couple possessed of the least grain of sense the loss would have been a warning, but to us it seemed only a spur to new extravagance. Douglas said life would be unendurable without new jewelry, and I agreed with him. So we started to replace what had been lost. And, oh, what fools, silly, silly fools we were! What's the use of repeating a tale of such follies? We spent all, and then, worse still, were owing money. There was a bankruptcy and a shameful selling up of our stock and sticks at the beginning of the winter season.

"Everything and everybody seemed against us then. At the sale things we had given pounds for went for as many pence; and the proceeds were all snatched up by the creditors. After 10 our relations wrote firm letters to say that they washed their hands of us.

"Douglas had been brought up to no profession and knew no trade. We couldn't tell what to do. We were penniless; we were in despair; we were unable to keep even those humble [illegible] was awful.

"Then a curious note reached us, written in a straggling, scratchy hand, and signed by the man who till recently had been our butler. It was worded half in the third person, half in the first, and was so painfully respectful in places that the sense was almost lost. The writer had taken a liberty, a great liberty, but he could not help seeing how things had been going for some months past. He hoped we should pardon his presumption in seeing.

"Further, he had done a thing that it was not his place to do at all. He had taken upon himself to interfere with our affairs—which was a great liberty—for which he craved pardon, but knew from experience how hard it was to get a new place after leaving an old one without money.

"And so he sent a sofa cushion, bought at the sale, which he would most respectfully beg us to accept. The cover was not worn much, but the inside was valuable. If we ripped up the silk we should see. After which, hoping no offense, he was our most obedient and obliged servant to command.

"A yellow silk cushion came with the letter. Douglas stared at it up and down, not understanding. 'Was the man mad, do you suppose, or drunk,' said he, 'when that letter was written?' 'He's underlined "rip the silk,"' said I. 'Then ripped it shall be,' replied Douglas, and brought out his knife.

"And, then, what do you think? In and among the rest of the fluffy eider-down were some two score of little balls of feathers tied around with fine cotton. Douglas opened one and found a diamond. I took another and a great emerald dropped into my hand.

"And then I began laughing and crying and behaving so stupidly that I had to lie down on the sofa and turn my face away from the white heap of down in the middle of the carpet.

"But after a bit I pulled myself together again, and Douglas showed me his gleanings. There was a terrible handful—diamonds, rubies, emeralds and more diamonds and more rubies, and a great opal that gleamed and burnt in the lamplight like a blaze of colored fires.

"Then a thought struck me and I gasped out a faint question as to whether they were really ours.

"'Yes,' said Douglas, 'all yours. We paid our creditors to the last penny and it ruined us to do it. Now we must start afresh, and, thank Providence and an honest, thoughtful servant, we've got something to begin upon. In the first place, they will provide us with passage money to Australia, and I don't think we shall be quite penniless when we land.'

"Well, we went. Douglas became a great squatter, the owner of many miles of country and of a million sheep, and we made happy investments. And what we won was not fettered away in jewelry or in stupid emulation of people richer than ourselves."

There was a silence for some minutes, and then I asked about the man who had stolen for his master's future benefit, the precious gems.

"Didn't I tell you? Why, he waited on you at dinner to-night. We hunted him out when we came back and wanted to do something big for him. We could well afford it, you know. And, moreover, felt very grateful.

"But he's a most eccentric person. He wouldn't accept anything. 'If we'd pardon the liberty he'd taken that was all he would ask, unless, indeed, he might come into our service. What queer people there are in the world, aren't there?'"—Chicago Post.

By Impulse.

Detroit has a bachelor of the compulsory sort, but Detroit won't have him long, for another fair one has claimed him as her own. He has been disappointed so many times that lately he has been almost impetuous in his attentions. She is a widow and an improvement on all her predecessors in his heart. The matter was settled a week ago in a rather roundabout way. They had been talking on women in general.

"You think," he said, "that woman is prone to jump at a conclusion?"

"I certainly do," she responded earnestly.

"And you are like all the others?"

"Possibly so."

A great thought came to him then, a thought which in imperial minds would develop into a coup d'etat.

"Would I were a conclusion," he sighed, with such a sigh that within five minutes two hearts were consolidated.—Detroit Free Press.

Looked Like a Natural Sequence.

A queer coincidence occurred in one of the city churches last Sunday. During the service one of the ushers notified a physician in the congregation that a call had been made for him in the vestibule. The doctor bounced out with hat and overcoat, and was soon on his way to see a patient. About ten minutes later the usher walked down the aisle until he came opposite a well-known undertaker. There was a whispered word or two, and the undertaker hurried out. It was not the same case, but he followed the doctor, and a broad smile floated out over the congregation.—Atlanta Journal.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED.

Public Faith Has Withstood Cowardly Republican Attacks.

It is a credit to the people of this country that all the petty attempts to create a financial flurry and precipitate a disastrous crisis have been unavailing. Never before has the spirit of party malignity more recklessly asserted itself. The relations of the president and the cabinet have been misrepresented, and an open rupture between them made to appear as imminent. Republican organs have exerted their influence to create a want of confidence and to arouse the financial interests of the west against those of the east. There has been a well-defined purpose to injure the administration in the eyes of the country, no matter what disastrous consequences might ensue. But public faith has withstood the cowardly assault because firm in the belief that those who have been placed at the head of affairs will do that which is wisest and best for the good of the government and the people.

The recent meeting of the secretary of the treasury and the bankers of New York removed any disturbing doubts that may have been created in the minds of the business men and the financiers of the country. It threw light upon phases of the question that were before obscure, and corrected misunderstandings that had arisen. It brought out clearly the fact which some have affected to doubt, that the secretary and the bankers have the same object in view, and are entirely agreed as to the necessity of repealing the silver act of 1890 as the only complete remedy for existing evils. There were some differences of view as to the details of the action probably required in the interval before this repeal can be achieved; but they are anxious to cooperate with each other in the most cordial manner.

These facts are of the utmost importance, because it is plain that no financial policy can be successful which, on the one hand, has not the approval of the secretary, and on the other does not meet the requirements of the large commercial and financial interests represented by the bankers. Secretary Carlisle has shown a clearer conception of the situation and its demands than some even of his friends were willing to concede to him. He has also recognized the responsibility of the bankers as trustees for the greater part of the business of the whole country, a matter which in itself is of primary importance. With amicable cooperation secured, and with the known broad and well-considered views of President Cleveland, the country can look forward to the difficulties which must be met with confident assurance that they will be overcome without serious consequences to the business interests of the country.—Detroit Free Press.

CLEVELAND'S FINANCIAL POLICY

A Declaration Which Leaves No Room for Doubt or Uncertainty.

The following authoritative statement by President Cleveland clears the financial atmosphere. It follows up specifically the pledge of the inaugural address. It meets boldly a situation which has thrown into uncertainty many positive men. The president says:

"The inclination on the part of the public to accept newspaper reports concerning the intentions of the officers charged with the management of our national finances seems to justify my emphatic contradiction of the statement that the redemption of any kind of treasury notes, except in gold, has at any time been determined upon or contemplated by the secretary of the treasury or any other member of the present administration. The president and his cabinet are absolutely harmonious in the determination to exercise every power conferred upon them to maintain the public credit, to keep the public faith and to preserve the parity between gold and silver and between all financial obligations of the government.

"While the law of 1890 requiring the purchase of a fixed amount of silver every month provides that the secretary of the treasury, in his discretion, may redeem in either gold or silver the treasury notes given in payment of silver purchases, yet the declaration of the policy of the government to maintain the parity between the two metals, seems so clearly to regulate this discretion as to dictate their redemption in gold.

"Of course, perplexity and difficulties have grown out of an unfortunate financial policy which we found in vogue and embarrassments have arisen from ill-advised financial legislation, confronting us at every turn, but, with cheerful confidence among the people and a patriotic disposition to cooperate, threatened dangers will be averted, pending a legislative return to a better and sounder financial plan. The strong credit of the country, still unimpaired, and the good sense of our people, which has never failed in time of need, are at hand to save us from disaster."—Albany Argus.

—The emphatic statement of the president as to the determination to continue the payment of the treasury notes in gold will set at rest the doubts which the timid ones have had as to the policy of the administration in that regard. The statement is of value in another aspect. It calls attention to the fact that the existing trouble concerning which his republican critics are so voluble is of republican origin. It is the Sherman law more than any other agency more indeed than all others combined that has brought about the present situation. The practical effect of that measure has been to expand the government to exchange its gold for silver, and it was idle to expect that this could be continued indefinitely without depleting seriously, if not dangerously, the stock of gold.—Detroit Free Press.

—The democratic administration turned over to its republican successor four years ago nearly ten times as much free gold as it received back from Secretary Foster last March. And yet the republican organs assert that a return to the old regime is necessary to restore "confidence!"—N. Y. World.

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Jno. J. Orr, Druggist.

For the month of June "American Gardening presents a varied bill of fare, beginning with a sketch of our "Furthermost Corner," in which James K. Reeve describes Coronado Beach, of Southern California. O. C. Simonds and James MacPherson have taken thought for the comfort of the young people who play tennis and other outdoor games by giving some clear and practical plans for the improvement of social playgrounds. E. A. Long this month considers the need of small front yards and large gardens in a paper that should be of great value to the mass of cozy home-gardners. New methods of "Commercial Fruit Evaporation," and "Short-Span-to-the-South Greenhouses" are thoroughly discussed for the benefit of progressive people by the pioneers in such movements. The frontispiece is a faithful portrait of Vitis vulpina, our native forest or river bank grape, and an accompanying sketch, by the editor, sets forth its history, lineage, and uses. A GOLD MINER DISCOVERS SOMETHING MORE PRECIOUS THAN GOLD

A REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM AND KIDNEY TROUBLE WHICH WORKED WONDERS, AFTER EVERY OTHER REMEDY, INCLUDING A "SWEAT" TREATMENT WITH THE INDIANS FOR A YEAR, HAD FAILED TO RELIEVE.

A STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

Crook City, S. D., Jan. 23, 98.

The Owen Electric Belt and Appliance Co., Chicago, Ill.:

Gentlemen—I have been for some time considering the propriety of writing to you a few lines, relative to my experience with the Owen Electric Belt and Appliance obtained from you about eighteen (18) months ago. Justice to your company, and a desire on my part to make known to others who may be suffering from a similar affliction the relief I obtained from your institution, prompt me to send to you a voluntary statement of my case.

I am a gold miner by occupation, and have been for many years. I crossed the plains to California in 1852, and since then have been in most of the prominent mining camps in the then territories of Oregon, Washington, British Columbia, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, and at present in Dakota. Leading the rough and exposed life incidental to my occupation, caused me to fall a victim to rheumatism which finally utterly prostrated me in Helena, Mont., in '65." I was under the best medical treatment obtainable in Montana for one year, with but slight improvement, and was finally advised to live among the Indians, and subject myself to their "sweat" treatment. This I did and remained with them about a year, obtaining only temporary relief.

Since that time I have been a chronic sufferer—suffering pain and torture indescribable almost continually. It would be useless to attempt to describe my sufferings. It must be sufficient to state that I suffered from rheumatism in its worst form. I have spent large sums of money, changed climate, visited Hot Springs, lived alternately in high and low altitudes, and employed the best medical advice obtainable, hoping to alleviate, if not cure my complaint. It was all to no purpose, and I had about despaired of ever recovering fully my shattered health, when my attention was called to the Owen Electric Belt by a fellow miner, Mr. J. C. Johnson, of Creek City, who was also suffering from rheumatism, and who claimed to have derived great benefit from a belt obtained from you. I had tried so many remedies that I was fairly discouraged and skeptical about obtaining relief from any source, but finally determined it was my duty to give your appliance a trial. I will also state right here that, since coming to the town, I have also suffered greatly from kidney disease.

At last I sent for one of your belts, and applied it carefully, according to the printed directions accompanying the same, and can now truthfully say, as I now do to you, that I am no longer troubled with my kidneys, that I am entirely free from rheumatism, and I consider my health as perfect. All this I consider is owing to your valuable and priceless Owen Electric Belt, and I feel I am only performing a duty and paying a deserved tribute to Dr. Owen in sending this unsolicited statement of my case for his information.

Sincerely your friend,

John Mulvany,
Crook City, Lawrence Co., S. D.

Cures Others

Will cure You, is a true statement of the action of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, when taken for diseases originating in impure blood; but, while this assertion is true of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, as thousands can attest, it cannot be truthfully applied to other preparations, which unprincipled dealers will recommend, and try to impose upon you, as "just as good as Ayer's." Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's only, if you need a blood-purifier and would be benefited permanently. This medicine, for nearly fifty years, has enjoyed a reputation, and made a record, for cures, that has never been equaled by other preparations. AYER'S Sarsaparilla eradicates the taint of hereditary scrofula and other blood diseases from the system, and it has, deservedly, the confidence of the people.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

"I cannot forbear to express my joy at the relief I have obtained from the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with kidney troubles for about six months, suffering greatly with pains in the small of my back. In addition to this, my body was covered with pimply eruptions. The remedies prescribed failed to help me. I then began to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and, in a short time, the pains ceased and the pimples disappeared. I advise every young man or woman, in case of sickness resulting from impure blood, no matter how long standing the case may be, to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla."—H. L. Jarmann, 33 William st., New York City.

A KITCHEN ROMANCE.

How Phil Made Delia Say "Yes" to an Important Question.

Delia was sitting in her rocking-chair in a corner of the kitchen, reading aloud to the other two girls. Maggie was mending a stocking, and Bridget was making a dress out of a piece of calico which Mrs. Randol had given her. Delia had found Sir Charles Grandison in the course of her clearing up, and it amazed the two older girls to hear her excited intonations and marvelous pronunciation, as it would have amazed Mr. Richardson himself. Delia was a nice-looking girl, and she was intelligent; her choice of books being, as we have seen, faultless. The other girls were older and stouter, but they had not outgrown their taste for romance, and they listened [illegible] what they could understand.

A dark shadow appeared at the window. Delia stopped reading long enough to say: "It's only Phil Crowley; never mind him," and then continued. Mr. Crowley saw that he was discovered, and entering the kitchen, took a chair with a nod of recognition to his three hostesses, while Delia went on. "And that will do for to-night," she said, at last, putting the book down with the consciousness that her auditors would like to hear more, but stopping because — well, because she pleased. Delia was an autocrat.

You might have expected the visitor to begin a conversation, but no, Phil Crowley looked at Delia in an admiring way, but never opened his mouth. Maggie soon went off to bed; but Delia persuaded Bridget to stay, "just to be kind o' respectable," she said; "not that Phil an' me ain't all right alone."

So Bridget sat at her work, growing sleepier and sleepier, and there was a pause for awhile. Finally Phil spoke in an earnest whisper, leaning forward and looking hard at Delia:

"I come up to-night, Delia, 'cause—well, 'cause I couldn't help it; an' I might as well tell ye all about it. Sure I can't sleep o' nights for thinkin' of ye, an' I think more of ye than all the world, an'—an'—d'ye think ye can ever care a bit for me, Delia?"

Delia looked quickly round at Bridget, who was dozing over her work, and then said: "Aw, Phil, man, what's got into ye? I don't want to marry anyone, an' I'm sure it's not you that I'd take, if I was to choose. Sure ye must 'a been out o' your head when ye said that. Don't try romanticizin', for ye dont' understand it. You're off? Well, good night to ye!"

Phil was already at the door. "Good night, Delia," said he. "I wish ye a pleasanter night an' a better sleep than I'll have, bad luck to me!" Then he turned and went away. Delia sat down again and thought awhile, then she rose. "Come on, Bridget, it's bed time," said she; and the two went upstairs together."

The next evening Delia and Phil were to have gone to a dance given by the Westminster Boat club. As night came on, Delia wondered whether her escort would make his appearance. In the six o'clock mail she received the following letter:

"Miss McGonigle: I can't take you to the Ball to-night as I have somthin else on Hand. As you Won't get very glad to see me last night, marke you don't care. P. CROWLEY."

Delia studied over this a good while. It took her a long time to master the spelling, for, though her own was eccentric, it was very different from Phil's. The meaning, too, puzzled her. One thing was certain; it was not polite. Miss McGonigle, indeed! Something else on hand! Well, Mr. Phil should see that she could get on without him.

She knew a girl in the next house, who was going to the ball, and some hours after receiving Phil's letter she called on this friend and they went together. They were a little late, so that the ball was already begun; and—oh, shameful—there was Phil dancing round in the happiest way with a little girl with red hair. He did not take any notice of Delia when she came into the hall, and she pretended not to look at him. Delia was a favorite, and plenty of young men danced with her; but Phil was not one of them. As to the little girl with red hair, he danced with her a great many times. Everyone sang her praises, except Delia, who was unable to see anything attractive about her.

After the dancing had gone on for several hours, Phil stepped up and asked for a dance. He was a good dancer, but Delia said she had a headache, and then danced with the next man who asked her. She was vexed that Phil had not asked her before and she wanted to punish him. But Phil would not be punished. He danced and laughed in a very lively way, especially with his little red-haired friend, Miss Sullivan, of Dublin, who was certainly the belle of the evening. Delia went home early with the girl who had come with her. She was exhausted and cross, and a man chased them part of the way. She went to bed excited and tired, and one may imagine, without being certain, that Miss Sullivan, of Dublin, played a considerable part in her dreams.

Three days went by in which Delia saw no more of Phil. On the morning of the fourth she awoke with a headache; but rose early and went to church, as she did every day, coming home to do her morning tasks. After breakfast, when Mrs. Randol was giving her orders to Bridget, Delia happened to be downstairs blacking Mr. Randol's boots. She came into the kitchen just as Mrs. Randol was speaking.

"So I think we must have a man to fix the furnace. It is too much for you and Maggie. Do you know of anyone whom we could have, Bridget? O, Delia, don't you know of anyone?"

Delia reflected. "There's a person I know," she said, "who's an honest, straightforward sort o' man. He's a little stupid, but I think he'd do it well, ma'am. I'll tell him, if ye say so, an' he'll be up to-morrer."

"But how do you know that he'll come?" inquired Mrs. Randol. "I can only afford to give him two dollars a week."

"Oh, he'll come, ma'am," said Delia. When her work was done she sat down and wrote as follows:

"DEAR PHIL:

"You was kinder impolite in your last but I thought Ide furgive you just once. Mrs. Randol wants a Man to Fix the ferniss. 2 dols a week. Do you warnt the job? You come up here twice a day. Cawdially yours,

"DELIA."

Delia always omitted her obnoxious second name in her correspondence.

The next day she received a note from Phil:

"DEAR DELIA (If youl excus the familyarity).

"My business is now changed from Old Jobs to Groceries and provisions, 2,83 Market St. All orders from Mrs. R. promptly attended to. No time for Fernisses. Saw Miss Sullivan of Dublin today. She sends love. Never felt so well in me life. Your obt servt

"P. CROWLEY."

The tears were in Delia's eyes when [illegible] whom she had proposed as a furnace fixer would not come. She was too angry to recommend Phil's groceries and provisions.

As the twilight of that day came on, Delia sat at the kitchen window, sewing. She was putting on a button for little Jack Randol, while he looked on. This was just the time of day that Phil Crowley used to drop in; but he had not appeared since the night before the ball. "I don't care; I hope he won't come," said Delia to herself; and her eyes, which were not quite dry, showed how little she did care. Bridget came in, and Jack asked for a piece of gingerbread.

"Oh, I wish ye was married!" said Bridget. She did not mean that Jack had arrived at a suitable age for matrimony, but only that she wished him somewhere else. Before long, she yielded to his persuasive powers, and he departed with his button securely fastened on, and his gingerbread in his hands.

Delia looked up from her work, and out of the window. She could see down a narrow alley to where it joined a larger one, and thus she could, as it were, take an instantaneous photograph of every one who passed along the main alley. She heard footsteps; two figures passed. They were Phil and Miss Sullivan, of Dublin. His arm was round her waist. Delia did not shriek, as actresses do, when their lovers desert them. She only left the kitchen and went up to her own room.

It was more than a week before Phil came to call again. Delia had been schooling herself to the proper coldness of manner every evening that he did not appear; and now, when he really did come, she felt disposed to melt. However, she nerved herself to the encounter, her little heart, I don't doubt, thumping uncomfortably as she entered the kitchen.

"Good evening, Delia," said Phil.

"Good evening," said Delia. "I hope you've enjoyed the last week and a half." She stopped and bit her lip.

Neither spoke again till Bridget had gone out to see to the furnace. Then Delia took a little package from her pocket. "I've got some things for you, Phil," she said, her sternness of manner having entirely disappeared. "I thought ye might want 'em back, now ye don't come here no more." Her eyes began to glisten. "There's these letters ye wrote from Narragansett last summer when ye was drivin' the hack, and here's the bangle and the earrings ye gave me last year." Here she trembled for a moment before her last effort. "I thought Miss Sullivan, of Dublin, might like 'em, an' a poor girl like me's not fit for 'em; an'—an'—an' I hope you an' Miss Sullivan—will be happy—an'—an'—" here poor Delia broke down and began to cry.

Phil came up and took her hand. "Why, Delia, child, d'ye care for me a little bit, thin? I hadn't no idea of it." He was going to put his arm round her, but she withdrew.

"No! Ye musn't," she said, looking at him with gleaming eyes. "She wouldn't like it."

"Delia," says Phil, "just listen to me." Then he goes up and whispers in her ear: "Nellie Sullivan's my half-sister."

Poor Delia is perfectly aghast. "Oh, Phil, Phil," she says, "an' I've gone an' shown ye that I don't quite hate ye arter all."

"Yes, me little girl," says Phil, "an' I shan't forget it now I knows it; but ye can't think the tin-thousandth part o' me that I do o' you." Then, with the eloquence which characterizes his race, he went on: "An' I pray the Almighty God an' all the blessed saints ye may niver suffer like I did for the next twenty-four hours after ye sent me away."

"Twinty-four hours?" said Delia. "Why, twinty-four hours arter that was the night o' the party. Why wasn't ye unhappy thin? Sure, I was cross enough to ye."

"Ah, ye sweet thing, don't ye see that that's how I began to think ye might care just a bit for me arter all?" says Phil. "An' now good-by, Delia, an' before long I'll hope to see ye Mrs. P. Crowley."

"Fine groceries an' provisions," says Delia. "Well, Phil, I guess I'd better say yes, if it's only to change me last name. Crowley ain't very fashionable"—here Phil looked a trifle abashed—"but it sounds Christian an' that's more'n can be said of McGonigle"—Robert Beverly Hale, in Boston Budget.

Butler Wanted the Best.

Gen. Butler liked to be gorgeous. He made his fourth of the country as the people's candidate for the presidency in a magnificent palace car, and when it was suggested that this conveyance was not exactly appropriate to the occasion he informed his critics that he had deliberately chosen this car, and would have got a better one if there was such a thing. "The people like their champion to look well, live well, dress well and to cut as much of a dash as they would if they could," said he. "They come to see the man who asks for their support, and they find him apparently prosperous and happy, and they say to one another: 'That's my candidate. That's the kind of a man who represents me. He's all right.'"—Boston Herald.

DR. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all Dealers in medicine.

OUR MICHIGAN ATHENS.

A Newsy Letter from our University Correspondent.

Perhaps the readers of the Herald who had their attention called to an article in a recent issue relating our University among the first of leading educational institutions, may be interested in learning more about our college life and a few of those events which make a student's four years so enjoyable and beneficial.

Every year we mark further progress and greater advantages in the different lines of work. Especially is this true in the department of music since the organization of the school, which opened with the college year in October, and now has an enrolment of some two hundred pupils. Entertainments have been given frequently, either by the faculty of music or the pupils themselves. The series of five chamber concerts given under the auspices of the University School of Music were most delightful. Three by the Detroit Philharmonic Club and the other two, the Milwaukee Trio and Baxter Perry. The Choral Union with their energetic leader, Prof. Stanley, who is also director of the School of Music, are at present expending extra time and effort on Lohengrin and selections from the Flying Dutchman for the final concert the 31st of May, which they hope to make a fitting conclusion to the series, including The Thomas Orchestra, Max Heinrich, the Messiah, given by the Choral Union before Christmas and the Boston Symphony which appeared for the fourth time in Ann Arbor the evening of the 19th of May, to which concert Prof. Stanley gave added interest and enjoyment by his talks on the program explaining the music and playing the leading motives. The Lecture Association together with the Unity Club and Ireland League have brought to Ann Arbor some of the most prominent men of the day, such as Ingersoll, ex-speaker Reed, Lyman Abbot, Wendling, Henry Watterson and the gifted Whitcomb Riley. One of the most interesting talks we have heard was delivered by Alice Freeman Palmer on the occasion of the annual address of the Student's Christian Association. In her delightfully winning manner she came before the crowded audience in University Hall and for over an hour held the closest attention of her listeners by her simple yet direct and forcible words delivered in the most charming off hand manner.

The many receptions and social gatherings often preceded by short lectures kindly given by different Professors under the auspices of the Woman's League have been very pleasant events and succeeded to a great extent in creating a more kindly social feeling between the Independent and Fraternity and widening their acquaintance among themselves and the ladies of the faculty.

At the present time the subject of Athletics receives its due amount of attention at the hands of enthusiastic students not excepting the co-ed herself. The victories of the U. of M. base ball team in the games with D. A. C. Minnesota and Northwestern have been somewhat overshadowed by the later records made with Cornell and the D. A. C. However we hope for them all success in their western trip which will be concluded in Detroit the 30th with the final contest between Cornell and the U. of M. As the days so quickly come and go the student is only too often reminded of the solemn fact that another college year is almost a thing of the past, and consequently he must make the very most of the good times in store for the next few weeks here at our U. of M.

Some Fine Stereopticon Views.

The Chautauqua Circle, having just completed reading ancient history, were entertained Monday evening at the Presbyterian parlors by a series of stereopticon views of ancient Roman and Grecian buildings, ruins, statuary, and views of historic events. The entertainment was given by Prof. Kellogg, who has been so fortunate as to visit the many halls of art and curios of the Old World and secure a fine collection of photographic plates for illustrating the life and works of the Greeks and Romans. Mr. Kellogg's familiarity with each scene made his explanations interesting as well as instructive. No effort was required to imagine that one was treading the galleries of some museum of art, here pausing awe-stricken by the imposing grandeur of some painting or statue, again before the case containing the mummified remains of a Cleopatra or Rameses, or with a fascinating dread beholding the gladiatorial sports in the bloody arena of the Coliseum.

One hundred and twenty views were given, all of which were highly appreciated. The "Coliseum by Night and by Day," the views of the Parthenon, and the death of Julius Cæsar in the Roman Senate were among the finest in the list.

The Evening News offer of the Encyclopedia Britanica is finding many takers.

THE HEAVY THUNDER STORM.

Tuesday morning about 7:15, black, threatening clouds appeared in the south and west and in a few moments rain fell in torrents accompanied by a tornado, which seemed to split as it neared the village, part going south and part north of the town. There seemed to be little whirl to the wind, but its power was terrific. M. Howard's place, one mile west, received its first introduction to the wind by having a shed roof smashed, the horse barn swung out of line, wind-mill tumbled on top of the house, knocking a corner therefrom, and [illegible] and orchards scattered promiscuously. A row boat on the pond west of the barns was carried over into the turnpike and completely demolished. Mr. Howard places his loss at $200. The wind mill on Frank Bryan's place lost all its slats from the wheel, and trees and fences along the route all started north east. About forty rods of straight rail fence on Mrs. Judge Stacy's place was blown flat to the ground.

Scores of shade trees about the village were badly damaged and some uprooted entirely.

A barn was blown down upon W. E. Gray's place North of the cemetery.

Robert Cairns lost nearly half his orchard, many of his largest and best trees being uprooted bodily.

J. K. Waldron had two barns unroofed, a wind-mill blown down and fences leveled.

At Mrs. John Gordon's place a large number of apple and cherry trees were uprooted or broken off, the barn somewhat damaged, small buildings unroofed and fences leveled.

At A. P. Coddington's several apple and shade trees were ruined, fences laid low, and one of his large barns was badly damaged.

Met. Conklin's wind-mill was blown down and much of line fence leveled, and at least one-half of his orchard is ruined.

Nearly every farm within two or three miles North of the village sustained more or less damage to fences and outbuildings.

The storm extended pretty generally throughout the county, and in some sections did more damage than in this vicinity, being especially severe in the western and southern townships.

The Mackinaw track between Tecumseh and Addison was obstructed in several places by fallen trees.

The school building near Rollin townhouse was wholly demolished.

G. N. Holden's agricultural implement warehouse near Weston, was razed to the ground and made a complete wreck. Some pieces of the roof were carried 15 rods away. The building was valued at $300 and $150 damage was done to the $2,000 stock on hand.

S. W. Withington's new house that was about ready for occupancy is completely destroyed, as was J. J. Morris' new barn. The post office was slightly damaged.

The new barn on Cal. Crane's farm, two miles south of the city, was demolished, and report says one building was picked up and carried from one lot into another.

A barn on the farm of Mrs. Fannie Hill, near Baker's corners, was also destroyed.

The storm seems to have spent its fury in the neighborhood of Fairfield village.

Fred Hoadley, sr., who lives something over a mile south, was the greatest loser. The wind unroofed his barn, tore down his wind mill, laid low his fences, tore his orchard to pieces and badly damaged the granary. Three horses were confined in the barn when it fell, but they escaped uninjured. At his son's place near by, a barn was wiped out of existence.

Hardly an apple tree was left on S. W. Bennett's farm to remind him that he ever had an orchard. His barn doors were carried away and it cleaned out quite a strip of his woods.

Frank Ferguson was lifted from his load of milk that he was taking to the creamery and carried over a fence near by. His outfit was overturned.

At Henry Ferguson's, a quarter of a mile south, a large maple was twisted off and it fell on the wing of his residence with sufficient force to crush in the roof and totally destroy the porch. The house was nearly covered with trees.

Taken altogether it was the nearest approach to a genuine Dakota cyclone that Lenawee County has experienced in many years.

A Summer Normal.

Prof. Kellogg and Miss Dora Grayson have been engaged to assist in Prof. Morgan's summer normal to be held at Bad Axe in July and August. The last issue of the Bad Axe Tribune contains the following particulars:

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6. Reg. Vol. VII. Bay Stallion, 16 hands; foaled 1884. Bred by Glenview Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:25 without much work. Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. A Picnic On a Farm

In a sequestered, wooded spot, by a cooling stream—a very pleasant contemplation this for city folk.

They wonder why it is that the farmer does not more frequently go picknicking—why he does not get more enjoyment out of life. They do not realize that the now-a-days farmer finds enjoyment in his work.

is one of the modern pleasure-inviting acquisitions of the farmer.

It is such a handy machine and so reliable in its performances that the old-time dread of harvest is done away with. The makers of the McCormick get many of their ideas from the farmers and crystallize them into practical working mechanisms.

You can O. K. the hints you get from the practical farmers—perhaps that's why the practical farmers O. K. the "Machine of Steel"—it's made to meet their needs.

The McCormick Catalogue is invaluable to the inquirer after improved harvesting machinery.

WOE IN SAGINAW.

The Beautiful City Swept by a Conflagration.

Property with a Value Estimated at $1,500,000 Destroyed—One Man Burned to Death—Over 200 Families Are Homeless.

A SCENE OF RUIN.

SAGINAW, May 22.—Saturday afternoon the metropolis of the Saginaw valley was visited by the worst conflagration in her history and one of the most destructive which ever visited any city in the state. The loss will amount to about $1,500,000. The total insurance will aggregate about $600,000. The extent of territory which was burned is about thirty squares, and includes large portions of the Sixth and Seventh wards. This territory was swept nearly clean of every building. A close estimate places the number of buildings destroyed at 275. Over 200 families are homeless and 800 men are thrown out of employment.

The first alarm was turned in at 3:45 o'clock from box 52. The department was called to the mill of Sample & Camp on what is termed the "middle ground," south of Bristol street and on the east side of the river. Just how the fire started is not certain, but it is supposed it caught from sparks, possibly from a passing tug boat. This building was not occupied and the loss was a few hundred dollars.

A strong gale from the southwest drove the flames to 700,000 feet of lumber owned by Brown & Ryan. The sparks from this set fire to the eastern span of the Bristol street bridge, burning it down and cutting off street railway communication. From the bridge thence the flames leaped to the east side, just below Bristol street and north of the city hall, where were located a large number of buildings, including hose house No. 6, J. F. Winkler's ice houses, all residences on Tilden street, and on both sides of Washington avenue down to Holden street. These were quickly licked up.

Then the sparks were carried across the old bayou into the premises of the George F. Cross Lumber company, the Planing-Mill Lumber company, the yard and a dozen tenement houses melting like snow. Next came the Allington & Curtis Manufacturing company's extensive plant and Passolt's soap factory, all of which were wiped out. Here the fire struck Jefferson avenue, and in an hour some of the finest residences in the city were in ashes, the sweep being north to Emerson street, where the fire continued eastward south of and along Emerson street out toward the city limits. It cut a wide swath on Owen, Howard, Sheridan and Warren avenues and other streets east. St. Vincent's orphans' home succumbed early, but the inmates were all removed to places of safety. The patients were removed from St. Mary's hospital, which was in extreme danger for a time, but was saved.

An old man named Robert Turner, 89 years of age, lost his life, his body being found near his residence burned to a crisp. This is the only known casualty, although several persons are reported missing.

At a meeting of citizens at the clubhouse a resolution was adopted that all sufferers by the fire can be relieved by the citizens of Saginaw without outside help. The committee appointed to canvass the situation reported that of the 239 owners of real estate who lost property 215 do not need help and twenty-four do. The tenants who lost were 101 in number. Of these twenty-eight need help and seventy-three do not. It was announced that nearly if not all of the industries destroyed would be rebuilt. The most important question was what would be done by E. Germain. It was said that he would rebuild if he could have taxes remitted this year, and there were a number of citizens who said that they would see that this wish was carried out or they would attend to it themselves.

A partial list of the losers is as follows:

E. Germain, loss $325,000, insurance $31,000; J. F. Winkler, loss $20,000, insurance $6,200; L. L. Holden, loss $17,000, insurance $5,000; Thomas Steele, loss $22,000, no insurance; P. H. Ketchum, loss $30,000, insurance $10,503; W. H. Presser, loss $12,000, partially insured; H. Passoll, loss $7,000, partially insured; Peter McArthur, loss $12,000, fully insured; S. Goseline, loss $5,000, insured; George B. Brooks, loss $6,000, insured; John Otto, Jr., E. R. Ayers, G. A. Mitchell, D. E. Skinner, Horace Johnson, Charles Holland, Frank Pimmb, D. A. Swinton, K. Blakely, Nicholas Schmelzer, W. G. Dalke, H. N. Doty, W. T. Cooper, J. F. Cooper, A. Simpson and about thirty others losses each from $3,000 to $10,000, all partially insured: the Valley Machine company, loss $15,000; insurance not known; Cross Lumber company, loss $50,000; Allington-Curtis Manufacturing company, $25,000, both well insured.

Lost His Place.

GREEN BAY, May 21.—S. Silvola, the postmaster at Calumet, Mich., was removed Saturday and the sureties placed Paul W. Grierson in charge. Inspector Pulcifer made an inspection of the Calumet office and claimed to have found a shortage in the government funds of $2,361.77. This amount was paid by the sureties and the removal of the postmaster followed.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives.

LANSING, May 16.—Senator Doran's inheritance tax bill, which provides for a tax of 1 per cent. on all personal property in excess of $5,000 after the payment of debts, no tax on real estate which goes to direct heirs where the testator is a resident of the state and where the testator is not a resident of the state or in case the property goes to collateral heirs, a tax of 5 per cent. on all personal and real estate in excess of $500 was passed by the senate Tuesday. It is estimated that if this measure becomes a law it will bring the state an annual revenue of $500,000. Bills were also passed appropriating $42,030 for the support of the mining school for 1892 and 1893; appropriating $67,000 for the state fish commission and for the appointment of special deputy game wardens who shall have jurisdiction in all sections of the state. Gov. Rich has announced his approval of the anti-Pinkerton bill and the bill to prevent the solicitation or issuing of unauthorized fire or inland marine insurance.

LANSING, May 17.—An important measure, known as the state prison bill, was passed by the senate. It provides for the punishment of any employes in or about the prison who, in the escape of prisoners, and in case a life prisoner is aided to escape the person lending the aid may be imprisoned for a term not exceeding twenty years. The bill also abolishes the central board of prison inspectors and provides for the creation of a separate board of control. The senate committee reported out a bill bringing the Michigan Central Railroad company under the general law for taxation purposes.

The house passed bills authorizing the appointment of a state dairy and food commissioner and authorizing the use of Meyer's automatic voting machine at municipal elections.

LANSING, May 18.—The house passed the Kline capital punishment bill by a vote of 66 to 25. It provides the death penalty only when a murderer is convicted on direct testimony and applies to no case of circumstantial evidence. Although a similar bill to this one has been before the Michigan legislature nearly every session during the last thirty years, this is the first time it has ever succeeded in receiving a majority vote. It is believed that the senate will also pass the bill. The house passed the bill for the reorganization of the state militia. The most important features of the bill are the change of name from "state troops" to "Michigan national guards," and the increase of the per capita tax for the support of the militia to 4½ per cent. The latter clause enables the guards to hold their annual encampment at Chicago.

The senate passed bills abolishing the central boards of control and providing separate boards for the schools for the blind, deaf and dependent children and each of the penal and reformatory institutions of the state and giving immediate effect. The soldiers' home inmate franchise bill was passed, as was also the Weiss bill providing for the election of representatives to the legislature from cities by separate districts instead of on a general ticket as at present. The senate passed a new congressional apportionment bill, providing for nine republican and three democratic districts in this state.

LANSING, May 19.—The bill granting municipal and school suffrage to women passed the house by a vote of 57 to 25. It requires women to be able to read the constitution of the state in the English language. The house also passed the bill appropriating $20,000 for a gymnasium at the state normal school and the good roads measure. A joint resolution was passed proposing an amendment to the constitution requiring foreigners to have their full papers before they are eligible as electors, and requiring a residence of six months in the state and twenty days in a township or ward. The bill providing for the appointment of special deputy game wardens with jurisdiction in all sections of the state was also passed.

The senate passed the bills allowing the use of the Rhines vote-recorder and the Meyer ballot machine. It also passed the Gillett liquor bill, which provides a uniform tax of $500 and allows the sale of liquors on all days except Sunday, Christmas, Thanksgiving day, Decoration day and election day.

LANSING, May 20.—The republican members of the house nonconcurred on the resolution postponing the date of final adjournment until June 15, and by a practically unanimous vote decided to adhere to the original plan and adjourn next Thursday.

In committee of the whole the senate passed bills bringing the Michigan Central railroad under the general law for taxation purposes; appropriating $75,000 for a new asylum for the insane in the upper peninsula; amending the banking law so that the state banking commissioner may take possession of the assets of banks pending the appointment of a receiver, and increasing the salary of the state treasurer to $2,000 and that of the auditor general to $3,000.

Colgrove, of Hastings, supreme representative.

A WOMAN'S CRIME.

An Okemus Mother Poisons Her Son to Keep Him from Growing Up a Thief—She Is Probably Insane.

LANSING, May 20.—Mrs. Frank Herre, a German woman about 40 years of age, who has resided at Okemus Village, 9 miles from this city, is in jail here for killing her 9-year-old son by putting poison in a piece of pie. Mrs. Herre confesses her crime, but can give no reason for its commission further than she was afraid he would become a thief. She also confesses that, fearing the result of a post mortem examination which was to have been held, she stole the body from the house and threw it in a well on the premises, where it was found. She is clearly insane.

A Will Contested.

DETROIT, May 21.—The grounds upon which the will of Mrs. Mary W. Beecher, widow of Luther Beecher, will be contested are mental incompetency and undue influence. Mrs. Beecher left about $500,000 worth of property, and under the will one of the seven branches of her family will receive $363,000.

AN AWFUL CATASTROPHE.

CADILLAC, May 22.—Forest fires raging in the territory northwest of this city reached Louis Sand's lumber yard near Lake City Saturday and resulted in burning to death eleven men. The names of the unfortunates are: Samuel Campbell, John Hill, James Hugh, Hans Jacobson, Michael McCune, Michael Mulholland, M. C. Pagen, Edward Boorbeck, Paul Sangreen, Charles G. Taylor.

The men were assembled at dinner and the forest fire which was burning all around entirely cut off all escape. When they realized their danger they rushed out of the building in which they had been sitting. The smoke so blinded them that they became bewildered. They ran hither and thither, unable to find a means of escape, and their horses stampeded, owing to the confusion. Eight of the men jumped into a well to escape the flames. The top curb of the well burned and the timbers fell on the men huddled in the well, literally cooking their heads, the remainder of their bodies being under water. The well is not deep enough to drown anybody who stood upright in it, and it is believed the unfortunate men were in this position when the fearful death came to them. From what could be seen of the death trap into which the victims unsuspectingly walked, believing that life awaited them and immunity from the flames, a fearful struggle for existence must have taken place. The sides of the pit are broken as if by iron tools, and there can be little doubt that the victims wrought the havoc with their bare hands, which were found to be torn and bloody, though immersed in the water. The bodies presented a sickening sight. Where they were covered with water they were unharmed, but the hairless skulls of the men and their roasted brain caps, with the dry substance baked on the outside, were mute evidences of a tale of dreadful anguish.

The property loss is not very great. Forty hogs, three horses, the camp buildings, tools, etc., to Mr. Sands' loss. The Thayer Lumber company, operating near by, lost eleven cars loaded with logs in the same fire. The engine had to leave its train to make its escape.

Edward Margeridge's sawmill, 4 miles south of Lake City, burned Saturday and the farm buildings and cabins of the pioneer settlers were wiped out of existence. It is reported that a farmhouse near Tustin burned and a man and his wife and two children perished, but it has as yet been impossible to confirm the report. Many men who went out to help to fight the fire were badly scorched. In Grand Traverse county the flames threatened the suburbs of Traverse City, but the danger passed when the wind died down.

HOUGHTON, May 22.—A terrible bush fire has raged in Ballman's Branch, east of Dollar bay. Over 1,000 cords of hard wood, four houses and seven cars of the Hancock & Calumet railroad were destroyed. Over thirty families were forced to bury their household goods in the ground. Women and children were forced to fight their way over 2 miles to Dollar bay through suffocating heat and smoke. About thirty horses were saved. One horse was scorched so badly that he had to be killed. Engineer Shea, with a wood train, was surrounded by fire, but opened his throttle and made a race for life, while his brakemen jumped off and escaped through the woods.

FATALLY SHOT BY OFFICERS.

"Doc" Bentley and Albert Donnelly, Jail Breakers, Fight to Prevent Recapture.

LANSING, May 21.—"Doc" Bentley and Albert Donnelly, who were arrested several weeks ago after a fierce struggle, in which Marshal Sanford received a slight bullet wound in the neck, and who subsequently broke jail, were recaptured Saturday south of the city by a posse of officers whom they defied and who used their revolvers freely. Donnelly was fatally wounded, four bullets being imbedded in his body, one piercing his right lung. Bentley and the officers escaped unhurt. The men are said to be burglars and were arrested on that charge.

Found Dead.

KALAMAZOO, May 20.—Lawson Billings, a well-known pioneer of this county, left Comstock with his wagon and team for Sloutmeyer's woods. As he did not return a search was made and his body was found in the road with the skull crushed. The wagon was found in a demolished condition and the horses captured. Death was instantaneous. A coroner's jury was impaneled.

GRAVE MISTAKES.

Physicians frequently make mistakes in treatment of Heart Disease. The rate of sudden deaths is daily increasing. Hundreds become victims of the ignorance of physicians in the treatment of this disease. One in four persons has a diseased heart. Shortness of Breath, Palpitation and Fluttering, Irregular Pulse, Choking Sensation, Asthmatic Breathing, Pain or Tenderness in Side, Shoulder or Arm, Weak or Hungry Spells, are symptoms of Heart Disease. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is the only reliable remedy. Thousands testify to its wonderful cures. Books Free. Sold by Baker and Hall.

Some men are so honest that they have to think about going fishing before they can tell a good plausible lie.

Mrs. Chas. Root, Cedar Springs, was told by physicians that they could do nothing for her. She tried Adironda, Wheeler's Heart and Nerve Cure, and after taking two bottles she was able to do her own work and ride to town to do her own shopping.

Take water and a little Pearline, and you have the best preparation in the world for washing and cleaning. It will do everything except harm. Use it on your clothes, your dishes, your paint, and your person. Try it on something that you think is too delicate or too difficult. It will silence your doubts in the one case, and save your strength in the other.

Send it Back

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE. Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 231 JAMES PYLE, New York.

The Doctor has treated in the last 12 months more than 3,500 cases of all forms of eye trouble and errors of refraction, such as Glaucoma, Ulceration of the Cornea, Granulation of the Iris, Presbyopia, Paralysis of Accomodation, Spasm of Accomodation, Hypermetrobia, Aphakia, Myopia, Astigmatism, Anisometropia, Strabismus, Diplopia, Asthenopia, etc. Have you ever stopped to think how many people in this world are blind from their own negligence and carelessness in not giving their eyes attention at the proper time? You now have the opportunity of consulting one who gives all his time in treating cronic eye trouble. Thousands of persons in this world that do not use glasses that should, then again there are thousands of persons using gasses they think suited to their eyes, but the truth of the matter is, the glasses do not correct the trouble, but aggravate it and produce headache, spots before the eyes, inflamation, granulation, winking, trembling spells, various nerve and brain affections, cataracts, burning and smarting of the eyes, etc., entailing not only positive injury to the sight, but untold misery and blindness. Dr. Galleher makes examinations that few in this country can make. He has instruments with which he can examine every [illegible] inside of the eye. He can tell you in an instant after examining your [illegible] you or not, and I will truthfully say so. Death of A. K. Whitmore.

The following particulars regarding the death of A. K. Whitmore are gathered from the Adrian Daily Times: Mr. Whitmore had long been a prominent citizen of Lenawee county and had many friends in this vicinity who will deeply regret his demise.

Earnest expressions of [illegible] spread rapidly throughout the city today that Ancil K. Whitmore was dead.

It had been but so short a time before that he had been seen about the streets that his sudden summons seemed almost incredible.

He enjoyed a buggy ride Sunday morning with Loren F. Vosburg, and the beauty of the day again tempted him to repeat the pleasure in the afternoon.

Mr. Whitmore became fatigued during the second drive, complained of a depressed sensation over the chest, and asked to be taken back home.

From that time on he grew steadily worse, and at 4:15 a. m. passed away, in a quiet and peaceful manner, death resulting from heart disease.

Mr. Whitmore had suffered from this affection for the past twelve years. On Sunday evening, March 5, he was taken seriously sick in the Methodist church, with an acute attack of indigestion, and since then his health has been very poor.

Though he knew his disease to be a dangerous one, he seemed to hope that he would recover, and had decided on passing the coming summer at the lakes.

Mr. Whitmore was 68 years old. He leaves a wife and one son, Charles H., traveling auditor of the Lake Shore road. Mr. Whitmore was himself connected with the railroad, holding the position of claim agent.

The deceased was affiliated with the Knights Templar, the Knights of Pythias and the Odd Fellows, and has occupied a prominent position in the official affairs of the county and city, having been sheriff of the county and marshal of the city for various terms.

The funeral will be conducted from his late home on Butler street at 2 o'clock, standard time, Wednesday afternoon, and will be held under the auspices of Adrian Commandery Knights Templar.

We append the following additional facts in regard to the funeral:

All that is mortal of Ancil K. Whitmore lies in the silent city of the dead, old Oakwood. Hundreds of those who had known and loved him in life stood above his coffined form, gazed for the last time upon his well-known features, and followed the sad cortege to where an honest man "sleeps the sleep that knows no breaking morn of toil or night of waking."

There were many handsome floral tributes. Services which were conducted at the home, on Butler street were brief. Rev. O. V. W. Chandler, of the M. P. church, and Rev. J. M. Kellogg, of the M. E. church, officiated. The burial was in charge of the Knights Templar; there were many Knights of Pythias in line. At the vault the Masonic ritual services were read.

"Put out the lights. He will not need them more.

His work is done. His feet have reached the fairer, purer shore."

The pall bearers were John G. Mason, Charles Bowerfind, A. H. Wood, E. A. Berg, C. E. Weaver and D. B. Morgan.

Besides Sheriff Wheeler, there were present the following who have served the county in that capacity:

J. R. Bennett, elected in [illegible]
E. J. Hough, elected in [illegible]

Raisin Valley Seminary.

Dr. Mordon, of Adrian, lectures on "Thomas More" Wednesday evening, May 31.

Owing to the patriotic desires of some of the students, school was not in session May 30.

Messrs. Ratliff and Hill are conducting a very successful Sunday school at the Lanning school house north of here.

Misses Mate Trafelbone, Bertha Teachout and Edith Eggleston spent Sunday at the home of Miss Wilhelmina Osborne.

The excitement of Seminary people was considerably aroused last Tuesday evening by a report from Adrian that the Seminary had collapsed in the wee hours of the morning. An examination found the report to be without foundation.

Miss Bertha Stanley gave a farewell tea party to some of her little friends at the home of Prof. White May 27. The bright little girl has won a very warm place in the regards of the students, who remembered her with some handsome presents.

Prof. Ratliff, George Hill and several of the students are making preparations for an extensive canvassing tour in Canada during the coming vacation. We would advise anyone who desires an interesting as well as a financially beneficial vacation, to join the party.

Several day students remained here until nine o'clock last Friday evening for the purpose of standing on the west porch and watching fourteen girls, armed with water crosses, green onions and burnt popcorn, amble forth to notify the world that the time for hanging May baskets and turning young ladies' heads is at hand.

IRWIN BROS.' SHOWS.

Wonders will never cease. Thousands have grown gray, because discouraged, and passed away in striving to produce something which the public would appreciate and whose coming all would hail with delight. Yet the work of all pales into the deepest insignificance as compared with [illegible] of two of the greatest and most [illegible] of this or any other country has ever produced—Irwin Bros., whose names have become as household words because of their skill in making the world happy. They appear before the people again this year with a circus wonderful in its details. It is the most thrilling, magnetic and attractive combination of wonders that eyes have ever seen. New and special features adorn its every part; ancient, mediæval, modern—all are represented in the most vivid fashion. None should miss this marvel of completeness, this enchanting, inspiring, instructive performance. It is the chance of a lifetime to see many things which never before have been presented for public inspection. Among the special attractions which this season has brought forth, and which cannot be seen with any other of the so-called big shows, are the three baby lions, Lulu, Pasha and Sassy, which were born at the Irwin Bros.' winter quarters, Jan'y 15th, 1893. Since their birthday they have been fed from the bottle and they have been tamed and kept free from the hands of aggressors until now they are as gentle as lambs and playful as kittens. Children fondle them, love them and pet them. Perhaps never again will an opportunity be afforded you to see in a traveling menagerie lions born in captivity. The menagerie of this grand circus includes hundreds of the rarest specimens, which it has taken years to collect from Nature's wonderland. The kings of the forest and mirthful monkeys, hideous serpents and gorgeous plumaged birds are to be seen side by side in this grand carnival which is a collection from the sea, heavens and earth. It is a marvelous collection, educating, surprising and engaging. The whole show is a complete and delightful departure from the old, threadbare ideas. An unsurpassed ring performance is given afternoon and evening, in which riders unparalleled appear and brother acts, flying trapeze exhibitionists, life slides, [illegible] wire walkers, [illegible] and other exciting pastimes [illegible] This show gives the [illegible] in every department and [illegible] is afforded the opportunity of [illegible] to see things which [illegible] able to see again. NOTHING LIKE ACTION.

Men Are but Children of Larger Growth.

SEEING THE WHEELS GO ROUND.

Things That Fascinate the World's Fair Visitors—The Marvels of Electricity, Both Spectacular and Practical — The Swiss Watchmakers Have Learned from the Yankees.

WORLD'S FAIR, May 20. — [Special.] — Nothing catches the eye of the multitude like action. The people love beauty, and they are fascinated with vastness or manifestation of great power, but it is movement that seems to appeal most to them, for here. Wherever an exhibit has action in it there a crowd of people will always be found standing about in layers four or five thick, craning their necks to see over each other's shoulders. For this reason the gondolas and electric launches on the lagoons and basins are always a center of interest. Artists who visit the fair say it is a capital place for studies, not only of character on account of the cosmopolitan nature of the crowds, but because of the opportunity afforded to study movement in a thousand ways. I have seen scores of artists sketching the gondoliers as they go poling their craft about the waters, putting their bodies into all sorts of attitudes and positions.

The amateur photographers find the gondoliers and all the other spectacles here, whether still or moving, greatly to their liking. A great many cameras appear on the grounds, despite the rule which requires the payment of $2 for each instrument. The photographers say they get their money's worth even at this price, but they also think the exposition would have protected its photographic concessionaire quite as well without the $2 fee. For the management will not admit to the grounds any camera with a larger lens than four by five, and a lens of that smallness will not produce a picture likely to have any commercial value or to interfere with the business of the concessionaire at all. Besides, the amateurs are frank enough to admit what is probably true that not one picture in a thousand taken by them would be worth selling, no matter what its size. The $2 fee is collected just the same, and a few days ago I saw the Duke of Veragua and his son stopped at the gate and turned back because the young man had under his coat a detective camera. The sharp-eyed gatekeeper had a detective camera in his eye, and when he spied the box the descendants of Columbus were sent back to pay over their $2 or leave the camera outside the gates.

No one understands the value of action better than the electrical exhibitors. The spectacularism of electricity is being worked up to a great pitch here. The successful devices are those which have movement in them. For instance, there is the home-made lightning which is always surrounded by a crowd of visitors in the southeast corner of the Electrical building. The bolt starts at the base of a column made of red, white and blue lamps, runs to the top of that and thence out along the four outstretched arms made to represent the forks of a stroke of nature's voltage. People wonder how the beautiful effect is produced, but it really is a very simple process as all may see by looking down a skylight like enclosure near by.

It is somewhat like looking down in a well, only instead of water and the old oaken bucket that hangs there you perceive a series of cylinders with little levers touching their surface, a good deal like the cylinders employed in a music box. The cylinders are kept in motion all the time, and the innumerable teeth standing out from their peripheries engage the levers in a regular series, one after another. As each lever is touched an electrical circuit is opened and the current turned on eight lamps on the pillar or along the outstretched forks of the lightning stroke. In the fraction of a second this circuit is closed, as the lever is disengaged, and another is opened by the tooth coming in contact with the next lever of the series. In this way the manifestation of the current in the beautiful lights is made absolutely synchronous throughout the corresponding parts of the device. That is to say, the current is turned on at the end of one arm, for instance, at the precise instant which shows it is on at the end of another. It could not be otherwise, for the lamps which light the ends of the four arms are on the same circuit. So it is with all corresponding positions throughout the construction. The wheels of the music box, which in reality is nothing but a continuously moving switchboard, send the lightning coursing up the pillar and along the arms with the regularity of the ticking of a clock.

This device is fascinating because it has action, and for the additional reason that it seems like a trick of legerdemain. It savors strongly of magic. Even more beautiful, though not quite so picturesque, are the globes of fire which hang at the ends of the lightning-forks. As the current runs out it appears to enter the balls, which are constantly revolving, and set them afire now with red flames, now with blue and finally with rapidly changing colors and prismatic hues. This is also a very simple construction. It is another instance of the multiplication of circuits, to be turned on in sequence by an automatic switchboard. The forked lightning and the revolving globes of changing lights are, as they deserve to be, among the most popular of all the many striking electrical devices in the exposition.

A thousand persons will look at this spectacular, moving display where one will take the trouble to stop and examine some of the more wonderful and really useful forms in which the electrical power is now being utilized. For instance, few visitors care to inform themselves concerning the uses of the iron machines which look unlike any other machine that ever was, but which evidently have something to do with electricity. The few who stop to inquire learn that a revolution in mining methods is taking place through the introduction of electricity. It is about the latest of the constant succession of new triumphs which this force and the magicians who use it are making in the industrial world. Here is an electrical locomotive, designed for use under ground. It may be operated miles from the open air, giving off no gas or smoke, and requiring neither water, draft nor fuel. The power is conveyed to it by what corresponds to the well known trolley. By its side is a powerful blower, also for use under ground. A long distance from the mouth of the air shaft it may be kept constantly a flow of fresh ozone through all the leads and passages. There are drills and other underground machines with electricity as their motive power, and the inventors and adapters have scarcely begun operations in the mining field.

The telephone exchange set up in this building also attracts much attention. Telephone exchanges are common throughout the country, but it seems that few people have ever had the opportunity to see the interior of one. Crowds constantly surround the dozen girls who sit with receivers at their ears, whispering "What number?" and other jargon of the trade into the mouth-pieces, and pulling out and putting in little metal plugs. This exchange is not only an exhibit but a practical exchange, because it manipulates the five hundred and odd telephones that are in use on the World's fair grounds. This simple fact gives the reader somewhat of an idea of the immensity of the exposition. If you were to take the place of one of the girls for a few minutes you would hear such requests as "Give me Germany," "Ring off Japan and put on the state of Maine," "The German commissioner wants the office of the Chilian superintendent," and other telephonic exclamations which give one a very good notion of the fact that here all the world is in one brotherhood.

Here are the long-distance telephones, too, over which one may talk from Chicago to New York and Boston, and it is not too much to suppose that within a year or two one will be able to throw his voice around the globe. As for telephone exchanges, or the much bespoken "central," you will be surprised to learn there is a device here which does away with the need for it and takes from the comely girls their somewhat trying occupation. It is an automatic telephone exchange, by means of which No. 11 may connect himself with No. 44 or any other number in the exchange without the intervention of any hand but his own. How this is done is more than I can understand.

Wherever there is action there you will see the people thickest. In the Woman's building the Welsh girl from Swansea, who bares her ruddy arms and perspires under her chimney-pot hat while manipulating the old-fashioned loom, never lacks admirers. Nor does the Scotch woman near by who makes an old spinning wheel hum in the style which many of us may remember going to sleep by in the days of our youth. In the great transportation department the locomotive which is set up an inch or so from the track and with steam in its cylinders has its wheels kept in rapid motion, attracts more attention than any other locomotive in the exhibit, though in itself it is a rather commonplace machine. Machinery hall draws greater crowds than any other building, because its exhibits are endowed with the charm of motion. The simplest steem engine weaves a spell with its rapidly revolving wheel, and the whirring dynamos fascinate and mystify. Not many of us are so far removed from boyhood that we are not pleased to "see the wheels go round."

In the greatest building that ever was, the Hall of Manufactures, the exhibit which has more visitors than any others is a display of watch-making machinery. Lucky indeed you will be if you get near enough to it to see the marvelous contrivances doing their work. By waiting ten minutes for an opening in the throng you may get within view of the amazing construction of steel which acts more like a human being gifted with infallibility of precision of touch than like a piece of machinery. A long steel finger picks up a piece of wire, passes it to another part of the machine, watches to see when it has been pared down enough to assume the form of a screw, then picks it up again and passes it along to a device which cuts and flattens the head of the screw; and when this is done lifts it once more and places it within a lathe which produces the thread, and in this way escorts the little piece of metal from process to process so that in the end what started in a wire has come out a delicately fashioned and perfectly finished, though very minute, screw for use in a watch. Another of these marvelous machines registers as a thermometer registers heat and cold or a steam gauge the pressure of steam in a boiler, the strength of the hair spring and indicates unerringly the size and style of balance that will be required to keep it in proper bounds.

The Swiss show in this building many of their finest watches in part made by machinery. Previous to the Centennial exposition of 1876 they did not use any machinery whatever in the manufacture of their watches. The showing made by ingenious Yankees at that World's fair convinced the shrewd Swiss that if they were to keep with the procession and have a fair chance in the race for the world's market they would have to adopt machinery, too. Year after year they introduce more and more automatic devices to help them in the construction of their marvelous watches. What is going on in this one field is going on everywhere. The exposition is a show-place of the nations, and one people learn from another how to do just a little better many of the things which are their reliance in the industrial struggle. It would be almost impossible to over-estimate the importance of the fair as an aid to the development of processes which will make the good things of life better and cheaper and therefore within the reach of a greater number of people.

ROBERT GRAVES.

Famous Old Sofa.

The sofa on which Generals Grant and Lee sat together when they talked it all over and put an end to the rebellion has been placed in the West Virginia state building. It is of the old-fashioned pattern with carved mahogany frame, flowered upholstery, high back, round at the corners and ends. When new it was undoubtedly a handsome piece of furniture, but presents now a worn appearance. Three Virginia ladies, deeply interested in the relic and its historical surroundings, were considerably excited when informed that it had once belonged to the widow McLain.

Scribner's Magazine for June opens with the second article in the series on Men's Occupations, which is to be a feature of the coming months, including among its contributors W. D. Howells, W. Clark Russell, Julian Ralph and John Drew. The article in the present issue is "Life in a Logging Camp," by Arthur Hill. President of one of the great Michigan lumber companies. He has written from the fullest knowledge, having been through almost every phase of the lumber business—since as a mere school-boy he started out to learn the business of a landlooker. A feature of his article is the very intimate and attractive view which he gives of the "shanty boy," as the logger is called, describing how he actually lives, and picturing his bravery and light-heartedness, his hardships and his amusements, the risks he takes and the chances for promotion which the life offers. It is safe to say that never before has there been put in a single article more of the reality of sketch by Mr. Hill. It is supplemented with abundant illustrations by Dan Beard, who visited the Michigan lumber camps in midwinter for the Magazine and made these sketches from life. It is intended that all the articles in this series shall possess equal verity and picturesqueness.

Nervous Prostration.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarassed, and who was overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to cures. Book and trial bottle free at Baker & Hall's.

The Modern Invalid

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

The vast facilities of the J. C. Ayer Co., of Lowell, Mass., enable them to place the superior blood purifier—Ayer's Sarsaparilla—within easy reach of the poorest invalid. Don't be induced to take a "cheap" substitute. Always remember that the best is the cheapest.

The Doctor is known to be reliable and his remedy a most valuable one; it is endorsed by many medical publications and used in all parts of the U. S., Europe and Australia.

Saved His Life

Scrofula—Impure Vaccination—Beyond Hope

But Hood's Sarsaparilla Effected a Perfect Cure

Joseph Harper
Trenton, N. J.

"We are as sure that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved our son Joseph's life as that the sun shines. Five years ago on board ship our three boys were vaccinated. Joseph had a very sore arm, so bad at one time that we were afraid it would have to be taken off. At length it seemed to get well, but about two months after, he began to complain of soreness and pain in the vaccinated arm. He had occasionally shown some signs of scrofula, but nothing serious. His arm, however, grew worse and worse, and became swollen and covered with sores. The inflammation and sores also spread all over his body, and he was a mass of corruption.

Pitiable to Behold,

A misery to himself and almost breaking our hearts with anguish over his dreadful condition. Many a time did I wish he was dead and out of his misery.

"The eruption was especially severe back of his ears and over his head and the lower part of his face. We had to cut off all his hair we could, as it was impossible to comb through the mass of heal and matter. Eight physicians did him no good, and three specialists at the Eye and Ear Hospital said

Nothing Could be Done.

They said it was a blood disease caused by impure vaccination. One night I happened to be reading in a paper about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and decided to try it.

"While taking the first bottle, Joseph did not grow any worse; on the second, we noticed that he was improving, and, slowly but surely, the medicine drove away the disease and won a complete victory. The sores and scabs began to fall off; the sores gradually healed up, and new, smooth and healthy skin formed in place of the disease and corruption. Of course it took time, but improvement was steady until at the end of the year the disease had entirely disappeared, and Joseph stood a strong and healthy boy. He is at school and progressing rapidly in his studies.

"We and all the neighbors regard his cure as a perfect miricle." JAMES HARPER, heater in Roebling & Son's Rolling Mill, residence, No. 814 Division Street, Trenton, N. J.

TEMPLE, McCLURE & CO.

A HOME MISSIONARY.

JOSEPH ADDISON HALLOCK (Octogenarian.)

HIS EXPERIENCE WITH THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT.

AN OLD MAN

WITH PROGRESSIVE IDEAS AND HIS DESIRE TO ENLIGHTEN THE PUBLIC.

The winter of 1884-85 was my first experience with rheumatism. I was traveling as a home missionary, and with great difficulty and suffering I reached my appointments. It was located in my hips and back. From that time to this year of grace, 1891, I have suffered more or less under the grip of that disease. About three years later, liver complaint, and the calomel taken to cure it, fastened upon the walls and organs of my chest, a rheumatic affection from which I was never wholly free, and at times even a breath was a cruelty. Yet, in a general way, my health has been as good, perhaps better than the average of men.

During the last days of the late year I bought of Dr. Owen two of the Owen Electric Belts. One I have worn, the color daughter has worn. In either case the remedial has been satisfactory. The rheumatism of my chest and hips I can no longer find. A limited case of varicocele, of more than thirty years standing, after two weeks' use of the Belt, has diminished to a mere lump, and a few days later, could not be found. A nasal catarrh of years had so affected the substance of the nose that a friend in jest twitted me of brandy. My nose is itself again, and other symptoms of nasal and throat catarrh are fast disappearing, carrying my deafness of seven years with them.

I have studied electricity in its bearings upon mental and physico mental phenomena for fifty years, and have seen its wonders in these directions, and, thus prepared, my attention was easily turned to its efficiency in controlling the nerves, muscles and motions of the living, as galvanism does those of the recent dead.

I have no wish to undervalue any appliance which carries a real electric current from a genuine battery to human nerves with a gentle, a genial force; but I do wish to do my utmost to disarm public fears as to the well-ordered Electric Belts.

THE WOMAN'S BUILDING

Mecca of the Fair Sex at the Exposition.

FINE WORKS OF ART DISPLAYED.

Woman's Genius and Energy Appears to Have no Limitations—What One Will See by a Walk Through the Handsome Building—One Exhibit of Special Pride to Women.

WORLD'S FAIR, May 31. — [Special.] — The first of the exposition buildings which most visitors approach on entering the gates is the Woman's building, for it stands near the entrance most commonly used by those who come from Chicago by rail. But even if it were not so conveniently located it would be the first building entered by a great majority of the women visitors, and as things go in this world they would take with them a large retinue of husbands, brothers and escorts. This is the department of departments to women. During their first day at the fair many do not get beyond it. The Woman's building is always crowded, not with women alone, though, they are of course in the majority, but with men also. Naturally all women take pride in it. The first woman's building in an international exposition, designed by a woman architect, managed by women throughout, and filled from top to bottom with the creations of woman's genius and skill—why should not "the emancipated sex" revel in the glory of their awakening?

But one does not have to be a woman to enjoy a few hours, or, for that matter, a few days, in this beautiful structure. Its exhibits are only just completely installed, and for the first time one may judge their value and comprehensiveness. It is a marvelous array of woman's triumphs in the fine and applied arts, in science, literature and industry that one beholds here. The first feeling which comes to every visitor, I dare say, is one of amazement that woman is able to do so much and do it so well. There is not much that is beyond her capabilities or her ambition. There does not appear to be any limitation to her genius or her energy. It must be that to marry a slow-coach sort of a man—you all know just such are one—who has never been able to appreciate the changed condition of woman wrought in the last ten or fifteen years, this building and its contents must come like a shock of an earthquake or a clap of thunder. For the first time in all his career it will dawn upon him that woman is good for something in the world beyond simple domesticity.

For instance, he will find himself immediately after passing the doors, within a spacious and brilliantly lighted rotunda with a richly decorated skylight overhead and surrounded by a chaste arcade. In the portals and over them, and in the vestibules, will be seen fine mural paintings and modeled work in low relief, all executed by women. Thus it goes in every part of the structure built by and for women—the decorations, the statuary and the exhibits are all, or practically all, the product of feminine fingers. The rotunda is an art gallery in which the paintings and the statuary are fine enough to attract the attention of connoisseurs and almost to disarm the critics.

It is impossible in the limits of a single article even to indicate the ramifications of woman's work in the busy, work-a-way world as shown by the handiwork here displayed. The most striking lesson of the whole show is that woman, not only in America but in many other countries has burst the bonds which held her sex within certain narrow limits in the field of professional and industrial activity, and that she has already shown her ability to compete with man all along the line. It is woman's era, sure enough, and the movement has extended through America, Great Britain and nearly all the continental countries, and is now reaching out for the woman prisons of Asia and Africa.

A walk through this building brings before the eye an almost infinite variety of woman's handiwork. From the south is cotton raised and ginned by women, and from California fruits and wines grown and pressed by fair hands. The fisher-women of New Jersey send samples of their nets. From Colorado are tracings of mining claim surveys made by women.

LETTING HIS WIFE SEE SIGHTS.

One expects to see churns, washing machines and such articles, but is hardly prepared for a model stock car invented and constructed by a woman. Here are some handsome saddles made by a Wisconsin woman who earns her bread in that way, and the elevator which carries visitors to the beautiful roof garden restaurant was built by a woman.

In ceramics and mosaics of course the women are seen to good advantage. But one is surprised to see them doing so well in carvings, in art metal work and engraving. The department devoted to laces, embroideries, trimmings, artificial flowers and such articles is full of beauty and originality, and always is crowded with delighted women. Man are not expected to take much interest in such matters, but even the men stop to look at a silk flag made by the mother of General Sheridan at 80 years of age, at the group of dolls dressed in the costumes of American history, at napkins made from flax spun by Queen Victoria, and at a hat painted by Her Majesty and given to her granddaughter, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein.

Men are also interested in the beautiful embroideries and needle work shown by the managers of the "Turkish Compassionate Fund." These marvelously pretty things were made by Mohammedan women who were driven from their homes during the Russo-Turkish war and who sought refuge in Constantinople. There they were in danger of starving, and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts and Lady Layard, wife of the British minister, finding that these poor women had the oriental gift of needle work in the highest degree, bought them materials and organized them for labor. Now fully two thousand women are engaged in this work, and their products find sale throughout Europe and America. It is claimed their handiwork has developed into a new art, and one may believe it after examining the specimens here displayed. Madame Zacaroff, who is in charge of the exhibit, was a native of Greece, educated in Constantinople, and has lived in both New York and Paris. She shows a medal of the grand order of the "Schefacat" — "charity" — bestowed upon her by the sultan.

"We expect to sell a great many goods here," said Madame Zacaroff, "the Americans are so generous. Besides, our prices are really very low. We did well at the Paris exposition, and Americans were our best customers. I observed that there are two classes of Americans. One class buy their money lavishly, without regard to quality or price; the other are unduly suspicious they are to be imposed upon. Remove this suspicion and they buy with good judgment and full pauses."

While there are many more women than men in this building, it is not often you see a husband and father minding the baby while the mother is taking in the sights. Today I did see one man—"poor man," every one said—with baby in his arms, doing the best he could. Some people pitied him and others laughed at him, and a few made sneering remarks to the effect that "this is what all this woman's foolery amounts to." I couldn't see it that way. Why in the world shouldn't papa take care of the baby while wife has a look through the one building of the exposition that is of special interest to her as mother and woman? Doubtless she minds the baby in all the other buildings, as she minds him in nearly all the other places and hours of life. I have a baby or two myself, and if it shall be a help to their mother no false pride will keep me from taking care of them while she enjoys the Woman's building and other fascinations of the fair.

There are so many things of interest here one scarcely knows which way to turn. Here is a Welsh girl weaving cloth in the good old way, and a Scotch woman with the ancient spinning wheel and ball of yarn. A model of a toboggan slide, an instrument to facilitate the analysis of oils, a system of storage reservoirs for irrigation, model and drawings of a building for co-operative living, working designs for carpets, wall paper and textiles, architectural drawings and designs, all the work of women, rouse more than a mere passing interest. In watch case ornamentation, stamped leather, furniture, ceiling and wall decorations, lithography and wood engraving woman shows that she is able to keep up with the procession. From Mercer county, Penn., comes an inlaid table containing more than 2,000 pieces of native woods. A simple exhibit in which women take much pride and comfort is a copy of the law of 1879 admitting women to practice in the United States supreme court. It was sent here by Belva A. Lockwood.

Intensely interesting is the Keppel collection of engravings and etchings in which an effort has been made to show what has been done by women engravers during the last three centuries. The collection goes back as far as the year 1581, when Diana Ghisi, a Mantua woman, engraved very good plates after Raphael, Tuccari, and Romano. There is a splendid wood cut which came from the fair fingers of Marie de Medicis, queen of France. It is the bust of a young woman. There are samples of the work of Teresa Del Po, who nearly two hundred years ago was a member of the Academy of St. Luke at Rome, and whose work was so near like that of her father's, a distinguished engraver, it was difficult to distinguish between them. The collection comprises several hundred specimens, and is easily worth a half day's study. Until comparatively recently a woman engraver was the exception. The few women who have been able to distinguish themselves in this field since the birth of the art, 300 years ago, did so through their own genius and individuality rather than by favor of any recognition of the equality of the sexes. Even now they ask to be judged on merit alone.

The British exhibit here is always thronged with visitors. It shows most graphically woman's work in art, in education, in the field of charity, in manufacturing and literature. Among the pictures the queen appears several times. There are six original sketches from nature, in one frame; a view from the queen's room at Balmoral, a pug belonging to Prince Henry of Battenberg, drawn by the queen while traveling on the railway, and others. There are water colors by the queen and some of her deputies. The show of British needle work is excellent, and in one section it is made very plain that Yankee women are not the only women in the world who can invent machines and appliances and have them patented. Patented inventions by British women comprise a collapsible coal scuttle, a combined dress stand and fire escape, device to facilitate pouring from bottles, invention for extracting gold from base metal and many others.

The Woman's building was a happy conception and it has been successfully wrought in all its details. It is a distinct departure in expositions, but is is safe to say there never will be another international exposition without a woman's department built and managed by women.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermoter. Where one goes others follow, and we "Take the Country."

Though sold, we were unable to make more than 20,049 Aermoters in '91. Orders often waited 5 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our Aermoters in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exacting the scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 8 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstruction in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructive bracing in the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods and factory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one, $100, write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Tuesday was just such a day as any one would wish for if he should have the privilege of choosing. The weather was sunny and bright without being suffocatingly warm, and everything was conductive to the proper observance of the day consecrated to the memory of the fallen defenders of our country.

Early in the forenoon citizens and business men began decorating their houses and stores, and soon the national emblem was displayed in every part of the village. Children were carrying baskets of flowers, teams were being brought into service to gather floral material, and all were depositing their burdens at the Relief Corps headquarters where the ladies were busily engaged in making garlands, wreaths and bouquets.

The band has for some time been practing in view of the occasion and were thereby able to materially assist in the exercises.

The line of march was ordered formed at Military square and at about two o'clock p. m., Co. C, national guard, headed by their band moved from the armory to the park: Beers' post, led by their drum corps next appeared, and soon the procession moved south on Ottawa street to main, thence to Union, then to the cemetery, formed in the following order: Marshal of the Day, Ben. Garlinghouse and Aide, Ralph Bidwell; the Band; Co. C; Beers' Post; Large Float drawn by the engine team, and loaded with floral pieces, flags and bunting, and occupied by a group of tastily costumed young ladies, acting as decorating committee for the Post; next in line was Orator of the Day, Rev. H. A. Smith and the singers in a carriage, then came citizens carriages, buggies, etc.

Early in the day Co. C sent a detail from its members to mark the graves of their fallen comrades, and upon arriving at the cemetery another detail decorated the graves so marked.

The progam was carried out at the stand as announced, Mr. Smith using his time to the best advantage by an appropriate discourse. The quartet gave some fine selections and the band interspersed its music effectively.

After the ceremonies on the platform, Co. C fired a salute of three volleys, and the procession was then reformed and proceeded to the center of the grounds, where a plot has been dedicated to the memory of those brave men who do not sleep in our own City of Death, but are occupying unmarked and unknown resting places beneath the distant Southern sod. Here with impressive ceremony all that could be, was done in honoring the memory of those, who when the roll was called, were, simply reported missing. After a selection by the band the line was again assembled returning to the village, and the thought of how soon some of those who were in health and good spirits this year might by next memorial day require the same sad reverent homage, crossed the minds of many.

Rev. Varner aptly said that it would be but comparatively few years more that we should have our veterans with us. Many there are in the world who do not appreciate the old soldier, either living or dead, people of the younger generation perhaps, who if they would give the subject sober reflection, or would imagine themselves or some near relative in the same position those men were, in years gone by, would be less likely to rail at the pension bureau or so called red tape military courtesy. However this part of the country is not very badly afflicted with such people, as the events of Tuesday showed. Nearly all business was suspended for at least a part of the day, and the streets, park, and cemetry were crowded with people, who observed the day as one devoted to patriotic homage.

WEDDING BELLS.

Last evening another of Tecumseh's fair daughters was taken from her, and carried away to grace another home, another sphere. The lady was Carrie M. Keyser, only daughter of Mrs. Wm. Keyser, her captor Ernest W. Goff, of West Bay City. At exactly 7 o'clock p. m., to the strains of the "Swedish Wedding March" played by Miss Mable Smith, the bride and groom appeared and standing mid a bower of foliage and flowers, listened to the words of the bride's pastor, Rev. H. A. Smith, which made them husband and wife. They were accompanied to the altar by Miss Nellie G. Gauntlet, of Detroit, as bridesmaid and Ernest M. Colley, of this place as groomsman.

The bride wore white Brussels net trimmed with Spanish lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore canary colored China silk and carried yellow roses. The groom and best man wore the customary black. After the ceremony refreshments were served, then the newly married pair took a carriage, and after some circuitous driving, were landed at Clinton. The ruse was a good one, but failed at the end, for a company from here took the 10 o'clock train, and overtaking the couple at Clinton, gave them a royal send off.

The usual quota of elegant presents will remind Mr. and Mrs. Goff of their numerous friends in this city, while the good wishes of those friends follow the bride and groom to their new home.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

President Cleveland will soon receive by express a reminder that in Jackson, Mich., is located the school of morals of the state. An elegant and unique cane has been manufactured at the prison for presentation to the president. It is made of Daily Patriots, 18,584 pieces being used in its construction. The head is of gold, richly engraved, and the article will no doubt be highly prized by the president.

We made a short business visit at Ridgeway one day last week and returned overland. Caught a ride with John VanVleet as far as Frank Davidson's, arriving there about supper time and of course accepted his hospitality an hour or so. Had a chance to see a beautiful colt about forty-eight hours old, whose dam is the standard bred Elsie O. and whose sire is Boomerang. Frank entertains great expectations about the future of this colt.

Deering to the Front

TO THE FARMERS OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

For the season of 1893 I wish to bring to your notice the great advantage you can derive during your harvest of hay and grain by the use of the latest improved and best harvesting machine in the world—made by Wm. Deering, of Chicago.

Here are a few reasons why you should buy a Deering:

1st—It has a jointed platform which when folded will allow the machine to pass through the same space as an ordinary buggy.

2nd—In ease of handling and lightness of draft it stands at the head.

3d—It never fails to tie, never chokes nor clogs, and uses less twine than other competing machines.

4th—It needs no expert to understand its construction. It requires no bothersome tinkering.

5th—All geared running journals are mounted in brass boxes, insuring easy running and long wearing qualities.

6th—The levers are so easily adjusted that any boy can run the machine who can drive a team.

7th—No weight on the horse's necks, as the machine is rear geared.

8th—Best material only is used in the construction of the Deering which is guaranteed by one of the olkest and best known firms existing.

Furthermore this company make their own twine and are not in the combine. Much more may be learned by calling at my warehouse and looking at the machines always on hand. Can prove their merits.

Yours truly,

C. L. Albaugh.

A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever. J. A. RICE, Ottawa, Kan.

Non-pull-out is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark.

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. Ask your jeweler for pamphlet, or send to the manufacturers.

CHILDREN AT THE FAIR.

A Paradise for the Little Men and Women.

WHERE BABIES MAY BE CHECKED.

An International Toy and Doll Show That Fascinates Big Folk as Well as Little—The Children's Building and What It Contains—Santa Claus and His Chariot—A Wonderful Costume Exhibit.

WORLD'S FAIR, May 26.—[Special.]—When one says this exposition is a sort of paradise for observing people it is not necessary to omit the children. In truth, it is in some respects better for children than for their elders. Every boy and girl in America should see the World's fair. It will teach them more than many years at school, will give them ideas and impressions, an exact knowledge and a breadth of view, which no schooling can ever give them. A thought which often occurs to me as I go about the streets and palaces of the White City is one of regret that so many millions of bright boys and girls are not to advantage by this opportunity to see the world and its works. Right here I am going to appeal to all fathers and mothers who do me the honor to read this letter not to leave the little folks at home when coming to Chicago. They will not be very much expense or trouble, and if they are the recompense will be found every day of your sojourn here.

Boys and girls who are old enough to look with eager-eyed interest upon the marvels of architecture, machinery, art, manufacture, and agriculture will find every spot in this vast exposition like a series of object lessons, showing them all that is in the world, its uses, how made and by what manner of people. But even the smaller children have not been forgotten by the builders of the exposition. They have provided a special building for the small people, the first time in the history of international expositions that this has been done. The Children's building is a handsome structure of two stories standing near the principal entrance to the grounds, between the Woman's and and the Horticultural buildings. Within are not only playrooms and conveniences for mothers and their babies, but there are exhibits of the countless variety of things in which children are interested. The roof, where a superb view of the lakes and palaces may be had, has been converted into a play ground, and here every day is a scene which to my mind is one of the most fascinating features of the whole exposition. It is a throng of several hundred little ones, amusing themselves with all manner of play things gathered here by loving hands from all the workshops of the earth.

One department of the Children's building is of great practical advantage to mothers and their babes. It is the public nursery. By payment of a small fee mothers may leave their babies here in charge of competent nurses—women who not only know how to take care of babies who are well but who have medical skill and practical knowledge of infant ailments. Of course there have been many jokes about this department. "Check your baby here" was too good a topic for the wits and wags to let go unimproved. They have rung the changes on what might happen in case the checks should get mixed and the babies likewise. They have descanted upon the opportunity that might be offered boy-less parents to contrive some artful device by which they might deposit a girl in the forenoon and in the afternoon walk away with a cherub of the other sex. But of course these are mere jokes, and the department is a genuine convenience to mothers who can't afford to take nurses to the exposition and who don't wish to lug their charges about all day. A baby may be left here three or four hours without any misgivings. It will be well cared for, and in fact will be better off than were it being lugged from building to building, through the sunshine and the crowds.

The ladies whose good hearts prompted them to arrange the Children's building do not want too much publicity given to this baby-checking department. In the first place, the capacity of their nurseries is necessarily limited. They do not expect to be able to take in all the babies who are offered. Besides, they are afraid of having too many infants left on their hands. Some of the little folks who read this letter will be surprised to learn that there are fathers and mothers—even mothers—in the world who would be glad of such an opportunity as this affords to abandon their babes into good and kind hands. At the Paris exposition four years ago there was such a department, and during the summer several hundred babies were left on the hands of the nurses as unclaimed baggage. Of course the deserted waifs were sent to the foundlings' homes. While this was the experience in Paris I do not believe it will be imitated in Chicago. Now and then some poor mother may take a check for her baby and then go away and cry her eyes out in some hotel or on a railway train and never return; but such cases will be rare in America, I am sure.

The Children's building is something more than a nursery and a play house. There is an exhibit here of all the things which man's ingenuity has devised to assist mothers in rearing their children, educating them, preserving their health and making them happy. Of course the building is above all the home of toys. Though the building was decided on only a few months ago, as soon as the plan was announced the responses came in most generously. Many commissioners from foreign countries gave a part of the exhibits which they had expected to install elsewhere. Others cabled home for collections of toys and knick-knacks particularly appropriate for the Children's palace, and all these were given outright and thus will not only be an exhibition but in actual use in the hands of troops of little ones. State commissioners and individual exhibitors also sent in contributions, and the result is a marvelous aggregation of the things made for the use of children. This was one of those human touches which make all the world kin.

It is indeed a children's paradise. It is a truly international babies' fair. There are tons and tons of toys, many of them new in this country but none the less fascinating to the little eyes and hands and minds for which they were intended. The nations of the earth here vie in providing amusement for the juvenile part of humanity. Considering the well known ingenuity of the Yankee, his art in contrivance and his bold originality, one would think America might be in the lead in this field. She might be, but certainly is not. The Germans, the Swiss and the French are the chief of toy-makers. England is represented, and Sweden and Norway, even Russia, China and Japan. Spain sends some quaint toys, and Italy as well. In fact, there are few nations that are not represented in the play rooms or on the walls.

On their roof-garden play house the children are to have music. They are to have something nice to eat and drink as they sit under the shade of the big awnings. Besides, there are to be stereopticon lectures for their amusement and instruction.

It is not alone in the building set apart as their special world that the little men and women are to be pleased. In the German section of the great Manufactures building where alcoves and pavilions are devoted to toys, and here may be seen

THE DOLL DISPLAY.

Santa Claus in all his glory, riding atop a beautiful chariot where he holds a Christmas tree aloft and where he is surrounded by a galaxy of toys, dolls and animals that even the most sedate adult pauses to examine with much pleasure. A pretty maiden in blue drives the horse attached to Santa's chariot, and a real horse—at least the stuffed skin of what was once a prancing steed in old Nuremberg town—it is, too. By the side of the horse is Carlo, the big dog, lacking only the barking from his red mouth and the wag of his bushy tail to make him perfect. This display is always surrounded by a large throng of folks little and big.

There is here a marvelous display of dolls. The Germans, the Bavarians, the French and the Swiss show dolls that make grown women wish they were little girls again and cause even men to pause and admire the art and ingenuity employed in the manufacture of such perfect creatures.

But the doll display which is sure to take first prize is the product of American hands. It is in the Woman's building, where it was placed by the New York ladies whose deft hands fashioned it. This is perhaps the most pretentious and most successful effort made in the doll world. The dolls are not so remarkable as their costumes, for the latter show the dress and personal adornments of all the people who have helped to make America what it is and of all epochs in the country's history. It was a happy idea and has been most cleverly executed. First to attract attention, perhaps, is a Spanish senorita of the time of the settlement of St. Augustine, Fla., the oldest town in America. She is a beautiful senorita, with full skirt about a body which one may readily imagine to be lithe and passionate, and a lace mantle half concealing a piquant face and a wealth of raven hair.

Near by is a maiden attired as maidens were in the early days of New England—a prim little Puritan with a mouth made for kissing that never was kissed, we fear. She is a splendid type of that race of Priscillas who fascinated our early John Aldens and Miles Standishes and who gave left their mark on the sturdy manhood and earnest womanhood that have peopled, not only New England but large parts of New York, the western reserve of Ohio, and all the prairies and valleys of the west. This Priscilla wears a brown homespun gown, with a white kerchief crossed on her breast. On her head is a bonnet or cap with strings of black velvet.

There are so many other beautiful doll figures here that the average visitor finds himself lingering by the hour to look at them. The prettiest of all, many think, is a New York belle of the year 1750, when New York was a mere village at the lower end of Manhattan island. Her costume, oddly enough, is not so far different from the fashionable apparel of our own day. She has a gown of green silk, a long, fur-trimmed cloak, a black velvet hat with nodding plume and a great muff which hides her little doll-hands. Much simpler but quite as comely is a demure Quakeress in a gray satin garb with just a dash of coquetry in the bow under her chin.

Every one stops to admire a representation of a lady of the court of Washington who is so perfect and so stately that she might be Lady Washington or Nellie Curtis herself. A petticoat of white satin, with long court train of white, brocaded in gold and bright colors, pearls around a slender throat and powdered hair in curls that are looped back with pearls, make a picture of rare loveliness.

This is a comical looking little lady in crinoline, a Dutch fraulein of the early days of New Amsterdam, an exact copy of the portrait of Mrs. William Beekman, who was the belle of New York three-quarters of a century ago, and several costumes of the present day. The whole display is unique and beautiful. And these things that I have mentioned form but a small part of the exhibits which are of special interest to our friends and lovers, the little men and women of America.

A QUEER VERDICT.

A Coroner's Jury Decides Sullivan Was Dead When Lynched.

It Returns a Verdict of Suicide, the Mob's Victim Having Cut His Throat Before Being Taken from His Cell—A Most Horrible Affair.

CALLED IT SUICIDE.

CORUNNA, May 27.—The coroner's jury in the inquest over the body of William Sullivan, who was lynched Tuesday night, returned a verdict that he had committed suicide by cutting his throat. No reference is made to the lynching. When the mob reached Sullivan's cell, he was found lying on its floor unconscious from the loss of blood caused by a jagged gash in his throat which the unhappy man had inflicted with a piece of glass in his possession. Still many question whether he was dead or alive when he was taken from his cell.

The details of the lynching show the affair to have been the most brutal and horrifying that ever transpired in the state. It was about 9:15 o'clock that some men wearing masks, backed up by the others, made a rush upon the side door of the jail, and with a crash burst it open. In a moment the corridor was packed with men. Sheriff Jacobs appeared in the doorway leading from the other hallway and shouted to the men to stop, at the same time making a motion to draw his revolver. In an instant the sheriff was seized and held by half a dozen men so that he was unable to move. He attempted to argue the matter but the lynchers would not listen. Several deputies tried to come to the assistance of the sheriff, but they were hustled out of the building.

The cell was [illegible] with a sledge, and despite [illegible] that Sullivan was lying on t[illegible] unconscious, the blood flowing freely from the wound in his throat, the lynchers slipped the noose about his neck and dragged him out to the terrible doom that awaited him. As the victim was pulled out the shout that arose was tremendous, and the crowd scrambled to obtain places nearest the body. The frightened wretch was dragged to an oak about 200 feet from the jail and a hundred eager hands grasped the end of a rope that was thrown over a limb and in an instant the body of the murderer was dangling in the air.

The body hung motionless for a moment or two, then gave a sudden twist and swung half way around the trunk of the tree. A terrible scene followed. Those nearest the body kicked and punched it back and forth and grabbed the limbs and pulled them violently. "Let us shoot him!" shouted several. "No, don't," cried others. Meanwhile the crowd continued to jeer at Sullivan, applying to him the vilest epithets and asking with curses how he liked it. The fury of the mob seemed to increase at every moment. The body was pushed from hand to hand and several drew their pocketknives and lunged at the swinging corpse. The maddened mob fell to pulling the body about again and kicking it, when an old man with long gray beard held his hands aloft and kept crying for silence until the crowd stopped him by shouting.

When the body was lowered to the ground portions of the mob which had been unable to get close enough to take a hand in the actual hanging seized upon the rope and dragged the lifeless body through the mire. Afterward a crowd dragged him about the streets and around the courthouse square. Every few seconds their curiosity would overpower them, and they would stop to look at the body. It was a sight they will never forget. Bruises and cuts and contusions made the face unrecognizable, while the eyes were ghastly and the mouth set in the tight grip of death. Finally the crowd rounded up in front of a saloon. They were going to burn the body, but the sheriff's aids came up and stopped the terrible work. The remains were taken to the jail.

The jurors at the inquest were: George O. Chatfield, A. L. Beard, George F. Robinson, George D. Moreau, Morris L. Chase and Henry Klinkman, all well-known citizens and business men of this place.

The jury found that William Sullivan, a felon, voluntarily and with malice aforethought, made a felonious assault upon himself with a piece of broken glass and inflicted a wound 8 inches in length, with suicidal intent. This was all it amounted to. No mention of the other and greater occurrence was made.

Another Bank Failure.

JACKSON, May 27.—The Farmers' state bank of Brooklyn, this county, has closed its doors with liabilities amounting to about $20,000. There is no money on hand, but the bank owns large amounts of real estate. Col. N. G. King, owner of the bank, has been sick for a long time and unable to give his attention to the business, which is given as the cause of the failure.

After another song by the choir the graves of departed heroes were decorated by members of the G. A. R. Thus ended the exercises of the day.

The McCormick No. 4 Steel Mower

It's an ideal machine. There are more good ideas about its construction than can be found in any other mower. Probably that's why its sales are so enormous. It has the best foot-lift to be found on any mower; is fitted with the McCormick the severest tests possible to a grass-cutter. Guaranteed to work where others fail.

It's a light draft mower, and it's durable. It's an easy winner of field trials. It's a really valuable mower in more ways than can be enumerated here—and it costs but little more than a "cheap" machine.

The Illustrated McCormick Catalogue shows the special merits of this mower. We furnish it—so do our agents.

TO HORSEMEN AND BREEDERS.

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6, Reg. Vol. VII. Bay Stallion, 16¼ hands; foaled 1884. Bred by Glenview Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:05 without much work. He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, are considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. He had 19 sons and 18 daughters that had produced trotters in 1892. 31 of his sons and 25 of his daughters produced fast ones, while he got 26 with records from 2:30 to 2:15 1-4. This is the best showing ever made by any sire, living or dead, to date. His sons and daughters produce early and extreme speed. His daughter, Manette is dam of Arion, 2-year old record 2:10 3-4, as a 3-year old 2:10 1-2; the fastest colt ever foaled, and sold for $125,000 cash. He made the season of 1892 for $2,500. Only one Stallion in the world produced at 4 years old a yearling colt that got a record below 2:30, and that is Woodlawn by Nutwood.

Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. Miss Russell is dam of Nutwood 2:18 3-4, Maud S. 2:08 3-4, Rustigne 2:21, Cora Belmont 2:23 1-2, Russia 2:25, and six sons that have produced extreme speed, also 4 daughters that produced speed. Lord Russell out of Nutwood's dam got Kremlin, 2:07 3-4, the acknowledged race horse stallion of the world.

Nutpatch's first dam, Patchen Maid, is the dam of Astral, 2:18, and Marshal Kieber, sire of Mistake 2:29 3-4, etc.; she by Mambrino Patchen 58, brother to Lady Thorn 2:18¼, and sire of London, 2:20 1-2 and 23 others. G. A. R. NOTICE!

We take this opportunity of informing our subscribers that the new Commissioner of Pensions has been appointed. He is an old soldier, and we believe that soldiers and their heirs will receive justice at his hands. We do not anticipate that there will be any radical changes in the administration of pension affairs under the new regime.

We would advise, however, that U. S. soldiers sailors and their heirs, take steps to make application at once, if they have not already done so, in order to secure the benefit of the early filing of their claims in case there should be any future pension legislation. Such legislation is seldom retroactive. Therefore it is of great importance that applications be filed in the Department at the earliest possible date.

If U. S. Soldiers, Sailors, or their Widows, Children, or Parents desire information in regard to pension matters, they should write to The Press Claims Company, at Washington, D. C. and they will prepare and send the necessary application, if they find them entitled under the numerous laws enacted for their benefit.

I ALSO SELL THIS SEASON THE

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER.

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground. We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crop, and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peaceful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

THE JOHNSTON MACHINES

THE GLOBE MOWER NO. 8.

STRONG,
LIGHT,
SIMPLE, DURABLE

The Lift Spring and the Foot Lever are two advantages possessed by no other Mower.

Aside from the above cut which we introduce to illustrate the mechanical structure of these machines we feel that it is necessary to say very little. We claim for our "Globe," or No. 8, that it is the PEER OF ANY SINGLE SPEED MACHINE ON THE MARKET. No other Mower is built with so wide a truck as our No. 8. One advantage gained by the use of a wide truck is the reduction of vibration to the minimum. This will tell in the long life of the machine, and the driver who has occupied the seat of a narrow truck Mower will instantly recognize the difference, and praise the wide trucks.

Call at our warehouse in Holloway and examine the "Globe."

S. W. FARMER'S CLUB.

The June meeting was held Friday afternoon, the 2nd, at "Hard Scrabble," the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Merithew, in Sharon township.

The attendance was large, for about sixty persons were present, some coming a distance of ten miles, regardless of the forbidding aspect of the clouds. Several members of the Norvell club were there by invitation, also Mrs. Howe, of Clifton Springs, N. Y.

After a pleasant chat the club was called to order and proceeded to elect its officers for the coming year. This resulted in an entire re-election of those of last year: President, Benj. G. English; Secretary, Mrs. J. F. Spaiard; Treasurer, Amariah Hitchcock.

Next, H. R. Palmer read press clippings culled with care from leading periodicals.

Mrs. L. D. Watkins' essay treated of wild flowers. "If you would behold a land of flowers, look around you." "Fully fifty varieties should be in blossom by the middle of May."

W. E. Pease read a chapter on "Country Roads," taking a decided stand against the recent enactment by the Michigan legislature in regard to the method of working them.

He said the old countries could well afford better roads because they are more thickly populated, having sixty-nine inhabitants to the square mile, while we have but thirteen to the square mile.

L. D. Watkins opened the discussion with a description of European roads he had traveled upon. He favored a more perfect system by which our horrible roads in the spring and fall might become a thing of the past.

George Rawson wanted a new regime inaugurated but objected to bonding the towns to procure funds.

Richard Green liked the present system, if every man would work out his share of the work; did not like the modern road scraper.

J. F. Spafard thought the new law would only create another office for unscrupulous politicians to strive for; and the most unqualified one would be commissioner of roads.

John G. English took a most sanguine view of the subject; said some work had already been done on the highways, for he knew of hills in his vicinity that had been lowered fifteen feet.

J. R. Holmes gave a few reminiscences of pioneer days in Michigan. He helped to blaze and fell trees along the first highway between the Chicago turnpike and Manchester.

The President said each road district knew better its own needs than a county commissioner would. Home rule should obtain in this as in other matters.

The club adjourned, after partaking of the bountiful refreshments provided by the hostess, and by sunset were wending their way toward their homes, each mutually resolving to meet with Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Rawson in their new home in Bridgewater on the first Friday in September.

Kate Field says that the secret of longevity and success is to never do yourself what you can get anybody else to do for you.

OUR ANN ARBOR LETTER.

EDITOR HERALD:—Perhaps you, and Tecumseh people in general would be sity of Michigan life, which take away the monotomy of the humming machinery in an institution of learning. By no means do we harken only to the metallic clanking of science, or the clicking of the minature boiler factory at the dental depot. There are those stern Medes and Persians in the Law Dept., that Temple of Justice, where Themis teaches the youth to devise seductive snares for the unweary. Across the campus the medic rattles the unreverenced bones of his ancestor. Out on the broad fields dedicatad to learning, the base ball is carefully and philosophically studied, with all its ins and outs. Base ball is one of the most popular courses in the University curriculum. It is the only direct road to fame. Then there is the Literary Dept where are kept those monsters, which are reared and nourished on weary brains of young ambition. They are no myths, no Briareus, or Typhon, but realities. Their names are Conic Sections, Greek Verb, French Pronounciation, and that murderer of sleep, the Co-ed. Tis here that the spring poet warbles his native wood notes, and is encouraged in it.

There are some mysteries that might delight you to penetrate. The champion tennis player who industriously, fans the playful zephyrs for four long years, and gets a title of Arts Bachelor. The society youth who trips his artistic toe at Gains dancing Academy, for five hours each profane evening, and gets a degree of Master of Science. How does he do it? Well, sometimes he had a a studious friend, who needs financial support and studious friend takes examinations under his name, and in crowded classes who is the wiser? Sometimes his dear friend is a tutor, who kindly overlooks his shortcomings, and gives him the deserved credit. Again he wears a Minerva cuff, which attentive deity advises him what to say in the awful quiz. Or he purchases a pony for a dollar, which winged Pegasus will carry him over many rocky ways. Should you hear a student remark that he had "just knocked a tute so cold that he had to go and get his overcoat," or threaten to "black Pat's eyes to-morrow," don't go away moralizing on the terrible increase of pugilistic aspirants, because all the dear boy means is that he has or intends to recite well. All is not sober or melancholy in the old Varsity walls. Even a vulgar roar of laughter is heard at times as on occasions such as a few days ago, a Co-ed was asked the ending of a Greek word, and answered, lois. The professor corrected her saying, no, it is lice; whereupon some boys smiled, and the teacher noticing it remarked dryly, "Well, you fellows show what runs in your heads."

So Athena mingles the mystic, the grotesque, and the ordinary, in the draughts which she compounds for her thirsty suitors.

State Musical Convention.

The great convention of the Michigan music teachers is almost here. The last three days of this month Adrian will be honored by Michigan's most brilliant musicians, who will give our people the rare opportunity of hearing the best the state affords in music.

The following is a partial list of the artists who will assist in the seven programmes:

Pianists—Mr. Franz A. Apel, Miss Agnes Andrus, Miss Grace Smart, Miss Unsworth, from Detroit; Mrs. Kate M. Kedzie, Lansing; J. Erich Schmaal, Ann Arbor; Miss Effie M. Richards, Hillsdale.

Vocalists—Miss Jennie Stoddard, Miss Nellie Goodwin, Miss Alice Andrus, Detroit; Mrs. F. W. Prentice, Hillsdale; Miss Fannie S. Taylor, Jackson; the Euterpe Ladies' Quartette, of Detroit.

Organists—George W. Klock, Coldwater; Wm. E. Snyder, C. A. W. Howland (blind) Detroit; A. A. Stanley, Ann Arbor.

Flutist—H. E. Avery, Detroit.

The Adrian concert will be given Friday evening, June 30, by the Whiting chorus and several of our finest soloists.

The M. M. T. A. is not connected in any way with the Whiting chorus, and membership in the chorus does not give membership in the M. M. T. A., although chorus members are eligible to membership.

The membership ticket is $1, which admits the holder to all the sessions of the convention. The tickets are transferable for any session. Single tickets for all the concerts will cost $2 or more, so at least $1 can be saved by purchasing a membership ticket.

The convention will be held in the Baptist church on Broad street.

All reputable persons favoring the object of the Michigan music teachers' association are eligible to membership.

See that your name is on one of the membership lists being circulated by the Whiting chorus. Watch for further convention news.

SEEING THE BIG FAIR.

Warning to Visitors at the Columbian Exposition.

DO NOT OVERWORK YOURSELVES.

There Are Various Ways in Which You Can Take in the Sights and Still Not Be "Tired Clear to Death."—The Difficulties Attending Sight-Seeing in Couples or Quartettes.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 2.—[Special.]—This is a great place for tiring one's self out completely. There never was another such temptation to overwork, and this is their guard about. It does not pay to become too much fatigued. The visitor who comes here determined to see the whole show in three or four days, and who rushes about from building to building, makes a serious mistake. Better not to enter many of the buildings at all than to run through and slight the contents of those which are entered, wearying the body and wearing out the nerves. It is a mistake to jumble up the senses and to lose to a certain extent the power of appreciation. Still many people do go rushing through the fair as if their lives depended upon their seeing the inside of all the buildings in a day or two. Every day I see people here who are making labor, and labor of the hardest kind, of that which should be pleasure.

Today, for instance, I saw two or three young women on one of the station platforms of the elevated electric railway which runs through the grounds. There are no seats on these platforms, as there should be, for the trains are often ten or fifteen minutes apart and waiting passengers should have some place to sit. These young women were, in their own way of putting it, "tired clear to death," and not finding any other place to sit and rest themselves they deliberately sat down on the floor of the platform. It was a dusty, dirty floor, but they did not mind that. They said it was a question of sitting down or falling down with them, and they preferred the former. Other passengers looked at them in a queer sort of way, but did not laugh. They were tired, too, or the most of them were, and though they did not wish to follow the example of these adventurous maidens they certainly had a warm sympathy with them. One elderly and prim woman who was evidently very, very weary, looked at the girls squat on the floor with somewhat of enviousness in her glance, and said:

"I wish I had the nerve to do that, but I haven't."

While the young women sat on the floor they talked of the buildings they had been in that day. They had had a run through six or eight of the great structures, and then fell to planning how many more they were to go in before calling it a day's work. Evidently they had started out to see the World's fair in one day, or in two days at most, and they were willing to commit suicide in order to do it.

If people will rush through the grounds and buildings at race-horse speed they will find it to their advantage, and economical in the long run, to hire a rolling chair. These chairs with a man to push them cost 75 cents an hour, but are worth the money if one is determined to see all that may possibly be seen in a given time. A very good plan is to walk about for an hour or two hours and then hire a chair for one hour. The chairs are wheeled all through the buildings as well as from one building to another, and one may thus rest and see at the same time. In fact, there is no better way to see than while ensconced in one of these comfortable vehicles. The only trouble which ladies have with them is that their guides persist in talking too much, or at least some of them do. The average visitor to the fair does not care to be talked to all the time by any one, much less by a stranger. One wants to see and think for himself. If you come here and hire a chair and the man who is employed to wheel it about talks too much for your comfort it would be perfectly right to give him a gentle hint that you will ask for information when you want it.

Men who come with their wives, mothers or sisters find that one chair does very well for two people. A hundred times a day one sees a man sitting lazily in the vehicle which a guide is pushing while the wife or sister walks along side. But it would be rash to conclude that the man is selfish and that he makes a business of riding while his wife or sister walks. That is not the case. It is simply his turn to ride a bit, and after a short time, when he shall have become rested, he will get out and the woman will have her inning at the chair.

Many men do not hire a guide at all, but take a chair at 50 cents an hour and push their wife or woman companion themselves. It is not hard work at all. The chairs have rubber tires and are admirably constructed in every way. They roll along with very little pushing, and besides, one is stopping every few seconds in order to look at some exhibit. If a man is strong and active he may in this way make sight-seeing an easy task for his wife or sister and at comparatively small cost. Suppose you are out altogether seven hours during a day, which is as much time as you should attempt to put in. One hour of this you will probably pass at luncheon in one of the many delightful restaurants, and that will be a rest. Of the remaining six hours if you walk through and a wheel chair at 50 cents an hour the other three, an hour at a time, you will reach the end of your day's work but little wearied, and without having spent much money. Of course it is harder on the man who must do the pushing, but even he may sit in the chair once in a while stopping before some exhibit and thus gain a few minutes' rest. It is almost an ideal method of seeing the fair. The wife or sister in the chair likes to be wheeled about by one she loves, and this method gives the two persons almost precisely the same view point while on their rounds.

One of the great difficulties of sight-seeing in couples, in trios or quartettes, on foot, is that it rarely happens two persons look at the same thing at the same instant. One is a little in advance or off to the right or left; and about once in two minutes one or another calls out to his companion, "O, do come here and look at this—it is the prettiest thing in the world. Come and see it." At that very moment the person accosted may be much interested in another article, and the interruption is anything but welcome. The first or the fifth or even the tenth interruption of this sort does not matter much, but when it comes to being accosted and led away a hundred times in a day the thing becomes rather monotonous. If you use the chairs, and one of you rides while the other wheels, you will as a rule see the same articles at the same moment.

The ideal way of seeing the World's fair, after all, is not with one's wife, sister, brother, sweetheart, mother or anybody. It is alone. I see this exemplified day after day. Men and women who have come here for a good look through the great exposition travel about together for a few days, and then invent some excuse or other for sneaking away by themselves. In a day or two, more they reach a tacit understanding, and arrange their programme accordingly. Perhaps they go to the fair together and enter one of the big buildings, having a rendezvous at a certain point at a certain hour. Then they separate and each puts in the time according to his taste. The trouble about hunting in pairs is that no two persons have the same taste, and where one wants to stop and look a long time or perhaps ask questions the other is for hurrying along. This produces a certain spiritual friction which interferes with the enjoyment of the occasion. I have some very good and dear friends here, but whenever it is possible I get away from them for an hour or two and enjoy myself all alone. It is always advisable to meet after a time, especially at the luncheon hour.

There are restaurants on the grounds in which it is a delight to sit down and eat. They are on the roofs of the big buildings, or in places where good views of the grounds and of the crowds may be had. One such place that is very popular is the roof garden of the Woman's building. Another is on the top of the Transportation building above the marvelous golden door. Still another is the restaurant or cafe of the Casino, where there is a magnificent view of Lake Michigan, the pier, and of the sublime central court. This Casino is at the southern end of the peristyle, and visitors who enter it will be amazed at its great size and its magnificence. Seen at a little distance it seems a rather small structure. You would say the number of persons who may be fed at one time in it would be measured by hundreds instead of by thousands. But it is like everything else in this exposition, very deceptive as to its dimensions. When you get to it or within it, you for the first time realize how vast it is, how tall and wide. Why, it is said 4,000 persons may be seated at tables and served in it at one time.

"TIRED CLEAR TO DEATH."

Most visitors have heard of the Casino as the place where extortion is practiced, where outrageous prices are charged for things to eat and drink. I went in there the other day with a friend expecting to spend about $4 for a modest luncheon. But the bill-of-fare was a revelation. A careful look through it failed to discover a single charge that could be considered exorbitant, as prices in a large city go. Soups, for instance, were 20 to 30 cents a portion, and for luncheon one portion is enough for two persons. The roasts of beef, mutton, etc., were from 50 to 60 cents each, and the portions large at that and of good quality as well. One may have a small steak for 50 cents and coffee for a dime, with bread and butter. A sirloin steak for two, with onions, is $1.25, not an exorbitant price, by any means. My friend and I had a very enjoyable luncheon, with two kinds of meat and a salad, for $1.40. We gave the waiter a dime and went out feeling that we had done very well for six shillings each. We could have made the cost even less had we been willing to take one portion of meat, quite enough for two if you are not ravenous, and for that we should have had to pay 10 cents extra on account of its being served to two persons.

At some of the other restaurants the prices are even lower than at the Casino, for it is at this place that the swell people go and rates are supposed to be high. The truth is, so far as I have been able to discover from personal observation and from inquiry of a great many people, this talk of extortion has little foundation. There certainly is no extortion within the grounds. In some instances high prices may be charged for meals or rooms without the grounds, but in view of the fact that competition is fierce for customers and plenty of places exi-ting where one may have what he wants at reasonable cost, it is a man's own fault if he permits himself to be imposed upon more than one meal.

But above all do not try to be economical in the wrong way. The wrong way is to think you can come here for two or three days and get a satisfactory view of the fair. If you attempt this, and run your legs off in endeavoring to carry out your programme, you will defeat the very object you have in view, which is pleasure and education. It is a fair worth spending both time and money to see, and to see well and leisurely. ROBERT GRAVES.

Seal of New York Lady Managers.

The woman's board of managers of New York has adopted a pretty seal which is to be affixed to all its official documents. It represents an Indian woman standing on a rock bound coast, holding a blazing torch above her head. In the distance is shown faintly the outline of one of the vessels of Columbus' fleet. There is a pretty story which goes with this, based upon the report made by Columbus on his return to Spain, in which he said that the night of Oct. 11, 1492, he saw a light moving on the land. The theory on which this story is built up is that an Indian woman was waving the torch as a signal to her husband, a fisherman who had been delayed in getting home in his frail canoe.

On the Brick Battleship.

The battleship Illinois draws great crowds, and they are intensely interested ones. The great number of the visitors to the brick gunboat appear to be people who up to date have never looked upon anything more war-like than a canal boat, and everything appears so real on the model ship that it seems to impress them with the pomp and circumstance of war, and makes them simply wild to find out just what everything is for. Everybody is fascinated by the machine guns, not a man who comes aboard the Illinois but stops at the breach of one of these ingenious machines and sights carefully along the polished barrel. Then he goes on contented.

SENT TO THE BOTTOM.

The Steamer Corsica Collides with a Schooner on Lake Huron.

The Latter, Thought to Be the Schooner Corsican, Instantly Sinks and Her Crew Perish Before Help Can Reach Them.

SUNK IN A FOG.

ALPENA, June 3.—The steel steamer Corsica collided with an unknown schooner 15 miles off Thunder Bay island on Lake Huron at daybreak Friday morning in a fog. The schooner was cut in two and went to the bottom instantly. Her entire crew was lost. The Corsica had no time to wait for the rescue of any survivors who might be floating around in the mass of wreckage, as her bow was stove in and water was pouring into her hold. She was run on the shore in Thunder bay just below Ossineke. The bows are all crushed in for a considerable distance and twenty-four big steel plates are loosened.

DETROIT, June 5.—There now remains but little doubt that the schooner sunk by collision with the steamer Corsica in Lake Huron early Friday morning was the Corsican, of this city, as no other schooner is now missing. The Corsican carried a crew of five men, but their names are not known here.

SCALED THE WALLS.

Two Convicts Escape from the Penitentiary at Marquette—Four Prisoners Break Jail at Kalamazoo.

MARQUETTE, June 5.—Jerry Laughlin and Thomas Kneebone, two convicts in the branch state prison here, escaped about 5 o'clock Sunday evening by scaling the wall. There was no guard on the wall, as the convicts were inside. Laughlin and Kneebone were taken out in charge of a keeper to bring in the convicts' suppers. They ran, got over the wall and were out of sight in the brush in two minutes. Both were serving sentences for robbery, Kneebone for two and a half years and Laughlin for seven years, and had finished about half their time.

KALAMAZOO, June 1.—George Saunders, a confidence man, awaiting trial; Gallagher and Jones, wanted in Ohio for train robbery, and Allen, a suspect, escaped from jail here by sawing off two bars. The sheriff had given them the liberty of the corridors and they took advantage of it to release themselves.

THROWN OUT.

The Circuit Court at Grand Rapids Decides That the Votes of Inmates of the Soldiers' Home Cast in a Recent Election Shall Not Be Counted.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 1.—In the circuit court Judge Grove decided the quo warranto proceedings brought by William G. Saunders against Kenney Hanna in favor of Saunders. On the face of the returns Hanna was elected justice of the peace in Grand Rapids township, the inmates of the soldiers' home voting. Saunders contested his right to the office on account of the veterans' vote, claiming they were not entitled to vote and asking that the entire vote of the home precinct be thrown out. The case will be appealed.

Death Caused by Chloroform.

LANSING, June 4.—Mrs. Charles H. Fisher, of this city, aged 27 years, came to her death here Saturday in a peculiar manner. Chloroform was administered by Dr. Thoms for the purpose of having several teeth extracted. The patient was believed to be free from heart disease and had several times safely taken the drug. Dr. R. H. Clark extracted fourteen teeth, when the patient began to sink, and died while still under the influence of the drug. She was the daughter of ex-City Attorney Snow, of Jackson.

Bank Doors to Reopen.

LANSING, June 4.—The Ingham County savings bank, which closed its doors nearly two months ago, will be reopened in a few days. At a meeting of the stockholders Saturday it was reported that $50,000 additional stock had nearly all been taken, and it was voted to place Gen. D. B. Ainger in charge of the institution when the doors are reopened. The number of directors will be increased from seven to nine, and as the bank's finances have always been in good condition the bank commissioner sanctions the reopening.

Accounts Tangled Up.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 5.—The resignation of J. S. McCandless, secretary of the Michigan Knights of the Grip, was accepted by the officers and executive committee in session here Saturday. As secretary he handled $10,000 or $12,000 annually, and his accounts are badly mixed and will be investigated. Lloyd M. Mills, of this city, was chosen secretary to succeed him. The annual meeting will be held in Saginaw during holiday week.

Fitzgerald Discharged.

DETROIT, June 3.—W. H. Fitzgerald, the general manager of the Detroit Electric Light and Power company, whose examination on the charge of bribing aldermen to vote in favor of his company has been in progress for the past two weeks, has been discharged by Judge Sheahan, of the police court. The court made this decision on the ground that the charge of bribing Aldermen Protival was not supported by sufficient evidence.

Death of a Pioneer.

KALAMAZOO, June 3.—Stephen F. Brown, the wealthiest and best known pioneer in Kalamazoo county, died at his home in Schoolcraft Friday morning, aged 73 years. He had lived in this county sixty-three years. He was elected to the state senate three times, in 1860-'64-'84.

Killed in Chicago.

BENTON HARBOR, June 3.—By a collision between a freight train and a street car in Chicago Miss Lena Eldred, of this city, who was a passenger on the street car, was instantly killed. Miss Eldred was well known in Benton Harbor society and church circles.

Totally Blind with Scrofulous Sore Eyes

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Back Her Sight, and Joy to Her Father's Heart.

"Waterbury, Vt., Nov. 10, 1892.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"In April, 1889, my little girl Mamie, who was then 3 years old, commenced having bleerated eyes, also had sores back of her ears. Her sight began to grow dim, and I feared she Might be Blind.

I then lived in Jericho, Vt. In the early days of June I went with her to the Mary Fletcher Hospital in Burlington, and there she was treated four different times—a surgical operation each time, one of which left the scars now visible on the eye ball. She received from this treatment each time a slight improvement for a few days, was soon worse than ever. She could discern daylight from darkness, but could not see to walk across the room.

"I next went to a large hospital in Hartford, Conn. At this hospital no surgical operations were performed, but here one was dropped into her eyes and even both eyes. She was at this hospital about ten weeks, continually growing worse, and when I took her in November

Was Totally Blind.

"I arrived at my station in Jericho with the child, sad in spirit and impoverished in pocket, completely discouraged. On our way to the house from the station we stopped at the store of Capt. McKinnan, who was an old sea captain, to warm ourselves. The captain had known the child before we went away. While we were warming ourselves Mamie said:

"'I papa's dark, where are you? I can't see you, come to me.'

"The captain's heart was touched, and with tears in his eyes he said:

"'Charley, you go and get a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and give it to her, and if it don't help her I will pay for it.'

"That very afternoon I got Hood's Sarsaparilla and commenced giving it to her according to directions. The first beneficial result was a brightening of the eyes, which continued steadily improving until under the treatment of Hood's Sarsaparilla, on the ninth day she could see to pick up a pin on the floor without its being pointed out to her, and before the first bottle was all used

Her Sight was Entirely Restored.

I keep Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house always, and when the child gets a little cold, if her eyes appear inflamed, a few doses settles it. I thank God first, Hood's Sarsaparilla second,

The North American for June.

In the van of the strong and attractive table of contents of the June number of The North American Review is an an able and timely article entitled The Lesson of the Naval Review, by the Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, Secretary of the Navy, whose position gives him the right to speak authoritatively. He contends that if the United States would keep her own peace with all nations and maintain her place in the vanguard of civilization, she must at all times be prepared for war. Is superior to all other preparations claiming to be blood-purifiers. First of all, because the principal ingredient used in it is the extract of genuine Honduras sarsaparilla root, the variety richest in medicinal properties. Also, because the yellow dock, being raised expressly for the Company, is always fresh and of the very best kind. With equal discrimination and care, each of the other ingredients are selected and compounded. It is because it is always the same in appearance, flavor, and effect, and, being highly concentrated, only small doses are needed. It is, therefore, the most economical blood-purifier in existence. It makes food nourishing, work pleasant, sleep refreshing, and life enjoyable. It searches out all impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly by the natural channels. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives elasticity to the step, and imparts to the aged and infirm, renewed health, strength, and vitality.

PARADISE FOR LOVERS.

Sylvan Retreats at the World's Columbian Exposition.

POPULAR PASSION FOR MUSIC.

The Mammoth Buildings at Jackson Park and the Wonders of Midway Plaisance Do Not Attract the Attention of Lovers as Do Music and Something to Ride Upon—Electrical Display.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 7.—[Special.]—Of course we have lovers at the exposition. Did you ever know a place where they were not? This World's fair is almost a paradise for them, as it is for so many other people. Here they may find every-know how fond lovers are of riding upon all sorts of conveyances and vehicles—and everything that is tempting to spend their money for. This is not all. Here they may find sylvan retreats, safe from the eyes of the curious and envious. Or, they gain confidence in observing that all other people are so much interested in the great buildings and the exhibits that their eyes have no vision for a pair of silly dreamers. It does seem almost incredible that a young man and a young woman can be so much wrapped up in one another that they are unable to see the glories of the World's fair, but every day I notice just such couples wandering about the grounds, seated in the shady places along the wooded island walks, or holding each other's hands while enjoying a sail through the lagoons with the gay and romantic gondoliers. To people such as these the mammoth building, the Art palace, the exquisite statuary, porcelains, tapestries and jewels are as nothing. The wonders of Machinery hall and the Electricity building are sealed books. The curious races of men and animals to be found along the Midway plaisance are as if they had never existed. Only the things to ride upon, the flowers and shade trees, the music, the fountains, the electric lights and the delicacies to eat and drink which may be shared between them appeal to these coy cooers.

I am not sure that I should want to be in love at the Columbian exposition. I am too much in love with it. There is a time for human love, and for heavenly love, and for adoration of the handiwork of man in all the arts and sciences. This is the time and the place for the last named. There is enough here to call out the highest and tenderest of thoughts without resort to the means which all peoples practice and all time endorses. Besides, that we have always with us, while the World's fair is the event of a life-time.

Still there are lots of lovers here. They are fond of sitting out in front of the great Administration building, where from two band stands music is poured forth every afternoon. The Thomas orchestra occupies one stand and the Sousa band the other, and of course they play alternately. It is curious to note the popular passion for music as exemplified in the manner in which the people run from one side of the plaza to the other, according as the music is in the south or the north stand. There could not be a finer spot in which to listen to splendid music. It is simply ideal. The palatial Administration building affords a good background and sounding board. In one direction is Machinery hall, and farther along the perfect structure devoted to agriculture. On the other side the Electrical building and the mammoth palace. Between these most beautiful enclosures is the grand basin, with its fountain playing, the craft moving to and fro over the waters. Add music to a scene like this and one could not be blamed for imagining himself in a sort of earthly paradise. That is the way the lovers look at it, surely, for they find seats in some shadowy spot, or lift a large umbrella over their heads more to ward off curious glances than to protect against the rays of the sun, and sit by the hour.

This is not an energetic way in which to see the great World's fair, but it is a happy way. You may not learn much, but you will feel a good deal. This is particularly true if you come at night when the basin and all the buildings around it are lighted with electricity, and when the managers of the fair send large boats out upon the waters bearing musicians and choruses there to fill the air with sweet strains as they are silently moved to and fro. No such scene as this was ever before witnessed, and one does not have to be a lover in order to sit entranced by it. A line of lamps runs all about the walls enclosing the basin. Another follows the cornices of the great buildings and the top of the noble peristyle. The columns of the peristyle are lighted from niches set on the inner side, thus flooding the interior of the colonnade with a rich lustre. In the Columbian arch at the center of the colonnade red fire is burned each electrical evening, and thus the gateway to the lake is made to take on the line of warmth and welcome.

On the entrances and corners of the big foretaste of what the celestial city may be in the perpetually glorious hereafter.

Imagine, if you can, a graceful pillar about eighty feet high covered in geometrical lines with incandescent lamps of all colors, skillfully arranged. Imagine these 5,000 lamps hung in several hundred circuits, so that any number of them, in any combination of place and color desired, may be turned on at the same instant. Then, further, imagine a band of music near by, playing the soulful strains of a waltz or the grand sweeps of a march. As the band strikes up the pillar is dark. Not an atom of light illumines it from top to bottom. But what is this? There a streak of light, and here another? Ah, yes, it is so. The electrical current is keeping time to the music. The pillar of fire is springing its electrical notes in unison with those of the orchestra. Could anything be more beautiful, more inspiring?

But even this is not the greatest glory of the pillar of fire. Perched upon the top of the column is a huge crystal, a mammoth prismatic bulb that has precisely the Curiosity, sometimes stronger than love, drives our young man temporarily out of his nook for the purpose of making some inquiries concerning this dazzling creation. He learns it is really an incandescent lamp—the incarnation of incandescence he calls it a little later—and that it was made of 30,000 small pieces of cut glass carefully put together to form one huge crystal. Eight men were employed five weeks at this part of the work alone.

"We have 500 candle power in the bulb," says the electric light man, "and in addition to that we have some powerful refractors with which we are going to throw rays upon it from without in a few minutes. You'd better stay and see it."

In a few minutes the current is turned on according to promise. For a second or two our lovers forget themselves and each other. Neither they nor any one else ever saw such a dazzling, overwhelming scene of radiance and brilliancy as this. The great crystal rivals the sun himself in its vividness, and with much more than the sun's beauty. It is as if a sun were suddenly turned into a diamond of the first water.

While our lovers go back to their nook and sit and watch this apotheosis of Edison, let us take a short walk about the Electrical building and see what we shall see. It is too late in the evening and the crowds are too thick to attempt anything like a careful study of the show. But our hasty run along shows us that this is indeed the electrical age, and that electricity is the present industrial sensation. We had heard so before, or had read it in the papers, but here we have the proof of it. Here are the machines and devices and applications to speak for themselves. Here is the evidence of the amazing manner in which electricity has pervaded all the industries and nearly all the arts. There would be difficulty in selecting a field of human effort in which it has not already made its appearance in one form or another. And as yet it is but an infant. If it can do all this as a mere child during the first ten or fifteen years of its existence, what will it do and what part will it bear in the economics of the race when it shall have reached manhood's estate?

It is almost incredible that eight or more acres of floor space could be filled with the products of electrical industries, and yet that is just what one beholds in this building. Over in Machinery hall are several more acres, for it is there all the original dynamos or sources of power are located. In this great Electrical building—this palace of the marvelous—one may see all forms of electrical lighting and the most astounding decorative effects, and also a wonderful variety of the industrial uses of the magic current. Here is the telephone, the telegraph, the ocean cable, with operators to show you just how the work is done, and to give you cable messages to take home as souvenirs. Here is the telautograph or "far-writing-in-facsimile" machine, Professor Gray's latest wonder, now for the first time to be made familiar to the popular eye. Here is plating of metals, melting, burnishing, fusing, welding, by means of this unseen force.

Here are machines which go down under the ground or far into long tunnels and bore holes and draw cars loaded with mineral or hoist weights to the surface, deriving their power by means of a little wire which may be run anywhere and to any distance, and which gives off neither steam, gas nor smoke. Here are acres and acres of electrical devices which you will have to study very carefully if you [illegible]

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermoter. Where one goes others follow, and we "Take the Country." Though sold, we were unable to make [illegible] of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our ironclads in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the sixth year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigations and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 mathematical tests were made of different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial air currents of uniform wind velocity, settled many questions relating to the proper speed at which the best results are obtained, the best pitch, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of friction in the wheel, such as journal friction, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co. that guarantees its goods and factory to pass [illegible] both ways, and to their enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you can climb to oil—the Steel Tilting Tower and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one, write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 2167 Dale St., San Francisco.

FIVE DAYS AT THE FAIR.

A Flying Trip to the Columbian Exposition, and a Few of the Sights to Be Seen There.

Having recently caught the "Fair fever," we concluded to take a small dose of the only known "cure all" before the attack became dangerous.

We left home on Saturday morning, May 27th, via the Lake Shore route, connected closely at Adrian with the Chicago Express, and alighted at the Van Buren street depot at exactly three usual occurred on the tripand we passed a delightful day "riding on the rail." Upon arriving at the Windy City we sought out the cable cars for the north side and in due time knocked at the door of W. D. Meeker's residence on Fremont street, just in time for supper. Found Mr. and Mrs. Meeker at home and we passed that night beneath their hospitable roof.

Six days were spent in Chicago, one of which was squandered in running about the city and the remaining five were spent chiefly within the confines of Jackson Park. As our readers will doubtless wish to learn something of our experience at the big show, we shall endeavor to accommodate them. It would be impossible however to condense five days' experience into one letter of reasonable length, and hence we shall adopt the installment plan and give our patrons a small infliction each week for a month or so, instead of administering an overdose at one time.

The five days spent on Jackson Park were put to the best possible use, and yet only a small part of the Fair was visited. The Park, which is situated on the shore of Lake Michigan, seven miles from the business center of the city, is reached by four modes of conveyance: The Cottage Grove Ave. line of cable cars, fare five cents; the South Side elevated road, fare five cents; the Illinois Central rail road, round trip twenty cents; and the Lake Steamers, fare twenty-five cents. All these lines are well patronized and have all the traffic they can handle on big days. Upon arriving at the Park, the first essential for a visitor to do is to purchase a guide book and study the map. One day can then be well devoted to traveling about the grounds, and learning the exact location of all the different buildings. If a person expects to remain a month, he can give the entire exhibition a cursory examination and enter every building, but if he is to remain for a less period, he must select the special buildings or exhibits he wishes to visit and take the rest on faith.

THE FIRST DAY.

We took the cable car route over Cottage Grove Avenue and entered the Park at 57th street, near the north-west corner, crossed the 'north west pond' by a rustic bridge and found ourselves in a group of state buildings. A few steps brought us to the Michigan. Entered, placed our autograph on the register and proceeded to inspect the Wolverine headquarters.

With the exception of New York, Pennsylvania, California and Illinois, our own state can boast of one of the finest state buildings on the grounds. Its dimensions are 100 by 140 feet, three stories in height, surmounted by a tower, from which a magnificent panoramic view of the grounds can be obtained. It is fitted up in modern style with reception and toilet rooms, a fine assembly room, and a Woman's department.

The Saginaw and Muskegon rooms are furnished in elegant style by those cities. The south room on the second floor contains a natural history museum, the assembly room has a fine piano and organ, and the entire building is illuminated with 500 incandescent lamps. The total cost of the structure was $50,000, and the money seems to have been well expended. The walls are ornamented with many oil portraits and photographic views. Among the former are large size pictures of Abraham Lincoln and Gen. Custer. Two huge stuffed Elks guard the entrance to the natural history museum. Two map curiosities are exhibited, made by Kirkbridge of Grand Rapids—one a map of the United States, each state being shown in a different variety of natural wood, and the other a map of Michigan in which each county is represented in the same manner. The building contains a postoffice and telegraph office, a news stand, cigar stand, parcel room and all other conveniences to promote the comfort of visitors. Mr. Diemal has two large cases filled with mineral specimens to sell for souvenirs. The Michigan Board consists of I. M. Weston, President; E. H. Belden, Vice Pres; J. W. Flynn, Treasurer and Messrs Peter White, J. S. Valentine and J. A. Pond. They are frequently to be found at the building. The following attendants are there every day and devote their entire time and attention to the building and entertainment of guests: Mark W. Stevens, Secy; Miss Frances Bebee, Matron; A. C. Valentine, Bureau of information, and Will Weyatt, Assistant; F. J. Stevens, Postoffice; Andrew Wilson, Janitor, and A. C. Goodrich, Assistant; Thomas Gordon, Check-room; Geo. F. Warren, Cigar concession. They are imbued with the true love of whatever hails from Michigan, and all Wolverines are made welcome and feel at home at once. Upon inspecting the register for the preceding week we found the names of Fred Roseerans, wife and two children, S. R. McClure, and H. S. Waring and wife; also the names of several Adrian people. We visited the building once every day to enquire for letters and always met some acquaintance. Mail matter addressed to the "Michigan Building" is delivered there by carrier.

SWINGING AROUND THE CIRCLE.

Leaving the Michigan headquarters, we took a stroll down the avenue, past Wisconsin and Indiana, around the Illinois building, across the bridges west and south of the Fisheries and into the U. S. Government structure. After a few moments of gazing within, we stepped out to the dock and boarded an electric launch for a trip through the lagoons. The interior canals of the Park are equipped with a fine assortment of small boats driven by steam and electric power. Every large building on the grounds can be reached by water and there is an ornamental landing for each. There are forty electric launches, carrying about fifty passengers each. These are called "omnibus boats" and make the round trip of the entire waterway, touching at each landing, in one hour. Twenty express boats make the full trip, stopping only at the north and south ends of the route. The fare one way is 25 cents, or for a full trip fifty cents. Larger steam launches ply on Lake Michigan, entering the Park at the north and south inlets. On the interior lagoons also is a fleet of gondolas manned by picturesque Venetians. These may be hailed at any landing and are generally employed for time service. The electric launches are models for small speedy boats. They are propelled by electricity, the storage system being used. The pilot sits in the bow of the boat, manages the wheel and propels the boat also, like the motor man on a street car. Embarking on No. 39, the little craft was loosed from its moorings in a second and shot out like a duck over the placid waters of the lagoon. Heading easterly, it soon reached the north inlet, thence countered past the Government building, along in front of the Fisheries, under the bridges into the north pond, halted a moment at the grand Art Gallery, thence south again into the main lagoon, past the Woman's and Horticultural buildings, along the west side and south end of the Island, down the canal between the Electricity and Colossal Manufacturers buildings into the grand basin. Halting a moment at the landing in front of the Agricultural structure, the launch retraced its course, passing the east side of the Island to the starting point. The trip is made in an hour, covering a course of about four miles, and gives one a very accurate idea of the location of the larger buildings in the Park.

Alighting at the Government building dock, a few steps brought us to the north loop or terminal station of the intramural railway. This is an elevated road operated by electricity similar to the street car lines in common use. Its route is around the outskirts of the Park, passing near the Lake shore to the north line, thence around on the north and west boundary lines to a point near the south-west corner, and thence east to the south terminus. The cars run very smoothly and give one a splendid chance to obtain a panoramic view of the buildings and grounds. After a few moments, stroll through the convent of La Rabida, we sought a lunch counter and then took the cable cars for the city.

PERSONAL MENTION.

During our stay we had the pleasure of meeting several old acquaintances. Called on LaVern Wheeler, at his residence and also at his studio on Madison street. He is prospering in many ways. He has a new boy in the family about a month old, and he is crowded with work in his portrait painting. We took our lodgings most of the time at W. D. Meeker's and feel especially indebted to him and his estimable wife for their hospitality. They spent six weeks in Florida last winter for the benefit of Mr. Meeker's health, and he returned fully recuperated. He expects soon to take an interest in a large undertaking establishment on Wells street. Mrs. Dr. Kimball of Adrian is spending a few weeks with her neice, Mrs. Beach, on Lincoln Ave. We had a pleasant visit at their house and found them nicely situated. Every day at the Michigan we met some acquaintance. Among them were Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Conklin of Manchester, L. M. Ide and wife of Detroit, Israel Schreder and wife and Lew Waldon and wife of Tecumseh, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Mead of Raisin, Geo. Freese of Clinton, Elder Yager and Chas. A. Pocklimgton of Ridgeway. We spent one night at North Harvey and had a good visit with G. P. Waring, but as the space allotted to this letter is filled, we must defer further mention of our Harvey visit until next week.

When is the best time to go? That depends. If you can spare only a week or two, would take cool weather and avoid the rush, then June is the best month. The Fair, as it stands to-day, is the biggist show on earth. But some of the buildings are still unfinished, and many of the foreign exhibits are yet to be installed. If you wish to see the Fair in all its glory and gorgeousness, when fully completed then wait until July or August and go with the crowd.

TO THE FARMERS OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

For the season of 1893 I wish to bring to your notice the great advantage you can derive during your harvest of hay and grain by the use of the latest improved and best harvesting machine in the world—made by Wm. Deering, of Chicago.

Here are a few reasons why you should buy a Deering:

1st—It has a jointed platform which when folded will allow the machine to pass through the same space as an ordinary buggy.

2nd—In ease of handling and lightness of draft it stands at the head.

3d—It never fails to tie, never chokes nor clogs, and uses less twine than other competing machines.

4th—It needs no expert to understand its construction. It requires no bothersome tinkering.

5th—All geared running journals are mounted in brass boxes, insuring easy running and long wearing qualities.

6th—The levers are so easily adjusted that any boy can run the machine who can drive a team.

7th—No weight on the horse's necks, as the machine is rear geared.

8th—Best material only is used in the construction of the Deering which is guaranteed by one of the oldest and best known firms existing.

Furthermore this company make their own twine and are not in the combine. Much more may be learned by calling at my warehouse and looking at the machines always on hand. Can prove their merits.

Yours truly,

C. L. Albaugh.

The Deacon, as played last Thursday evening, was the finest production in line of local talent that we have yet seen. The plot is a good one, the characters, are well suited to their parts, and the acting splendid. In spite of the weather a goodly sized audience enjoyed the play, and were so well pleased that they requested the company to repeat it Saturday evening. Saturday the town was billed high and low, and a more thorough job of advertising is seldom done. At 4 o'clock p. m. the Deacon with his Farmer Guards and Brass Band, paraded the streets and every one looked forward to a big house to listen to a good play. The failure came when the clerk of the weather, not having been consulted, sent down a shower of rain of such gigantic proportions as to effectually put a stop to all dramatic efforts for that evening. The company have had unusual bad luck in selecting a good evening, but not discouraged by that, will go ahead and try it again. Although not definitely settled, the entertainment will probably be next Wednesday night. Announcements will be made later and everyone who possibly can should attend, as no one can afford to miss it.

DESIRE OF HUMANITY

To Get as Near the Skies as Is Possible.

WHAT YOU CAN DO AT THE FAIR.

Elevators Will Take You to the Top of Manufactures Building and Many Other Structures from Which Wonderful Sights Are To Be Seen—The Great Vertical Wheel and the Captive Balloon.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 5.—[Special.]—We have no Eiffel tower here on which people may ascend a thousand feet above the level of the fair grounds, but there are several points at which a great elevation may be attained and from which splendid views of the Columbian exposition and the surrounding city of Chicago and the waters of Lake Michigan may be enjoyed. The aspiration to rise to high places above the level of the world, to the tops of mountains, towers and high buildings, appears to be almost universal in the human family. Americans of all the peoples of the world seem to have this desire to get near the skies. They are willing to spend their money for the blessed privilege, too. I met here the other day a gentleman who visited the Paris exposition of 1889. He was fond of going up the Eiffel tower, and ascended a number of times. The first platform, he said, was about four hundred feet from the ground, and the cost of riding thither was about two francs. On this platform one heard a perfect jargon of tongues, in which of course the French predominated but where the English could be heard only faintly. At the next platform, 750 feet high, where the charge was four francs, one could occasionally overhear a bit of English and began to feel a little less as if he were among strangers in a strange land. But at the very top, where the charge per passenger was eight francs, English was the predominating language and English with an American accent filled the air.

The Americans are the greatest people in the world for spending money. They pay out more of their earnings for travel and amusement than any other people, twice over. They like to rise to high places, and their desire to do so is so great that they do not stop much to consider the cost. Hence great crowds of visitors may be seen every day at the top of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building, which is the mammoth structure of the exposition. It costs only a quarter of a dollar to ride up here in one of the four elevators, and it is not surprising that so many people avail themselves of the privilege of seeing such a splendid sight at so small a cost. It is a view worth any one's time and any one's money.

The elevators rise out of the middle of Columbia avenue, the broad aisle which sweeps from one end to the other of the great building, with the nations of the world assembled along its front. It is a very queer look these elevators have, so slender and frail they seem, on account of the enormous hight to which they rise without floor or brace on the way. It is 203 feet straight upwards from the floor to the first bit of iron of the great trusses which support the roof. So vast is the extent of the building, and so perfect its proportions, that you do not realize the hight while standing on the floor. There are American flags up under the roof, a long line of them, and they do not appear to be more than six or eight feet in length. But buy tickets and take places in the elevators, and as you rise foot after foot the immensity of everything here will slowly dawn upon your consciousness.

Remember that your journey is like that from the basement of one of Chicago's tall buildings to the twentieth story. Two or three stories up the scene below begins to unfold. There are some extending perspectives. The German pavilion, with the series of palaces, its courts and its towers, seems to be enormous. So does the French pavilion on the other corner, by the clock tower. Columbia avenue is very wide as you view it now, the crowds are very thick.

By this time you are half way up. For the first time the actual size of a thirty acre building begins to dawn upon you. One instinctively opens his lips and inhales eagerly. The eyes part wide. It is a scene which cannot be duplicated anywhere else in the world—a scene which stirs some new corners of the soul and produces some unwonted sensations.

Now you are three-quarters of the way up. The elevator car is entering the electric light corona. Viewed from the floor below that ring of arc lights looked large enough to cover a sidewalk. Now you see it would compass a broad street from building to building. You have reached the lower edge of the flags. To see the upper or starry section you must raise your eyes. These banners are thirty feet long instead of the six or eight they had seemed from below.

Under the roof the elevator comes to a stop. "All out—keep to the left." You walk along a wooden platform suspended 200 feet above the world. The view is sublime. Now Germany and France are mere pigmies. The great towers and arches of these pretentious palaces within a palace are dwarfed into such smallness that you cannot even make out their form. Columbia avenue, now to be seen from the southern end, where Italy is, to the northern, where Japan flaunts her golden ball, is no longer wide and impressive, but a narrow strip up and down which myriads of little black spots may be seen moving. Nothing is large now but the mighty building itself.

This realization of the magnitude of the greatest structure that ever was is worth ten times the trouble and expense required to get here. For the first time one appreciates the majesty of the giant arches, and is able to understand the significance of the figures commonly used to denote the dimensions of things here—such as a thousand cottages each 25x50 feet, could find room within the walls, or a dozen United States capitols at Washington, or 350 long passenger trains with their locomotives, or fifty of the greatest steamships.

If the view within is soul-stirring—inspiring with confidence in the ability of man to work almost any miracle with steel and iron—what shall be said of the view from without? You walk out a door and find yourself on a promenade near the top of the building. It is some twelve feet wide, and it surrounds the building. The distance is half a mile, though this is only one-half the circumference of the structure at its ground line. As you emerge Lake Michigan is before your eyes, with the vast pier now looking like a bridge thrown out into the waters. Steamships are there discharging and taking on passengers. Innumerable steam and electric launches are running to and fro. The strains of music come from the water. Near by the surf is beating rhythmically on the shore. Uncle Sam's white battleship glistens in the sunlight at the left. Off in the lake are many steamships and sailing craft, for both passengers and freight.

Charming as this view is you resist the temptation to sit down on one of the benches which are plentiful up here. There are other panoramas to be seen.

From the north end of the promenade you behold a varied spectacle. The Government building is in the foreground. Beyond, a dazzling array of towers, minarets and domes—the Art palace, the Fisheries building, the foreign and state buildings. To the left the lagoon and the wooded island, now radiant with flowers. The gondolas and launches, miniature indeed from this hight, are flitting about. At the water's edge the Transportation building, with its touch of warm color and its golden entrance; also the vast glass dome of Horticulture and the classic outlines of Woman's building. Beyond all, to the north and west, the black smoke of industrial Chicago, the belching from furnace, factory and boiler room which brought the wealth by which all this scene of beauty and brightness was wrought.

The promenade is crowded with people who have been fascinated by this scene. But walk to the other end of the building and there you may look down upon a scene that is even more sublime. It is the central court of the exposition, the fairy spot. In the foreground the basin, with the golden republic rising from its teeming water. At the left the noble peristyle, here appreciated at its true beauty, surmounted by a half hundred statues and the colossal triumph of Columbus. Directly facing you is the most beautiful building of the whole exposition, that devoted to agriculture and its products. At the right Machinery hall, cathedral like and glorious, and Administration, which is a crown set upon the masterpiece. There is a great concourse of people on the plazza. From one of the band stands swell the strains of music produced by the greatest orchestra ever assembled. The fountains play. Underneath there is a tremulous, rhythmical peal. The chimes in the clock tower are rolling their notes through the vast enclosed space on which you are perched. Soon there is an echo from over the waters. The chimes in Machinery hall are being played in response.

It is not possible to exaggerate the beauty of this scene, the like of which man never before beheld. But there are other places in the exposition where one may obtain a good view from an advantageous hight. Elevators are run to the cupola of the Transportation building, 165 feet high, and the charge is only 10 cents per passenger. The view here is very fine, but of course not as good as that from the roof of the mammoth building. Many visitors ascend the staircases in the Administration building to emerge upon the porticoes there and enjoy a look at the court. Others climb to the belfry of Independence hall, which is the state building of Pennsylvania, Liberty bell itself being on the ground floor.

In the exposition are four great hights. One is the apex of the Manufactures building, 246 feet; another the top of the golden dome of the Administration building, 250 feet; a third the dome of the Illinois state building, 242 feet, and the fourth the upper rim of the great vertical wheel in Midway plaisance, about 250 feet. This amazing engineering work is not yet finished, though it soon will be. It towers above everything else in the that part of the exposition, and on account of its great size and peculiar proportions is even more conspicuous than the roof of Manufactures or the dome of Administration. When it is set in motion it will no doubt create a great sensation, especially at night when electric lights are to illuminate it.

If none of these views from altitude satisfy the World's fair visitor who likes to go as near to the sky as he can get, there remains the captive balloon. It has not yet begun to make ascents, but will soon do so. And when it does you may rise 1,500 feet in the air and view the exposition and Chicago from the edge of the clouds. For this experience you will pay the sum of $2 and be given a photograph of yourself taken in midair.

ROBERT GRAVES.

LANSING, June 3.—Gov. Rich has disposed of all measures passed by the legislature, and all received his sanction. He has not vetoed a bill since the session began. Among the more important to receive his signature since the session closed are the following:

There were no less than forty appropriation bills passed. The smallest amount called for by any one bill is $150, and the largest is $1,856,000. The total amount voted by the legislature is $3,720,000. The following are the appropriation bills passed by the 1893 legislature:

CADETS IN CAMP.

Col. Rogers and 140 Youths from the Michigan Military Academy Pitch Their Tents at Jackson Park—Dress Parades to Be Given Every Day.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 3.—Col. J. Sumner Rogers led 140 soldiers into Midway Plaisance Friday, and before night his men had pitched 100 tents and taken possession of the outermost post of the street. He is the head of the Orchard Lake (Mich.) military academy, and his command is made up of cadets from that academy, with their professors, tutors and field officers. Col. Rogers says this trip is a business one and the boys are under pledge to study just as hard as though they were in their cozy barracks back in the woods by the shore of the little lake whose name the school bears.

The cadets are in four companies and their skill in maneuvering has a country-wide reputation since they captured the flag at the national competitive drill in Washington. Being recognized by the federal government, the president appoints the instructor in militiffy tactics. This secures $30,000 worth of arms and ammunition from the capital and makes the graduates acceptable as candidates for admission to the classes of the national military schools. This idea is to show visitors the proficiency of the young men by a series of exhibitions. There will be dress parades each day at 5 o'clock, sometimes in front of the Government building, at others on the grand plaza and frequently in front of their camp. The commencement exercises will conclude the visit, and then the boys will scatter to their homes in all the states. President Palmer, of the national commission, delivers the address and Gen. Miles presents the diplomas. A splendid band accompanies the cadets. The camp is called "Camp Davis," in honor of the director general of the exposition.

CHICAGO, June 5.—On Sunday Rev. Dr. Henderson, of the department of social science, University of Chicago, preached a sermon to the Orchard Lake cadets, encamped at the east entrance to Midway Plaisance. The cadets will give an exhibition drill in the presence of the Spanish infanta, Princess Eulalie, some time during the week.

In journeying recently with a traveling man friend, the conversation took such shape that he took a bottle, from his grip, of Brant's Extract of Blackberry, saying: "I never travel without it. I am easily affected by the change of water, Chicago water especially always troubles me, but a dose or two of Brant's Blackberry quickly cures the trouble." He had it right and if the thousands who travel and visit Chicago this summer are "Wise like the drummer" to have Brant's Blackberry with them, they will find it a very useful article. 25 cent bottles of J. An Important Suit Decided.

The Adrian Times of last Friday has these particulars about an important lawsuit in which some Tecumseh residents figure.

The jury in the circuit court yesterday afternoon rendered a verdict of $1,000 in favor of the plaintiff in the suit for malicious prosecution brought against Albert H. Crane and Nathan N. Bradley, of Bay City, and Oscar P. Bills of Tecumseh, by Edward H. Rankin. Mr. Rankin was in 1888 engaged by the Tecumseh manufacturing company for one year, acting in the capacity of manager for the firm. He discovered when about three months' balance of his yearly salary was due him that the members of the company contemplated a disbandment, and that no arrangement had been made to protect himself. He then had a draft of the company's discounted, paid himself the balance of his salary, about $225, and charged the amount to himself on the books. He was arrested for embezzlement but discharged after an examination by T. M. Hunter. There were other members of the company beside the defendants named, but these were the only ones who had anything to to do with Rankin's prosecution. Mr. Rankin now lives in Columbus, O. John E. Bird and L. H. Salsbury were the attorneys for the plaintiff, and Watts, Bean & Smith represented the defendants.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE BIG FAIR.

JACKSON PARK, May 29, 1893.

EDITOR HERALD: A calm, beautiful day. The streets of the 'White City' deserted, the gates closed. With the exception of an occasional wagon bearing delayed exhibits to place, Jackson Park is to all appearance in a state of peaceful Sabbath rest. The guards pace dreamily the length of their dserted beats most of them thinking no doubt of sweethearts at home and those blissful times which they looked forward to every Sunday afternoon in times past. The gatemen find little relief from the monotony of their position in the questions of the few straggling visitors seeking admittance. The landscape is just beginning to show the verdure of spring, and above the green sod and the beds of bright spring flowers, the architectural beauty of the great white buildings, stands a token of the progress of the American people, and of the enterprise of our twentieth century.

While there has been a great deal of criticism in regard to the exposition management, much of which no doubt has been well merited, not one person will visit the fair and not be impressed with the magnitude of such a gigantic enterprise where are represented nearly all the nations of the Earth. And each nation seems striving to outdo the others in extent and variety of its display. I note with pride, however, that no foreign country can compete with our own in point of excellence and general utility or artistic display of exhibits. While the novelty of some foreign exhibits will attract the attention of many, the visitor capable of judging on merit will decide in favor of our own exhibitors in nearly every department.

Comparatively few people will make a comprehensive study of the exposition. They will be attracted by the picturesque costumes of foreign people, and by quaint booths and pagodas filled with curious foreign wares. They will enjoy a gondola ride through the lagoons, propelled by the brightly arrayed Venetian gondoliers, but what will they think of the lessons of progress taught by comparing this primitive method of transportation with the swift electric launches gliding past them? They will for the novelty be carried in sedan chairs by turbaned Turks, but will many compare the progress of nations as they see our steam and electric cars whirled swiftly by on elevated tracks?

But let us go back to the opening topic and compare that quiet, peaceful day, with one week later. This day the gates are open and complete preparations made to receive the multitude. Early in the forenoon trains to Jackson park are loaded and all day long the restless human tide surges through the great white buildings. Extra detachments of the guard are called into service to watch over precious exhibits.

To-day the gate-keepers are busy taking up tickets and passes. Employes of concessionaires are kept hard at work dealing out fruit, candies, ice cream, soda water, souvenirs, &c.

The restaurants, all of which serve all kinds of intoxicating drinks, are filled to overflowing. Is this the day of rest which we as a Christian nation observe? I leave it to your readers to draw the lessons taught by comparing these two Sabbath days. I will only say that those in favor of Sunday opening have held that in case of a closed fair the city of Chicago would be a hotbed of crime, but yesterday there was no decrease in attendance at the wide open saloons. The city streets were as crowded as usual, and it is the opinion of good judges that it will make no difference with the Chicago criminal record whether the fair is open or not.

People from Lenawee county will find it to their interest to come as soon as possible now, for although there is much that is incomplete, there is vastly more than one can see in two or three week's study. Now it is easy to secure accommodations, and there is no surging crowd of people to hinder thorough sight-seeing. My advice is to secure rooms in advance, through friends, or the Bureau of Public Comfort, at Jackson Park. Those who are acquainted with the city will however have no trouble in finding places to suit them.

If you think your readers, like Oliver Twist, are crying for more of this, I may undertake another of a more descriptive nature in the near future.

TO HORSEMEN AND BREEDERS.

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6, Reg. Vol. VII. Bay Stallion, 16 hands; foaled 1884. Bred by Glenview Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:25 without much work. He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:00 3-4 in 1891. He had 10 sons and 18 daughters that had produced trotters in 1892. 31 of his sons and 25 of his daughters produced fast ones, while he got 26 with records from 2:30 to 2:15 1-4. This is the best showing ever made by any sire, living or dead, to date. His sons and daughters produce early and extreme speed. His daughter, Manette is dam of Arion, 2-year-old record 2:10 3-4, as a 3-year-old 2:10 1-2; the fastest colt ever foaled, and sold for $125,000 cash. He made the season of 1892 for $2,500. Only one Stallion in the world produced at 4 years old a yearling colt that got a record below 2:30, and that is Woodline by Nutwood.

Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. Miss Russell is dam of Nutwood 2:18 3-4, Maud S. 2:08 3-4, Rustique 2:21, Cora Belmont 2:24 1-2, Russia 2: 28, and six sons that have produced extreme speed, also 4 daughters that produced speed. Lord Russell out of Nutwood's dam got Kremlin, 2:07 3-4, the acknowledged race horse stallion of the world.

Nutpatch's first dam, Patchen Maid, is the dam of Astral, 2:18, and Marshal Kleber, sire of Mistake 2:29 3-4, etc.; she by Mambrino Patchen 58, brother to Lady Thorn 2:18¼, and sire of London, 2:20 1-2 and 23 others. A Literary Sensation.

Uncle Tom's Cabin has certainly broke loose. The copyright on this most famous of American novels, by Mrs. Stowe, has recently expired, which frees its publication from the monopoly of the high-priced publishers, and though in anticipation of this, fact they have within a few months greatly reduced its price, now that it is really unchained the consequences are something surprising. John B. Alden, Publisher, of New York, issues several editions, selling them only direct (not through agents or book sellers); one in good type, paper covers, for 5 cents, sent post-paid, or the same bound in cloth for 10 cents, with postage 7 cents extra; also an excellent large-type edition, on fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth, for 25 cents, postage 10 cents. Surely a copy of Uncle Tom's Cabin will soon be found in every home where it is not already. Mr. Alden sends a 32-page pamphlet describing many of his publications free, or a catalogue of 128 pages of choice books, a veritable literary gold mine for book-lovers, for 2 cents. Address JOHN B. OVERMAN WHEEL CO.

BOSTON, WASHINGTON, DENVER, SAN FRANCISCO.

SATTERTHWAITE BROS., Agents, Tecumseh, Mich,

I ALSO SELL THIS SEASON THE

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER,

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground." We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crop, and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peaceful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

THE JOHNSTON MACHINES

THE GLOBE MOWER NO. 8.

STRONG, LIGHT, SIMPLE, DURABLE

The Lift Spring and the Foot Lever are two advantages possessed by no other Mower.

Aside from the above cut which we introduce to illustrate the mechanical feature of these machines we feel that it is necessary to say very little. We claim for our "Globe," or No. 8, that it is the PEER OF ANY SINGLE SPEED MACHINE ON THE MARKET. No other Mower is built with so wide a truck as our No. 8. One advantage gained by the use of a wide truck is the reduction of vibration to the minimum. This will tell in the long life of the machine, and the man who has occupied the seat of a narrow truck Mower will instantly recognize the difference, and praise the wide trucks.

Call at our warehouse in Holloway and examine the "Globe."

The Chicago Entertainment Bureau has several good lodging houses in its control. One of them is the Cottage Grove Inn, located just half way between the business center of Chicago and Jackson Park, the cable car line passing the door. It contains some splendid rooms at very reasonable prices, ranging from $1.00 to $2.00, and accommodating from one to four persons. The Bureau also control fine rooms in private homes for $1.00 for two persons. People should engage their rooms beforehand, and they will find it to their advantage to call at this office and see what we can offer them in that line.

Few people realize how strong a center for good educational work the Fayette Normal University is becoming in this section of the country. It is sending out every year large numbers of educated and cultured young ladies and gentlemen, well-trained teachers, skillful musicians and competent book-keepers and stenographers to take their places in the homes, schools and business-places of the land. So rapid has been the growth of the institution that the large University building could scarcely accommodate the school the past year. To meet the growing demand the college building and boarding hall in the western part of the village have been purchased and are being fitted up for school use. Thus in spite of its rapid growth, the institution has ample floor space to meet all requirements for many years.

Our venerable friend, Deacon Thornton, who possesses a passion for lemonade with a stick in it, was at his best last evening. The play, after being several times postponed on account of rain, was finely presented last evening to a fair sized audience. It goes without saying that the company was well entertained. Jehiel's manner of portraying the Deacon was inimitable. His entire make-up and stage manner was worthy of a professional. He was the pivot around which the plot revolved and his role was admirably sustained throughout. Space and time will not permit an extended review of the affair, but the characters all did finely. Robert Moore was compelled to take Levi Hayden's place on one day's notice, the latter being confined to the house by sickness, but he proved himself fully equal to the task. Harry Tansley played the villain to perfection. Art Lee made a fine officer. Mart Crossman, as the darkey, was just killing, and Chas. Rude, the Deacon's boy, made Mart a good second. Mrs. Moore acted the matron in a very dignified manner and Miss Hattie Conklin carried the part of heroine of the play in a way that won the hearts of all. Miss Hattie Bates acted the old maid true to life and Miss Grace Heesen made an excellent domestic servant. Mrs. Darrah performed her brief part in a life-like manner and little Bessie Bates was splendid. Don Bowen had but little to do but did that well. The play itself was an excellent comedy drama, the cast was most judiciously made up and it was very finely presented. The Co. C boys must have realized a good margin out of the entertainment.

REUNION OF CO. F BOYS.

The Fourth Annual Reunion of Co. F, 26th Regiment, Held at Britton Last Tuesday.

Tuesday, June 13th, marked the anniversary of the day on which the 26th Regiment of Michigan Infantry was mustered out of the service. Nearly all the members of Co. F were residents of this section of Lenawee county and four years ago they had a reunion of the survivors of the Company. The affair was such a grand success that they resolved to make it a permanent thing. This year the boys met with John Britton at his residence in the village of Britton. A better place could not have been selected and a more lovely day could not have been vouchsafed for such a gathering. June sunshine and June breezes combined to make the day a beautiful one and the clerk of the weather was in his most genial mood. The house and yard were most elaborately trimmed and decorated. The rooms inside were gayly ornamented with bunting and flowers. The maple and apple trees were wound with the national colors and long strips of bunting were stretched on either side of the walk from the gate to the doorway. Upon one corner of the house was a mammoth G. A. R. badge, the body being made of red, white and blue and the eagle and star of evergreens and flowers. A platform was erected on the west part of the lawn, upon which was a cabinet organ for the use of the choir. Upon this platform was a large shield with the words thereon, in large evergreen letters, "4th Reunion Co. F." In front of the house a large red banner was suspended, with the word "Welcome" emblazoned thereon.

At an early hour in the forenoon the old vets began to arrive and the time before dinner was pleasantly passed in social chat and reminiscences. At noon Sergeant Davidson called the roll and 28 of the boys responded. Two more arrived after dinner, making thirty in all who put in their appearance during the day. We append the names and residence of those present.

The boys broke ranks and with their invited guests they gathered around the tables, which were laden with all the substantials and delicacies of the season. After doing full justice to the viands a short respite was taken to permit the committee to enjoy their dinner also. The tables presented a beautiful sight, adorned with large bouquets of flowers and groaning under their load of eatables which the matrons of Britton know so well how to prepare. They would accommodate one hundred guests and they were nearly filled a second time. It was a feast which all present most heartily enjoyed.

At half-past one the company gathered about the platform beneath the shade of the old apple trees and President John Britton announced the literary program in the following order:

Singing by the choir.
Invocation by Rev. Rederus.
Vocal music.
Select reading—Ella Exelby.
Music by the choir.
Address by Rev. E. Mudge.
Letters from absentees by Jehiel Davidson.
Inst. Duet—Lizzie Dubois and Bertha Britton.
Short speeches by Chas. W. Haynes, S. C. Stacy and others.
Secretary's report by Jas. K. Crane.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows:

President—Henry Ball.
Secretary—James K. Crane.
Treasurer—N. H. Ackley.
Historian—C. W. Haynes.

The meeting next year will be at Dundee.

A resolution of thanks to the citizens of Britton for their hospitality was unanimously passed, a collection was taken to defray expenses and the formal program was closed. For fully two hours after the formal adjournment the crowd lingered, listening to impromptu music by the band and choir and enjoying a season of social chat. As supper time approached the company scattered, all voting that they had enjoyed a genuine gala day. It was surely a red letter day in the annals of Co. F and the village of Britton.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG SHOW.

The Government Building Very Popular at Chicago.

WHERE VISITORS ARE SURPRISED.

Foreigners Have Their Eyes Opened to the Richness and Resources of Our Uncle Samuel—The Various Processes and Departments of Government Graphically Illustrated.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 12.— [Special.] — Uncle Sam is a very popular personage at the World's Columbian Exposition. There is no feature of the fair that attracts a greater number of visitors than his display of the processes and efforts of the federal government. Foreigners who come here are much surprised at the evidence which they find here of governmental activity in this country. They had entertained a general sort of notion that the Americans were violently opposed to paternalism in government affairs, that the government of the United States was about as simple a thing as could be devised. But they are quickly convinced of their error. While they find no evidence of such paternalism as exists in some of the European countries and finds expression in state control of railway and telegraphs, and of franchises in the trades like tobacco monopoly, they do encounter proof that in everything pertaining to the welfare of the people and the development of the resources and fertility of the land our government is alert and energetic.

It is impossible for an American to visit the Government building, and the display of government concerns made in the open air near by, without a distinct sense of pride in his country and its institutions. Nearly all the things Uncle Sam attempts to do he does well, and he attempts a good deal. As an architect and builder he is not perfect, by any means, as the structure which he has erected here for his own use abundantly shows, but he is on the eve of reform in that respect. In a number of departments of his operations, notably the life-saving service and the weather bureau, he has easily led the world, pointing a way of improvement to European nations which they have been glad to follow.

The government has an exposition of its own here, and it is not surprising that it should prove so alluring to visitors. In a building covering three and a half acres of ground it shows every function of government, excepting the making of laws and the reception of office-seekers in the White House. What surprises most visitors is the enormous number of irons Uncle Sam has in the fire. He appears to be in pretty much everything, and after a few hours spent among his display no visitor will have need of further wonder as to what our good, fatherly uncle does with all the millions which we pour into his strong box through the custom houses, internal revenue offices and post offices. The wonder rather is how he manages to get along without striking us for more.

To describe everything in the Government building would be like writing a handbook of Washington, and that I am not going to do. It will suffice if we take a passing glance at things shown here, pausing now and then for a better view of some of the more interesting features. One of these is the most comprehensive display of seeds ever made. The specimens represent wheat grown in every county in the United States—that is, every county in which wheat is grown, and it is grown in about 2,000 counties. There are also samples of grain grown in all countries, from Japan to Mexico, and from Peace river valley in northern Canada to Patagonia in the southern end of South America. Every seed in this collection was picked by hand, and the varieties are shown in neat glass compartments on which are indicated the weight, nature of soil and climatic conditions.

The truth is, in one or other feature of his big show, Uncle Sam starts somewhere near the center of the earth, comes to the surface, and then sails away toward the clouds. His geological survey exhibits sections of the earth as deep down as any one has ever gone. Here the panorama of volcanoes, earthquakes and glaciers, as well as the constructive and destructive effects of water, are graphically pictured. Almost everything on the face of the earth, the farms, water courses, harbors, lakes, are shown in one way or another, and as if this were not enough Uncle Sam builds a huge model of the earth and sets it up on a pivot for the curious to walk under, around and over. Then he goes up in the air with a balloon and sets off dynamite with which to bring rain, or Gen. Greely, of Arctic fame, flies a balloon designed to show the modern method of military signaling.

In Europe the use of balloons for observation of the enemy's position and strength has been common for many years. The British and French have regular balloon corps, outfitted with all necessary apparatus for the inflation of the airships with hydrogen gas and the manipulation of the balloons after they are filled. Such captive balloons were used very successfully during the Rebellion, and Gen. Greely has had an airship constructed in France for use by the signal corps of the United States army.

Gen. Greely figures in the government display in another role. What the French would call the piece de resistance of Uncle Sam's show is a panorama or model of Ft. Conger, Lady Franklin bay, Grinnell land, which was for three years the home of Greely and his ill-fated expedition. The scene is representative of the return of Lockwood and Brainard from that famous journey in which they made the "farthest north," approaching within less than 400 miles of the pole. Greely has advanced some distance from Ft. Conger to meet and welcome the returning heroes, who with their Esquimaux assistant and their dog team form quite a cavalcade. The figures of Greely, Lockwood and Brainard are well executed, and the animals are exceedingly life-like, being the stuffed skins of Esquimaux dogs. The imitation of ice all around is realistic enough to deceive many visitors, and the members of the expedition who are seen standing on the land in the background, waving their hats with joy, add a bit of spirit to the scene. Near by is displayed the very flag which these brave men planted nearer the pole than any other human beings ever reached.

Uncle Sam has won distinction in Arctic work, as he has in almost everything else, and this Farthest North panorama is always surrounded by large crowds of visitors. Many other Arctic relics are shown here. While this scene gives a glimpse of the romance and triumph of the Arctic field, but a few feet away is a collection of articles which speak eloquently of the suffering and death which sometimes follow effort in the frozen north. These are the kettles, pans, cooking stoves, sleeping bags and other paraphernalia of Camp Clay, that dreadful spot where two-thirds of the Greely party perished by starvation.

Another interesting exhibit here is the collection of presents made to General Grant during his tour of the world. It will be remembered General Grant during his financial troubles pledged these to the Vanderbilts for money, and the Vanderbilts generously presented them to the National museum at Washington. The collection includes the presents received from foreign governments, the golden box containing the freedom of the city of London, and many beautiful swords and caskets inlaid with pearls and diamonds.

An instructive exhibit is that illustrative of the life and habits of North American Indians, composed of many full-sized, life-like figures, and innumerable paintings, a great number of the latter being from the famous Catlin collection. The Smithsonian institution and the National museum together make a magnificent display from their treasures, illustrating the development of arts and industries, the history of transportation, of language and religion, of music and printing, of bookmaking, photography and engraving. They show all American animals, birds and reptiles, the methods of the chase employed by the Indians, the Esquimaux and civilized man in North America; the service rendered to man by the various animals and the products of animals.

No exhibit of Uncle Sam's processes would be complete without the postoffice department. In addition to the practical World's fair postoffice, there is shown here a history of the development of the department, from the primitive saddle bags to the modern postal car and fast mail train. There is a collection of old mail coaches used on the California overland route, and they show many a bullet mark as reminder of the thrilling scenes of which they were mute witnesses. In the postal museum, where the curiosities of the dead letter office are present in an imposing array, is an old mailbag which was taken from a pony express by his Indian assassins. To this day the bag shows the stains of the poor fellow's blood. Foreign governments contribute an interesting exhibit, illustrating their postal methods.

The state department sends a collection of historical documents, but the original Declaration of Independence is not here. The department of justice shows portraits of all the chief justices of the United States supreme court. The treasury department makes a magnificent exhibit of coins and mint processes, including machines for stamping coins which are in operation before the eyes of visitors. A splendid display is that of the war department. Full-size figures show the officers of various rank from lieutenant-general down, mounted. Other figures show private soldiers and cavalrymen. Still others display the uniforms of our history, running back to the colonial period. There are models of camps and barracks, and graphic representations of the operations of an army in the field. An old "army office wagon" shows the clerks at work at their desks. Machines from the arsenals show how cartridges are made. A field farrier's outfit suggests no end of trouble in putting shoes on the feet of the frisky government mule. Many models show the work of the engineering corps of the army in constructing canals and breakwaters, improving rivers and harbors.

In the exhibit of the bureau of registry (treasury department) the visitor may see specimens of all the bonds and paper money issued by the government prior to the establishment of the bureau of engraving and printing. Samples of the old colonial bonds are given, and there are government bonds which once passed current for money. Here may be seen the original warrants drawn for payment of $15,000,000 in the Geneva award case. The first key used to lock the vaults in the United States treasury is shown, and a big, awkward thing it is. That was long before the era of time and combination locks.

The bureau of engraving and printing has a display which makes one's mouth water. It is a collection of all modern paper money issued by Uncle Sam, in denominations from $1 up to $10,000. Here people who never expect to own a government bond may see what one looks like, and they may see also samples of the wonderful engraving process by which it was produced.

In the field of money the greatest display is that of the National museum, which shows the coins of the world. The collection is one of the most comprehensive in existence, and is valued at a fabulous sum. It includes not only the coins of all nations and all ages, going as far back as 500 B. C., but the various substitutes for coins used in various parts of the world by primitive people. The most novel of these, perhaps, are the bars of salt moulded into bricks and used it is said to this day for making small change in Abyssinia.

Uncle Sam had the means and the organization for the making of a magnificent show here, and he has done it. Leaving out of the count his life saving station and weather bureau, battleship and other outdoor exhibits, he has within his big-domed building a world exposition of itself. Our Uncle Sam is a good deal of a fellow.

ROBERT GRAVES.

The Woman's National Indian association has worked hard to secure better laws for the Indians. It has been organized for fourteen years and has planted thirty-two mission stations. Mrs. A. S. Quinton, president of the society, is in charge of the department in the Woman's building. The South End Flower mission has a small kiosk from which the members will distribute flowers to the hospitals. All the cuttings from the Horticultural building will be furnished for distribution. This is a Chicago society alone.

THE MODERN INVALID

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

For this year, at least, the Columbine ought to be an eligible candidate for the honor of being the national flower.

STRONG WITNESSES.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is that of Nathan Allisons, a well known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for ten years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness, pain in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc.; one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with Heart Disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediately after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold also free book, by Baker & Hall.

Even the most devout Christians pray that expert testimony may have no weight in determining the final judgment.

Should this catch the eye of any one who needs reliable advice regarding Nervous Prostration or Debility, Sleeplessness, Fits, Epilepsy, St. Vitus Dance, Palpitation or Fluttering of Heart, Nervous Troubles attending Change of Life, Sick or Nervous Headaches or any form of Nerve Disease, you can obtain advice and consultation, free of charge, by writing the J. There are supposed to be about 425,000,000 Christians in the world, but you wouldn't think so to hear some people talk.

Pains Driven to the Four Winds—Good Health Renewed

Mr. S. N. Mahan
Rockford, Mich.

"I am 63 years old. Christmas eve I contracted a very severe cold with a settled all over me; every bone in my body was in rebellion. I soon procured the aid of a doctor. His remedies gave some relief, but the grip had me in its power and for several weeks I did not get out of the door. When I did recover sufficiently to get out, I found myself

Without Strength, No Appetite,

all tired out, and after eating what I could, what little strength I did have gave way and I could not walk farther than my barn before sitting down to rest. This was my condition when advised by our druggist to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. With much hesitation and

Doubts as Black as Night,

I went to taking it according to directions. Before the one bottle was gone I told my wife I was feeling a great deal better. Up to the present time I have taken about four bottles; my appetite is now good, strength has returned, pains have been driven to the four winds, and I give Hood's Sarsaparilla credit for all. This medicine has also cured my dreadful cough and I am well and happy as well as thankful. I tell my neighbors I am surprised at myself and never forget to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." S. N. A VISIT TO THE ORIENT

Picturesque Street Scene From Cairo at Chicago.

THE WILY ARAB AS A SHOWMAN.

He Knows How to Charm Quarters and Dollars From the Pockets of American Visitors—Fun Along the Street—The Donkeys, Dromedaries, Dancing Girls and Faked Mummies.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 14. — [Special.] — One of the great successes of the side-show department of the exposition is the street in Cairo. There is no other place within the vast enclosure where so much genuine fun may be had and where such strange sights may be witnessed. Here it is difficult for the visitor to imagine himself in Chicago, or in America. So skillfully is the very atmosphere of the Egyptian metropolis counterfeited, so realistic is the reproduction of the quaint scenes of Arab life, that one has now and then to pinch himself in order to recall the fact that he is at the World's fair and not traveling in the orient. It doesn't cost much to get into this street of Cairo. A dime is the charge. But it costs a good deal to get out. I do not mean to say you are compelled to spend more money, but you will be a queer sort of American if your curiosity can resist the temptations which the wily Arabs place before your eyes. Talk about Yankee ingenuity, American showmen, New England smartness—you should see the Arabs charm dimes and quarters and dollars from the pockets of their visitors. They are the real artists in that line.

On entering the gate you are at once plunged from Chicago into an ancient oriental city. A winding street lies before you, flanked on either side by rows of houses or shops of certain Arab architecture. There is no mistaking the fidelity with which the originals have been reproduced. The quaint windows of the upper stories are closed with decorated blinds, but on the street level each house has one or more little shops. The shops are not more than twelve or fifteen feet deep, and everything that they contain is displayed before the eye. There are in all forty or more of these bazaars, and in most cases they are attended by native salesmen, who speak enough English to get along very nicely and who are very shrewd in trade. In each shop is a young American woman, and her business it is to handle the cash and keep a record thereof to make sure the exposition management gets its fair per cent. of all receipts. These bazaars display no end of oriental jewelry, much of which was manufactured in America, to save customs duties; handkerchiefs, perfumery, slippers which are made on the spot by native workmen, candy, flowers (by a very bold fiction claimed to be of Arab culture), toys, cigarettes, dried snakes and lizards from the Soudan, curio of all sorts. As a rule the prices are reasonable, too, though you can never be certain the wares are of actual importation.

But it is not to the bazaars your attention is first directed. The street scene itself at once entrances you with its picturesque revelry and pleases you with its grotesque gaiety. Near the entrance you come upon a lot of Cairo donkeys, little animals not much bigger than Newfoundland dogs, attended by Cairo donkey boys. Very amusing are the animals, and more amusing are the boys, in their bare feet and native costume, cracking a stock lot of jokes in queer English and humming ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay with many a grimace and laugh. There is an old tradition about the solemnity of the Arabs, but you find no evidence of it here. The wily orientals have discovered that it does not pay to be solemn. Gaiety and frolic catch the popular fancy, and the dimes roll in the faster the more laughter there is along the street.

A great crowd of visitors is in the thoroughfare, which is as long as two or three city blocks. Every few moments you hear a clatter of feet on the brick pavement—there is no sidewalk in Cairo—and one of the little donkeys patters by, urged to speed by the whipping and shouting boy at his heels, and carrying on his back a child whose face is all smiles at the novelty of the excursion, or a grown man or woman whose feet all but drag along the surface of the street. How the little donkeys carry some of the riders who mount their backs is a mystery, but they do, and the journey finished they go to sleep standing on their four legs and wait with excessive patience for the coming of the next customer.

A little further along we come upon a scene which pleases us very much. Eight or ten great dromedaries lie upon the ground, with their trappings or saddles upon their backs. They are asleep, too. Around them is gathered an enormous crowd of visitors. They are not so much interested in the dromedaries as they are in the fun which is to follow. The fun comes quickly enough. A party of gay American girls, attended by their brothers or other escorts, arrive. The American girl at the fair is out for fun. She wants to see everything in sight. No timidity or false pride deters her from having a real good time. There are a few giggles, a whispered consultation, the passing of a few pieces of silver from brother's hand to the eager paw of the dromedary attendant, and the boldest girl in the party seats herself on the saddle of the recumbent animal. The crowd craves its neck in anticipation of sport.

Mr. Dromedary humps himself a little, shows the teeth in his frightfully ugly mouth, moves his long legs and elevates one end of himself in the air. It is a great elevation, and it is so suddenly attained that the young woman knows she is going to slide down over the animals neck. Frantically she grasps the straps which have been placed in her hand, and shrilly she shrieks. Through the crowd runs a loud guffaw. The fun has commenced. Then Mr. Dromedary elevates the other end of his being. This also comes up with the suddenness of a shock, and the young woman on his back this time feels sure she is going to roll over backwards. Again a frantic grasping of the straps, more feminine squeals, another round of laughter in the crowd. Now the hump-backed courier of the desert starts on his journey up the street. His saddle sways from side to side, shuffles with more motions than any other animal is capable of producing. Every lope of his long legs, every side-wise lurch of his awkward frame, and his rider giggles or squeals.

Up the middle of the narrow and crowded street go the camel and his fair rider. The crowd falls to either side. There is much shouting and laughter. A wave of merriment follows the party as it proceeds. By this time the young American woman has recovered her spirits and her confidence. She finds it not so very difficult a creature to ride, after all. The fun, she perceives, is all good-natured fun, and she likes it. If her feet are pretty and neatly shod she doesn't worry about them, and a peculiar thing it is that you rarely see a woman with awkard feet on the back of a dromedary. Now other young women, and young men, and occasionally older men and women, and no end of children, mount the backs of the camels and are sent weaving and lurching up the oriental thoroughfare. It is great sport for all concerned, and it brings many a good American dollar into the till of the wily Arabs who run the show.

Here is another crowd. It stands in a circle about a group of three or four Arabs. They make the strangest music you ever heard on the quaintest musical instruments you ever saw. When the noise ceases a monkey with a muzzle over his nose jumps down from the back of the donkey where he has been riding and seizes a stick with which he carries on a mimic but spirited warfare with one of the Arabs. This is all done to attract the people and to gain their attention, and the scheme succeeds. The crowd around is as thick as it can pack itself. Then Khalil Hada, the great Egyptian conjuror, steps forward. He has in one of his eyes a monocle which looks much like an egg. In a moment he causes this to disappear down his throat and then picks it off the top of the monkey's head. Or he thrusts it into one of his ears and picks it out the other. When the crowd murmurs in appreciation Khalil Hada ejaculates, with a broad grin on his intelligent face, "gallah, gallah." He performs some more clever tricks, and just as the throng is getting interested the conjuror announces that the performance will be continued in his tent a little way up the street. Then the orchestra strikes up, and the march toward the conjuror's tent is begun. Of course a large number of people follow this strange cavalcade, and give up their silver quarters for the privilege of seeing the great Khalil Hada perform his tricks. This is a sample of the manner in which these smart Arabs get out in the street and hustle for trade. They can give the Yankees points in this business.

Those who enter the tent of the conjuror do not regret it. He is a very skillful prestidigiteur. Without any elaborate accessories he sits down upon a dias only four or five feet from the heads of his nearest spectators and performs feats which are really marvelous. They are common enough feats in the orient, and most of our professional performers are able to do them, but the Egyptian has a style and a charm all his own. He, too, appreciates the value of good humor. He is always smiling and joking, never fails to mutter "gallah, gallah," when the crowd applauds, characterizes his own work as "very clever," makes no pretensions to be anything but a trickster, and is evidently happiest when he most successfully fools those who assist him in his work by holding the rings and the coins and the handkerchiefs.

The Arabs have here about a thousand devices for charming money out of the pockets of the crowd. Most of these are worthy devices, but a few are not. The so-called "Cairo by Moonlight," to which an admission fee of a quarter is charged, is a mere revolving stereopticon fake, most of the pictures being of Jerusalem rather than Cairo, and uninteresting. Another fake is the so-called "Temple of Luksor," 3,500 years old. The advertisements, and the glib-tongued young man who stands in front of the temple shouting to the passers-by, say one may see within the mummies of Pharoah, of Rameses II, oppressor of Israelites, of Sethi I, whose daughter found Moses, of Hirhor I, father-in-law of King Solomon and of Nessi-ta-neb-asser, Solomon's sister-in-law. But these mummies are mere reproductions. There is not a genuine mummy in the building. The so-called sacred dance of the ancient Egyptians is a flippant bit of mummery gone through with a good deal of laughter and awkwardness by a party of young Arabs who are evidently new at the business.

The Cairo theater is rather sensational. There is some talk of having the authorities stop the dancing which goes on in it. Five or six dancing girls from Egypt go through such strange contortions here, always before large audiences, with such reckless abandon and indecent exposure, that Americans deem the performance disgusting. Women, and good and proper women at that, do go to see this show, but they go unconscious of its character; and you may be sure they do not go a second time, or permit their daughters to see it after them. The street in Cairo is a charming addition to the international feature of the fair, but its dancing girls should be squelched and one or two of its fakes be closed up by the authorities.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. ☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermoter. Where one goes others follow, and we "take the Country." Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermoters in '91. Orders often waited 3 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make so many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of a horse at the cost of one cent, write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable chase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

OUR SECOND DAY AT THE BIG FAIR.

A Hasty Trip Through the Administration, Woman's and Horticultural Buildings—Matters of Personal Mention.

After tramping about the World's Fair grounds all day, one is very liable to be afflicted with "that tired feeling," which we hear so much about these days. But a good night's sleep, while inhaling the cool breezes wafted from Lake Michigan, clears the brain and invigorates the body preparatory for another day's tramp. The second day we took the elevated road to Jackson Park, and alighted within the grounds near the Transportation building. Proceeded at once to and took a hasty view of this architectural gem, as it has been justly termed, of all the Exposition buildings. It occupies the most commanding position on the Park, overlooking the Grand Basin on the East, Machinery Hall on the South, and the Electricity and Mining buildings on the North. It may be seen from any point within the Park enclosure, its beautiful gilded dome rising above all the colossal structures surrounding the Court of Honor. It is a peculiar model of architecture. A great central dome, 120 feet in diameter, rises from the ground to a height of 250 feet, unbroken by any floor or obstruction. Four pavilions, each 84 feet square, project from the four angles of the central dome. In the center of each facade is a recess 32 feet wide, through which are four grand entrances to the building. The four pavilions contain the official headquarters, telegraph and telephone offices, rooms for newspaper correspondents etc. The building is profusely ornamented with statuary and cost $435,000.

THE WOMAN'S BUILDING.

Although a modest structure in the White City, when compared with its more pretentious neighbors, it would be considered a mammoth building in any other location. It is 388 by 199 feet in size and cost $138 000. The central portion of the building has an open rotunda in the center, lighted by a skylight, which makes a wide gallery on the second floor. In the rear of this gallery is a row of large and commodious rooms, and at the North and South ends of the building are large assembly rooms and headquarters for officers. The ground floor is devoted wholly to American and foreign exhibits. The exhibits from Ceylon and Siam contain many curiosities of rare value. Spain, Norway, Japan, Cape Colony, Italy, Mexico, France are all represented. The French booth contains a large glass case of miniature wax figures, illustrating Paris fashions from the year 1400 to the present time. The Cincinnati Pottery Club gives a fine exhibit. New York gives a fine show of paintings. Among the noteworthy articles to be seen were buffalo skins tanned by squaws; shawl made by a woman 100 years old; several pieces of marble statuary by Vinnie Ream Hoxie; a crayon of Napoleon I. from life; several paintings by Queen Victoria; a large library of books, all written by women; Japanese curiosities made by women of the Court; the Keppel collection of engravings and etchings, from 1535 to 1835. The rooms on the second floor opening from the gallery are designated as the Kentucky, California and Cincinnati rooms on the East side. Upon the West side there are the Connecticut room, the Library and the British Nursing section. All of these are elegantly furnished and decorated. The North end pavilion contains a large assembly room and a model kitchen. The South pavilion has a smaller meeting room and an apartment for the sale of souvenir articles. An entire day could be devoted to the sights in this building to excellent advantage. The noon hour found us as hungry as a bear. Taking the elevator we soon reached the garden Cafe on the roof of the south pavilion, where we obtained a good square lunch at a very reasonable figure. The meals are served on the restaurant plan and cost about the same as a similar lunch down in the city.

THE HORTICULTURAL BUILDING.

Is only a few rods distant and this was next visited. If is one of the grandest and most imposing among all the general structures. It is fully completed, the exhibits are all in fine shape and it is a veritable feast to all lovers of the good, the true, and the beautiful. The building consists of a large central and two end pavilions connected by sections, with eight green-houses, each 24 by 100 feet. The area covered by the entire horticultural display is over five acres. It faces the lagoon and wooded island and the space between the lagoon and building is carpeted with a beautiful lawn and flower beds. Upon entering the central pavilion by the east door, one finds himself surrounded by huge tropical plants and standing beneath a crystal dome 187 feet in diameter and 113 feet high. In the center of the area beneath this central dome is a reproduction of the celebrated crystal cavern, which was discovered last year near Deadwood. The interior labyrinth of the cave is lighted with incandescent lamps and it seems like a journey of forty rods in length, all within a few square rods. This cavern is covered with mosses and other tropical vegetation. Its entrance is reached over a mass of large flat rocks, embedded in a flowing brook. A trip through this cave puts one in fine mental and physical condition to enjoy the balance of the horticultural display. Near the entrance to the cave was the celebrated Century plant, which kindly consented to bloom on the opening day of the Fair. In the same section were an Australian pine and sago palm, a climbing palm, an immense cactus collection, a model of the U. S. Capitol building in flowers from the Cape of Good Hope. The south curtain contained a remarkable collection of orchids, bromelias, hydrangeas, jasmines, ferns etc. In the south section was a grand array of fruits; apples and pears from Australia; oranges and lemons from Palermo, Italy; fruits of various kinds from San Diego; an orange tower 36 feet high from Los Angeles County; a Liberty bell of oranges from Los Angeles; imposing state collections of fruits from Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, New Jersey, New York and Wisconsin. The south pavilion contained an immense collection of wines from California, France, Spain and New South Wales. The north curtain contained an Egyptian paper plant, from which the papyrus of antiquity was made; a Japanese miniature garden; a cactus bed from Central America; Japanese plants and flowers in endless variety. The north section was devoted to fruits and vegetables from the Northwestern states and territories. Oregon, Washington, Idaho and New Mexico had brilliant displays. Here also were cocoanut and pineapple trees in full bearing and a magnificent exhibit from the State of Florida. The north pavilion was taken up chiefly with dried and preserved fruits and jellies, canned goods, garden seeds, tools and machinery from New South Wales. The firm of Peter Henderson and Co., of New York City, had an immense display of garden seeds. The above rehearsal gives the most salient features of the sights in this building, without any attempt to particularize. The afternoon was much too short to do justice to all the beauties therein. A professional gardener or an amateur grower of flowers and fruits could spend a week beneath its acreage of skylight and discover new beauties every day.

CHARGES FOR MEALS AND EXTRAS.

The reports of overcharging and extortion at Jackson Park are all moonshine. Water sterilized for drinking purposes is found in all parts of the grounds. Every building, including all the State buildings, is provided with free toilet rooms. In some of the larger buildings are toilet rooms where a charge is made, but even in these cases there are free rooms near by. If one wishes a glass of Waukesha water he can procure it for one cent. The Midway Plaisance is given up wholly to side-shows for which a fee is charged. In the Park proper there are only three exhibits requiring an extra fee: The Esquimaux village, the Cliff Dwellers and the elevator to the roof of the Main building. Most of the large buildings have elevators, all of which are free. In regard to meals and refreshments the charges are practically the same as down in the city. One can go to the Casino, order a full course served by a French waiter and topped off with a bottle of champagne, and relieve his wallet of a five dollar bill for one dinner. Or he can visit one of Wellington's lunch counters and get a wholesome lunch for twenty-five cents, which an ordinary newspaper man would regard as a good square meal.

A TRIP TO HARVEY.

Boarding an Illinois Central train about five o'clock p. m. we took a trip to North Harvey, twenty miles south, where G. P. Waring is located. This new town, which was the Academy addition to Harvey proper, is now incorporated by itself and has a depot, post-office and telegraph office. Here the World's Fair Temperance Hotel is located. The original building was three stories high, surrounded an entire block and contained 700 rooms. It was destroyed by fire January 9th. With their insurance of $45,000 and other help they have rebuilt, but this time in detached sections covering about one half the block. In these and private houses the Hotel company now control about 300 rooms. They had nearly 400 guests on their books the last week in May and their rooms are all taken through June. After the first of July there will be a chance for new enrollments. Lodging is $1.00 per day and meals are served on the European plan. The dining room, which can accommodate 1,000 guests, is in charge of Mrs. L. A. Russell, of coffee house fame in W. C. T. U. circles. A ten-ride ticket to Jackson Park can be bought for $1.30. The Illinois Chautauqua Assembly is now permanently located at North Harvey. The season's program began May 28th and will continue through June, July and August. There is quite a Ridgeway colony located here. We enjoyed the hospitality of G. P. Waring's family during our visit. He has a beautiful residence on Calumet avenue, about three blocks from the hotel. Byron Begel and wife are living with Mr. Waring, Byron filling the place of clerk for the Improvement Co. Richard Cadmus is also living with Guernsey Waring and Loree Eaton belongs to the same circle. Fred Pocklington, Wallace Cadmus and C. E. Skinner, with their families, are residents of North Harvey. The next morning, before leaving for the city, we rode over to Harvey with Charley Skinner and found P. C. Temple, who has a good job with the Craver & Steele Mfg. Co. His old Tecumseh friends will be glad to learn that he is prospering.

Deering to the Front

TO THE FARMERS OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

For the season of 1893 I wish to bring to your notice the great advantage you can derive during your harvest of hay and grain by the use of the latest improved and best harvesting machine in the world—made by Wm. Deering, of Chicago.

Here are a few reasons why you should buy a Deering:

1st—It has a jointed platform which when folded will allow the machine to pass through the same space as an ordinary buggy.

2nd—In ease of handling and lightness of draft it stands at the head.

3d—It never fails to tie, never chokes nor clogs, and uses less twine than other competing machines.

4th—It needs no expert to understand its construction. It requires no bothersome tinkering.

5th—All geared running journals are mounted in brass boxes, insuring easy running and long wearing qualities.

6th—The levers are so easily adjusted that any boy can run the machine who can drive a team.

7th—No weight on the horse's necks, as the machine is rear geared.

8th—Best material only is used in the construction of the Deering which is guaranteed by one of the oldest and best known firms existing.

Furthermore this company make their own twine and are not in the combine. Much more may be learned by calling at my warehouse and looking at the machines always on hand. Can prove their merits.

Yours truly,

C. L. Albaugh.

They persisted in counting the scores run in during their last bats which would have left the "Kids" one bat short. The battery for the "Kids" was Tom Owens and Ray Burlingame, against Eastlick and Swis for the Lake Ridge. The Baptist church observed children's day last Sunday. A fine concert was given in the evening to a crowded house. The program was made up of vocal choruses by the school, recitations, select readings, etc. It was all excellent, but the infant class and the solo by Roy DeWolf deserve especial mention.

Editor Smith, of the Adrian Press, has had his boots blacked. He dropped into a barber shop just at the moment that Lt. Salsbury offered to pay Henry Bowen five cents each to "shine up" the crowd. Bowen gobbled the bait at once, and thus it happened that Bro. Smith obtained a splendid shine without depleting his own exchequer to the amount of a farthing. Philander seems to have been born under a lucky star.

MANY LIVES LOST.

Sudden Collapse of Ford's Theater at Washington.

Its Inmates Buried in the Debris—They Were Mostly Government Employes —Twenty-Two Dead Bodies Recovered—A Great Many Hurt.

AN OLD RUIN FALLS.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—A rotten United States government building has collapsed. In its ruins more than a score of human souls were launched into eternity and a hundred living victims are now writhing in the agony of their wounds. Shortly before 10 o'clock Friday morning, with scarcely a second's warning, a large portion of the three floors of the old Ford theater on Tenth street broke down, carrying to the ground below hundreds of clerks, heavy desks and the miscellany of a great government office. The old building was used by the pension and record division of the war department. Repairs undertaken recently had weakened the supports, but to the penuriousness of congress, which made it impossible to secure a fitting building, may be charged the awful catastrophe that must cast a blot of shame upon the national government.

FORD'S THEATER.

LIST OF THE VICTIMS.

The following list of the dead thus far reported, with the names of the state from which they were appointed, contains twenty-two names, including one unknown:

Unknown man, taken from the ruins at 5 o'clock Friday evening, evidently a clerk; George Allen Pennsylvania; George W. Arnold, Virginia; L. J. E. Chapin, South Chicago; Samuel P. Banes, Pennsylvania; John Bossius, District of Columbia; Arthur L. Dietrich, Kentucky; Jeremiah Daley, Pennsylvania; James R. Fagan, Kansas; Joseph B. Gage, Michigan; David C. Jordon, Missouri; M. M. Jarvis, Michigan; J. Boyd Jones, Wisconsin; F. B. Loftus, New York; F. W. Mackey, B. F. Miller, New York; Howard S. Miller, Ohio; J. H. McFall, Wisconsin; E. G. Stahl, Kansas; William Schriever, Maryland; H. S. Wood; F. M. Williams, Wisconsin; A. M. Gerault, New Jersey; M. T. Muledy, Louisiana.

The injured, so far as known, number forty-five. Many of them are being treated at their homes. Some will undoubtedly die of their injuries.

WITHOUT WARNING.

The building collapsed without a moment's warning. The front half of all three floors fell, carrying everything to the bottom. For a moment all was still. Then the air was split by the shrieks and groans of the frightened, wounded and dying hundreds who, like a mass of worms, struggled, twisted and fought to free themselves from one another and from the heavy iron beams and timbers and furniture and government records which pinned them to their places. The people in the neighborhood were for the moment stunned. The horror of it all had robbed them of their senses. Then in a few moments, but what to the wretches pinioned in death's embrace seemed ages, the truth burst upon their befuddled brains and they joined their cries with the unfortunates within the collapsed building. Then, dividing, some rushed for help; some ran to the sink-hole of death itself to lend their hands, while others, with selfish regard for their own safety and curiosity, stood where they were to look upon the scene.

CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT.

An investigation of the cause of the accident discovered that it was apparently due to criminal carelessness. A number of laborers were at work beneath the first floor excavating for an electric plant. The building rested on underpinning and the earth, and as the earth was dug away the pressure of the building rested on the unsupported beams of the first floor. The weight proved too much and the floors collapsed and fell into the excavation burying the laborers and clerks beneath them. The people in charge of this excavation were supposed to have known that the building was condemned and had been unsafe for years. The general insecurity of the building had already been repeatedly reported, and for a long time past, whenever a heavily loaded wagon has gone by, the building seemed to sway backward and forward, as the clerks describe the sensation. A strange coincidence is that the old theater is wrecked on the day of the funeral of Edwin Booth, brother of John Wilkes Booth.

CONDEMN THE GOVERNMENT.

Condemnation of the government for permitting the building to be used is heard on every hand. The federal government has an account on its hands of immense proportions. There is little doubt that friends of the dead and the victims who were fortunate enough to escape with their lives will seek damages from the government which may aggregate millions of dollars. In the dangerous condition of the building they will have strong popular support of their claims. Strong words of denunciation were uttered against the federal authorities for permitting the building to be occupied in view of its unsafe condition.

WAR RECORDS LOST.

Least thought of now, when death and suffering fill the national capital, but certain to bring sorrow in the future, is the destruction of war records on which the claims of thousands of veterans in all parts of the land depend.

VISTAS AT THE FAIR.

Wonderful Views Which Entrance the Senses.

PANORAMA OF WHITE AND GREEN.

Beautiful Sights Which May Be Seen from Various Points of Vantage at the Great World's Columbian Exposition — View from the Colonnade Looking North—A Fascinating Show.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 9. — [Special.] — One of the charming features of the exposition is the large number of vistas which it contains—spots from which one may look forth and behold views which entrance the senses and delight the eye. Wherever one goes about the 700 acres of the fair grounds such scenes are constantly unfolding themselves. Many times in a day the visitor is tempted to pause and drink in the beauty of some spectacle which had hitherto escaped his observation. This is one of the tests of architectural and landscape art. No designer could be expected to plan vistas as a primary idea. That would be mere scene-painting and unworthy the higher art. But in such a combination as this exposition, where all effort is on such a large scale and there is such dependency of one feature upon another for excellence of effect, a work that did not present charming vistas would lack complete success. They are inevitable incidents where there is true beauty in the massing.

The wealth of such views presented here is but another proof of the commanding genius which designed this work. Perhaps it may seem to you, dear reader, that it is rather late in the day for me to enlarge upon the outdoor glories of the fair. The architectural and landscape features were the first things here to be described in the public press and in the illustrated magazines and weeklies. But let me tell you that until this month of June, this month of freshness and flowers, no one had ever seen the Columbian exposition at its best. For the first time in its career it is full-blown and ripe.

Now it has not only the beauty which verdure and sunshine alone can give it, but the additional charm of masses of people constantly moving to and fro on both land and water. It is now an animate landscape. The figures are in the picture, and, grand and impressive as it was before the people came, there is contagion in the presence of a host of admirers, infection in the enthusiasm of the multitude. It is no wonder to me that half the friends I meet here tell me they put in their first two or three days outside the buildings, roaming through the park, riding over the placid waters of the lagoon, realizing, or at least endeavoring to do so, the unprecedented grandeur of the whole.

"The greatest thing in the fair is the buildings which contain it," is an expression which I have so often heard during the past six weeks that it has become trite. That is the way in which people are impressed. The majority of them are discouraged the first time they enter one of the palaces for a look at some of the exhibits. This disappointment is not in the interior show considered as a whole, but in its magnitude and in the oppressive realization which overcomes one at this moment that he can never hope to see it all. There is so much of it—it is spread over such a vast area—one can never go through it section by section, aisle by aisle, exhibit by exhibit, article by article. The utter hopelessness of this task repels at first. So it is that nine visitors out of ten remain but a short time in the building which they may first have entered. They come back into the open, the sunlight and the fragrance, and feast their eyes upon the ensemble. Here is something which they are able to see, and see quickly, for it is a panorama of white and green spread before their eyes.

Fascinating as the outward show is at a single glance, one must travel about for many a day before the full glory of the picture is impressed upon him. Indeed, the beauty of the scene, like the magnitude of the buildings, is something which "grows upon" every visitor. This is to say, day after day your admiration and your enthusiasm increase through familiarity instead of diminishing. The first thing you know you are in love with this spectacle, and like the true lover you see new lines of beauty in your sweetheart every time you meet her. Suppose some fine, fresh morning you get a glimpse of her head through a blooming rose bush in the garden. You may have seen the head a thousand times before, but this vista seems to endow the white brow, or the golden hair, or the profile with a charm which you had never before discerned.

You will never thoroughly appreciate the exposition scene until you have had some such glimpses of it, till you have feasted your eye upon its vistas. Stand at the Colonnade, for instance, for a moment. That is at the southern end of the grand canal. The Colonnade is of itself a beautiful structure. It is purely classical, and looks as if it might have been transplanted from Athens or Venice. Sometimes it is called "The Screen." Do you know why? Well, the scene to the north is Venetian, in its architecture, its statuary and in the movement of the gondolas over the surface of the canal. To the south are the live stock sheds and the exercising amphitheater. It would not do to mix the Venetian scene and the horse barns, because there are no horses in Venice. Hence the "Screen."

Stand at the Colonnade and look to the north. The vista is unapproachable. It follows a line of water, broken in half a dozen places by bridges which curve over the channel with the true line of beauty. Underneath them the boats and gondola are flitting, and over them streams of happy people are constantly passing. Farther along are the green trees and the flowers of the wooded island. In the extreme distance is the great hight of the Illinois building and the more beautiful dome of the Art palace. The foreground of this picture is misty, for there the fountains spray the air. Around the corner of vast Machinery hall come the swelling strains of music. The sight-line from this spot is encased by walls of ivory, four of the greatest and noblest buildings in the world—Machinery, Agriculture, Electricity, and Manufactures—ranging themselves either side the view.

There are many such vistas here, and one never tires of them. Another is that to be seen looking south from the rustic bridge which crosses the lagoon at the northern end of Horticultural hall. At the right is a long stretch of water leading down to the richly-tinted Transportation building, the only exposition structure which is not ivory white. At first glance visitors do not like the coloring of this building. It seems gairish and inconsistent with the surroundings. But like anything else here it worms itself into your affections. In a day or two your prejudice against it is overcome. A day or two more and you are enthusiastic over it, for it adds a bit of warmth and color to the scene which only emphasizes the whiteness and the purity of the neighboring structures.

But this is not the vista to be seen from the bridge to which I desired to call your attention. Under your feet is one of the gondola stations, and a number of the craft are at rest there, the gondoliers basking in the sun and smoking pipes or cigarettes in the most unromantic of postures. Just beyond lies the leafy expanse of Wooded island—the wooded island which impresses me as much as anything else in the exposition with the genius of man and the power of money. Only a year or so ago I saw this island when it was nothing but a mass of black mud thrown up by the big steam dredges. There were no trees upon it, no verdure or flowers. No one seeing it then could have forseen what it is now, no matter how much he strained his imagination. Now it is a little paradise. You smell the fragrance of the flowers, and watch the water fowl and birds at their sports. Through the branches you dimly perceive the logs of the hunter's cabin, and over them your eye beholds the glorious dome of the Administration building. Your view of it is framed by the splendid facades of Electricity and Mines. It is a scene which thousands of visitors pause on the rustic bridge to behold.

Go down to the peristyle and stand where two of the great columns of that magnificent structure will frame you a picture looking to the west. The Golden Republic has her back to you, and you will note the perfection of her massive drapery. Though of stupendous size, she has all the grace of one of the marble Madonnas in the Palace of Fine Arts. She is looking in the same direction you are—at the Administration building, which is a thing of beauty, a creation that completely satisfies and rests the eye and the soul from whatever point it may be viewed. Your picture comprehends but a part of the basin, with its moving spectacle, and perhaps but a glimpse of the plaza at the right or left, along which thousands of people are sitting or walking, with the colossal horses or bulls at the water's edge to enable your eye in part at least to realize the vastness of the scene.

There is a vista which not many people note, though it is sublime. Go to the Indian school in the southern end of the grounds. Stand on the piazza there, and look to the north. The sight-line carries you past variety and magnificence into a perfect bower of architecture and landscape charms in the far background. At the left the eastern end of Agriculture, surely one of the most beautiful buildings man ever made. At the right a glimpse from the middle ages, the ancient Convent of LaRabida. Near it the classical Casino. Between the two, and a little farther, the Golden Republic with craft circling about her feet. Then a long stretch of grandeur, the lake front of the giant structure, vast in expanse and altitude, but symmetrical as a babe. In the distance the vision is lost amid a bank of domes, towers, minarets, and trees—the circular annex of Fisheries, the varied elevations of the foreign buildings, and, finally, bits of the Art palace and the many state buildings which lie beyond.

You will see these and hundreds more entrancing vistas when you come to the fair. And having seen them and delighted your senses with them, you will not only pardon the enthusiasm of one who has been here a long time only to have his admiration constantly increased, but will thank him for directing your attention to these perspectives of perfection.

ROBERT GRAVES.

Of Interest to Women.

The exhibits of Spain and Belgium in the Woman's building are very fine, the Spanish being the more elaborate and attracting the most attention from its location in the center of the south pavilion, from the exceeding beauty of the cream and gold booth and the varied nature of the exhibits. There are some magnificent gold embroideries, and fine laces in every design and for every use. There are tiny manikins in native costume, and carved woodwork in rich and rare devices, one beautiful vine-covered cross being perhaps the finest. Not only has old Spain sent of her costliest and best to lay as tribute at Columbia's feet, but new Spain has joined her, many beautiful specimens of needlework done in Havana being in the collection. Belgium's exhibit consists principally of paintings and the rare laces for which Brussels has always been noted and which are priceless.

Twelve young men of Bordentown, N. J., are going to the exposition in a freight car fitted up with sleeping bunks, a cooking range, and a well-stocked commissary department. The car will be attached to a freight train.

A WOMAN SCORNED.

It Results in the Murder of Her Recreant Lover.

Dora Velzy, at Grand Rapids, Learning of William Gray's Intention to Desert Her, Kills Him and Commits Suicide.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 9.—A slender pretty country girl was found lying dead on the floor of a Crescent avenue room Wednesday, with an ugly bullet-hole in her right temple. On a bed in same room was stretched the body of a man also dead and with a duplicate bullet-hole through the right temple. The man was William G. Gray, well-known and popular about the town and for the last two years bookkeeper for P. H. O'Brien, an undertaker of the city. The name of the girl was Dora A. Velzy and her home was near Allendale, Ottawa county. Both had evidently died instantly, and from bullets from a revolver which was found near the body of the woman. Five chambers of this were empty and one loaded.

Gray had evidently been asleep when shot, as he lay on his right side in a natural position. He had removed his clothing and hung it on a hook near the bed. The young woman was only partly dressed. It is believed that the double tragedy occurred Monday night. The slightly decomposed condition of the bodies confirms this theory. The double crime occurred in Gray's room, which he had occupied for several years, a little hall bedroom not more than 8x9 feet in size. The evidence presented at the inquest tends to show almost conclusively that the girl shot her companion as he slept and then turned the pistol upon herself.

Dora was a domestic in a prominent family, had very respectable parents in Allendale and was exceptionally good looking. She and O'Brien had been intimate for some time, but his affections began to wane and he was paying attentions to another girl. He intended leaving this week for Chicago to break off the attachment, but before going wrote a note to Dora expressing a desire to see her on Sunday. This was the last seen of either of them. It is supposed she went to his room that night. He probably told her of his plans to leave town and refused to take her along and hold out encouragement for the future. The shooting was not heard by other occupants of the block and the tragedy enacted Sunday night was not discovered until Wednesday afternoon, when the continued absence of Gray led to the finding of his room door locked on the inside and then the door was forced.

The inquest began Thursday morning. Annie M. Hethington testified that she was engaged to Gray and that on Tuesday night she visited the room where the bodies were discovered the next day, but did not discover that its occupants were dead—though her testimony shows that both bodies then lay in the same positions in which the coroner found them. She was closely cross-examined, but told her story in a straightforward way, which bore all the marks of truth. She had her gloves on when she touched Gray's face and did not realize that he was dead. The following letter was found in Dora's purse, in her handwriting, and was produced:

The reason I must do this naughty, cowardly thing is because I cannot or will not stand it to be played the way I have been. He thinks it is smart to tell people that I am tough, but he never thinks to tell them that he is the cause of every bit of it. If he had never meddled with me I would have been a nice, happy girl. Now the people who used to be my friends will not even look at me when they meet me. He does not tell people about stealing my wages every chance he got. I think a fellow that will rob a hired girl of every cent she had ought to be killed. He used to steal my money when he possibly could and then deny it. He is too nice to kill, but I do not care to live and be talked about by people who think they are better than I. I am just as decent as some of the married women who talk about me. My whole life has been one of trouble and hard work, and I might just as well die now as ever. Wishing everybody much happiness and good luck.

D. A. VELZY.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 10.—The inquest into the death of William Gray and Dora Velzy closed Friday and the verdict was that she killed him and then herself "while laboring under great mental excitement and passion."

Robbed a Grave.

BATTLE CREEK, June 10.—The remains of Thomas Cuff, which were recently interred in the Catholic cemetery, have been molested, and, it is thought, stolen and sent to some surgical institution.

The Wolf Creek butter factory experienced a setback Sunday by the breaking of the separator, making it necessary for the patrons to keep their milk at home for two or three days, much to the chagrin of the housewives, who have been enjoying a holiday since getting rid of the milk. "Were you pleased to get the milk in the house again?" we asked one lady. "Pleased?" she repeated: "about as well pleased as I would be to see a hack load of city acquaintances come uninvited to stay a week in harvest time, when I had a dozen hungry men to cook for, strawberries and cherries to can, and the hired girl gone home with a felon on her hand." Words could express no more.

The North American for June.

In the van of the strong and attractive table of contents of the June number of The North American Review is an an able and timely article entitled The Lesson of the Naval Review, by the Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, Secretary of the Navy, whose position gives him the right to speak authoritatively. He contends that if the United States would keep her own peace with all nations and maintain her place in the vanguard of civilization, she must at all times be prepared for war. The question, Who are the Greatest Wealth-Producers? is answered by W. H. Mallock, the well-known author of Is Life Worth Living, and other Works. How to Check Testamentary Litigation is an important topic, which is dealt with in interesting and instructive manner by the Surrogate of New York County, Hon. Rastus S. Ransom, who of all men is naturally most competent to write on the subject. The possibility of increased speed in transatlantic steamships is discussed by Professor Biles, of Glasgow University, who designed the Paris and the New York, under the title of Thirty Knots an Hour to Europe. This article will be read with special interest at the present time in view of the recent record-breaking trip of the Campania. The Rev. Dr. Rainsford answers inquiries and criticisms regarding his plan for dealing with the saloon question, which he explained in his article on Possible Reformation of the Drink Traffic in the May number of The Review. Congressman Bourke Cockran furnishes a trenchant and vigorous article entitled The Financial Outlook. The Notes and Comments include four very readable papers: Christ as an Orator, A Farmer's View of Free Coinage, The Art of Living Two Hundred Years, and Inebriety from a Medical Standpoint.

TO HORSEMEN AND BREEDERS.

Nutpatch, Standard, Rule 6, Reg. Vol. VII. Bay Stallion, 16 hands; foaled 1884. Bred by Glendale Farm, Louisville, Ky. Nutpatch is large, handsome and very fast; can trot in 2:25 without much work. He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30, or better, 24 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. He had 19 sons and 18 daughters that had produced trotters in 1892. 31 of his sons and 25 of his daughters produced last year, while he got with records from 2:30 to 2:15 1-4. This is the best showing ever made by any sire, living or dead, to date. His sons and daughters produce early and extreme speed. His daughter, Manette is dam of Arion, 2-year old record 2:10 3-4, as a 3-year old 2:10 1-2; the fastest colt ever foaled, and sold for $125,000 cash. He made the season of 1892 for $2,500. Only one Stallion in the world produced at 4 years old a yearling colt that got a record below 2:30, and that is Woodline by Nutwood.

Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. Miss Russell is dam of Nutwood 2:18 3-4, Maud S. 2:08 3-4, Rustique 2:21, Cora Belmont 2:24 1-2, Russia 2:28, and six sons that have produced extreme speed, also 4 daughters that produced speed. Lord Russell out of Nutwood's dam got Kremlin, 2:07 3-4, the acknowledged race horse stallion of the world.

Nutpatch's first dam, Patchen Maid, is the dam of Astral, 2:18, and Marshal Kleber, sire of Mistake 2:29 3-4, etc.; she by Mambrino Patchen 58, brother to Lady Thorn 2:18¼, and sire of London, 2:20 1-2 and 28 others. Dams of Crawford (p) 2:09 3-4, Riley Medium (p) 2:10 1-2, Constantine 2:12 1-2, and 80 other standard performers; also grandsire of Nightengale 2:10 1-2, Walter E., 2:11 3-4, etc.; second dam Lady Eleanor, by Mambrino Chief 11, sire of Lady Thorn 2:18 1-4, 5 others, and dams of Director 2:17, Piedmont 2:17 1-4, Iona 2:17 1-2, and 21 other standard performers. Also sire of dams of 62 speed producing sires, including Red Wilkes, Almont, Belmont, etc.

Terms—The terms have been placed at the very low figure of $25.00 for the season.

A Literary Sensation.

Uncle Tom's Cabin has certainly broke loose. The copyright on this most famous of American novels, by Mrs. Stowe, has recently expired, which frees its publication from the monopoly of the high-priced publishers, and though in anticipation of this fact they have within a few months greatly reduced its price, now that it is really unchained the consequences are something surprising. John B. Alden, Publisher, of New York, issues several editions, selling them only direct (not through agents or book sellers); one in good type, paper covers, for 5 cents, sent post-paid, or the same bound in cloth for 10 cents, with postage 7 cents extra; also an excellent large-type edition, on fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth, for 25 cents, postage 10 cents. Surely a copy of Uncle Tom's Cabin will soon be found in every home where it is not already. Mr. Alden sends a 32-page pamphlet describing many of his publications free, or a catalogue of 128 pages of choice books, a veritable literary gold mine for book-lovers, for 2 cents. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

TWO DAYS ONLY

CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATIONS FREE.

If you are interested in the condition of your eyes, call on the noted Dr. Galleher. He is an expert in his profession. Eyesight is precious—more valuable than any other of the special senses. The Doctor has treated in the last 12 months more than 3,500 cases of all forms of eye trouble and errors of refractions, such as Glaucoma, Ulceration of the Cornea, Granulation of the Iris, Presbyopia, Paralysis of Accomodation, Spasm of Accomodation, Hypermetropia, Aphakia, Myopia, Astigmatism, Anisometropia, Strabismus, Diplopia, Asthenopia, etc. Have you ever stopped to think how many people in this world are blind from their own negligence and carelessness in not giving their eyes attention at the proper time? You now have the opportunity of consulting one who gives all his time in treating cronic eye trouble. Thousands of persons in this world that do not use glasses that should, then again there are thousands of persons using glasses they think suited to their eyes, but the truth of the matter is, the glasses do not correct the trouble, but aggravate it and produce headache, spots before the eyes, inflamation, granulation, winking, trembling spells, various nerve and brain affections, catracts, burning and smarting of the eyes, etc.; entailing not only positive injury to the sight, but untold misery and blindness. Dr. Galleher makes examinations that few in this country can make. He has instruments with which he can examine every muscle and fibre in the inside of the eye. He can tell you in an instant after examining your eyes whether he can benefit you or not, and will truthfully say so. It should be understood that Dr. Galleher is well known throughout the Eastern States as a practical and successful electrionist. He invented some of the finest electrical appliances ever imported to this country. Remember that Dr Galleher does not give one drop of medicine. He is the only man in America who has the exclusive sale of Dr. Edgar Scott's Positive Catarrh Cure. An instrument put up of compressed and medicated gasses, which is Dr. S's. own invention. Dr. Galleher also has appliances which will remove a tape worm in from two to four hours or no charges made. Testimonals of the best people in this country at his room at the hotel. Call early and secure convenient hours for free consultation and examination.

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER,

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground." We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crop, and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peaceful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

Our neighborhood contains at least one intelligent canine brute. One day last week the bees at Stephen Palmer's took it into their heads to swarm and as the folks were not as watchful as they might have been the dog thought it his duty to induce them to light, so he followed them about 80 rods north, barking loudly, till he came in contact with a picket fence. This was a barrier insurmountable, but the clever beast rounded the end of the fence. But when he came to the starting point all trace and scent of the bees had disappeared and Mr. Rover went home disappointed with his luck, but congratulating himself that he had at least done his duty so far as he was able.

Little Gladys Thielan caused quite a panic among the mothers and fathers of families about here last Friday by breaking out with what was at first called scarlet fever, but the next day the doctor decided it was not the dreaded disease and baby Gladys was released from quarantine.

"I guess the boys is ticklin' them girls, is what makes 'em act so," sententiously remarked a little urchin, who, dinner pail in hand, stood digging his toes into the dirt and watching a picnic party driving past one lovely morning last week. Now, no one loves better than your scribe to hear the merry laugh and chatter of youth, but when young ladies (?) shout loud enough for a fire-alarm,—"Say, what makes your face bulge so?" "Lend me yer cud," "hello, Spikey!" "get off my corns!" or, "ah there, old lady! see anything green?" (this last witticism addressed to an elderly woman getting some lettuce in the garden), we are of the opinion that a missionary is needed in the place from which that party hailed. The practice of allowing young girls of fifteen or sixteen to go off 15 or 20 miles to spend the day (and a large part of the night) fishing, boating and tramping about the woods and lakes with only their escorts, young men as giddy and thoughtless as themselves, unaccompanied by parent or chaperone of any sort, is a custom that no well-bred family would countenance for a moment, and many regard it as the fruitful source of the awful social tragedies (or many of them at least) that are shocking the world almost daily.

NOTES FROM THE BIG FAIR.

JACKSON PARK, CHICAGO. June 13, 1893.

[illegible] grounds by the "L" road one comes first to the department of transportation exhibits.

The Transportation building, with its annex, covers over fourteen acres of ground. It can boast of less architectural beauty than any of the other buildings, but what it lacks in this direction designer-in-chief Millet has in a measure overcome by the free use of color. Everyone admires the "Golden Gate," the grand entrance on the East side.

However, if there is any lack in outward appearance the visitor will find it fully made up for in the wonderfully interesting display inside. Everything pertaining to transportation—locomotives, baby cabs, palace cars, bicycles, steamships, dug-outs, etc.—are here, and yet a man came through the building one day not long ago, and just as he was about to pass out asked of the guard at the door: "What do you call this building?" When informed he said, "Well, you ain't got much to see in here." Others will inquire at the door about what is in the building and then say, "Oh, that won't interest me!" There are many such people and their presence here gave rise to the remarks in my previous letter in regard to the fair as an educator.

The Germans have a large and interesting display in the South end of the building on the main floor and in the gallery. They make a specialty of the exhibit of railroad engineering and show plans of railways, yards and stations. They also have an extensive exhibit of steel for railroad use, and of switch and signal systems. There are some German railway coaches and although they are elegantly finished they look odd and old-fashioned viewed in comparison with the palace cars of our own country. The Canadian Pacific train is, in my opinion, far ahead of any from Europe. England, France and Germany have railway coaches on exhibition. They show fine workmanship and are perhaps models of comfort and convenience in those countries, but they do not come in competition with the Pullman and Wagner palaces. The Pennsylvania road has a building of its own and has on exhibition the first locomotive run in the United States. The "John Bull" engine and train was used on the Camden and Amboy railway in 1831. The New York Central also has a building and exhibit outside of the Transportation building, and standing side by side are the two trains, one, the "Dewitt Clinton" engine and train used in 1831, the other the latest production of 1893. The giant "999" engine is said to be capable of making 100 miles or more per hour and the cars are luxurious palaces, on wheels. The Baltimore and Ohio has a very instructive exhibit showing the evolution of railroading. Each change and improvement from the beginning of steam travel is shown and their large space is rendered very attractive by views of the many picturesque places along their line. One might easily fill a large volume with descriptions of the various exhibits. Time and space are limited, however.

Wheelmen will find everything in their line in the gallery at the North end. French, English and American wheels in every style, with the latest improvements, are shown. There is a pleasure wagon from Turkey, a Russian sleigh, a Mexican ox-cart, and many interesting old relics.

Last Thursday was Spanish day at the Fair. The flag of Spain floated proudly from places of honor and many people attending the fair were decorated with Spanish colors. Bands played Spanish music and thousands of eager people crowded and jostled each other to get a glimpse of the Spanish princess. The cadets from Orchard Lake took a prominent part in the day's program. They headed the royal procession through the grounds and, on request of Her Royal Highness, went through their drill for her east of the Administration building. They give dress parade every day on the grounds and hold their graduating exercises in Festival Hall. Michigan may well be proud of her boy soldiers.

Among the many names of Michigan people at the Fair the following are some of the latest arrivals registered at the Michigan State building: Mrs. F. C. Rector, Miss Ida B. Rector and Miss Grace E. Gillespie, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. Van Tuyle of Clinton, Mrs. W. J. Kies and I. C. Wolcott, of Tecumseh. I expect to see quite a number of Lenawee people next week and I hope for them a continuance of the present beautiful weather.

THE BABY IN A SLING.

How One Man Managed It at the World's Fair.

SOME GOOD ADVICE TO VISITORS.

Take It Easy, Don't Try to Do Too Much, Wear Simple Clothing and Heavy-soled Shoes, Leave Small Children at Home but Take All the Larger Ones—The Ohio Idea.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 16.—[Special.]—Some of the people who come to the fair have queer devices for securing the comfort of themselves and children. The quaintest thing in this line that has fallen under my notice was the method a man employed for carrying a baby about the grounds with him. He had made a sort of sling or cradle out of a piece of leather and a couple of shawl straps, the sling being nicely cushioned. When he put this contrivance about his shoulders he was able to nestle baby in it, the little one reclining on his breast and leaving his two arms and hands free to assist the remaining members of his family as they went on their rounds. It was easy for the man and easy for the baby. The precious mite was asleep when I saw it, and looked cool and comfortable, which it could not have been if carried in the arms. Many people stopped to look at this novel method of carrying a baby, and the man was much admired both for his ingenuity and his courage. Not every husband and father would have the nerve to put such a plan into execution, even if he thought of such a thing. As a rule men are too proud to undertake innovations, especially where a baby is concerned. This father, however, seemed to be proud of his achievement, and I heard more than one woman praise him and say he was a husband worth having.

The people who visit the fair do get so tired. It appears to me I hear more talk of fatigue than of anything else. This is particularly true among the women visitors. They walk and walk—often five times farther than they otherwise would in the same time before—and what with the crowding and pushing, the craning necks and straining of eyes, are utterly worn out before they know it. Now, the weather is pretty warm, and it is still to be too careful. It does not pay to overwork one's self even in the cause of sightseeing. I myself [illegible] with him [illegible] sights to make sure [illegible] to intimidate. A great many people [illegible] visitors from a long distance, take their lunches out there with them, and seeking some shady grove, make a picnic party in the middle of the day. Some visitors even have their meals to take their lunch baskets into one or other of the restaurants, and spread their contents upon the tables. I would not advise imitation of this plan. At the German village and in some of the other places where food is sold notices are posted that lunch-baskets must not be opened on the premises. If you were running a restaurant here you would not want people to come in and spread their home-made luncheons on your tables, would you?

Today in the Moorish restaurant I saw three women and two children gathered about a table on which they had dumped the contents of their large basket. No one said a word to them, and they were permitted to eat in peace. But when they called a waiter and ordered one glass of milk and one cup of coffee he looked as dead as if he could not understand what they wanted. They called another and he failed to respond. They tried five or six waiters in succession, and could not get even a glass of water. I did not blame the waiters very much, though I would love the women were famous.

The best advice I can give people who intend visiting the fair is to make things easy and don't try to do too much. You can never see all there is to see, anyway, and there is no use of struggling so hard to do so as to wear yourself out. Pause often to rest, and hire a wheel chair now and then. Or take a ride on one of the electric launches or the elevated electric railway. Either is cooling and refreshing. It pays to spend another dollar for these comforts, and for proper and wholesome food, to keep yourself in good form, for if one is feeling tired out one cannot enjoy the things which he may have come a long distance to see.

A mistake which many visitors make is that of walking to or to the fair. Perhaps they live in a hotel or lodging house a mile or a mile and a half from the gates. If they do not chance to get in a crowd of street cars they walk the distance in the morning, only to arrive at the fair pretty well fatigued at the very outset of the day of their day's work. This is bad policy. Comfortable covered carriages are constantly plying to and fro between the hotels within a radius of a couple of miles of the fair gates, and the charge is only a quarter for the long distances, in some cases but 15 cents for the shorter rides. Money spent in this way is money well spent, for it brings you to the fair fresh and cool.

Do not bring your best clothes to the fair. Dress neatly and as comfortably as possible. This is no place for fine feathers. The richest people of Chicago visit the fair attired very simply, and it is only the foolish who try to show here the finest things in their wardrobe. Above all, do not wear thin-soled shoes. This warning, if heeded, may save many a woman the torments of sore feet. Wherever one goes in the grounds or the World's fair district you may see men and women, particularly women, limping about as if they were cripples. Many of the walks in the fair grounds are graveled, and while easy enough to walk upon for those whose feet are properly shod are sure to bring anguish to the soles of those who insist upon seeing the fair in thin shoes.

Visitors will do well to make the building of their state their headquarters during their stay on the grounds. Nearly all the states have handsome buildings here, fitted up with all sorts of conveniences. At these buildings you are sure to meet friends from your town or neighborhood, and many pleasant reunions take place on the broad and shady piazzas of these commonwealth club houses. The Ohio building has set an example which it would be well for all the other state buildings managers to follow.

At the Buckeye headquarters a book of registry is kept, as at all the state buildings. But the Ohioans go further. They have two or three quick-witted and nimble-fingered young ladies at the desk, and whenever a visitor from Ohio registers they fill out a pink slip which shows the new comer's name, home address, Chicago address, and how long he expects to stay in the city. An index by towns, cities and postoffices is kept in a systematic manner by these young ladies, and they are able to turn without a moment's hesitation or delay to any locality in which callers are interested. Suppose you live at Columbus, O., and are anxious to know if certain friends of yours are in Chicago. You go to the desk, take a little yellow blank or "inquiry slip," and when you have filled in the name and address it reads like this: [illegible] High street, Columbus, O., registered.

In a moment or two the young woman will hand you back your ticket filled out as follows:

"Registered June 10 to stay about eight days. Chicago address, Chicago Beach hotel."

Then if you want to communicate with your friend you know where to find him. This method saves all fumbling over the registry books, which is such a nuisance, usually, at headquarters used by a large number of people. The system is carried to still greater usefulness. A postoffice is maintained in the building, through which you may reach your friends if they call for mail, as every visitor should do at least once a day. Suppose, again, you wish to know if any friends of yours from Columbus are at the fair. The clerk will hand you the Columbus list, all written out on a large card, and in a moment you may ascertain who are in town from your city, when they came, how long they are to remain, and where they are staying.

People who are making their arrangements to come to the fair should if possible leave all small children at home. Children of six or seven years or younger are able to derive but little benefit from the exposition, and it is some expense and more bother to bring them along. But all other children should have a chance to see the great fair. It is better than a school. The managers of the enterprise were wise to reduce the admission fee for children under twelve years of age to 25 cents. Already the attendance of children numbers four to six thousand daily, and as soon as the schools are closed [illegible] thousands of boys and girls will visit the grounds every day. In the end the exposition will profit financially by this concession to the small people of the land. It will be remembered the management of the Centennial exposition did not do this until very late in the year, and they not only lost money by their delay but deprived many thousands of children of the benefit to be derived from frequent visits to the great educational show.

BABY IN THE SLING.

There has been a great deal of talk in the newspapers about small attendance at the fair, but the Chicago exposition is one of the greatest successes in this respect the world has ever seen. The present attendance is about eighty or ninety thousand per day, and frequently the totals run much above this. The attendance for May was a million in round numbers, or an average of 36,000 per day, whereas the average at the Philadelphia exposition during the same month was less than 20,000. During the month of June the total number of visitors at Philadelphia was only [illegible] or less than 30,000 per day, while the Chicago attendance for this month is likely to average seventy or eighty thousand per day. It is an odd fact that at the Centennial the attendance during July was less than in June, while here the managers expect to have during July an average of at least 150,000. That will be the first of the great vacation months, and a great flood of people will then be pouring into Chicago. The Centennial season was not such a general institution in fact as it is now, and the heat made it dry work the summer visit to the Philadelphia fair during July and August.

All the signs are that the Chicago fair is to be the most successful ever held in point of attendance as it certainly is the greatest of fairs in all other respects.

ROBERT GRAVES.

Chrystallized Dream of Peace.

The person who goes to the World's fair with the sole idea of getting into the kind of a row to relieve the monotony of life, or with the resolve to get chewed by an Arabian pummeled by a cloakmaker, is the most sadly disappointed human that ever known before in all Chicago. Nothing ever happens to him. He pursues his flower-strewn way in unmolested peace and quietude amid a discouraging atmosphere of smiles. People whom he purposely runs up against accept with limpid sweetness his curt apologies. Columbian guards answer the most absurd questions with suavity unequalled in this country, exhibitors allow him to pry into their exhibits and do not even reprove him for his miscuous handling of them, wild Arabs are afflicted with an immortal wave of politeness, Turks beam in oriental effulgence at him a mile off—he is discouraged, heart-sick, spirit-crushed, for he can't raise a riot to save his soul. "This is the most abominably paradisiacal place I was ever in," said a man in hollow tones of woe as he sat and fired stones at the plaster statuary with no visable effect on the guard. "I want to be miserable and I can't, because there's nothing to be miserable over except that I'm not miserable. I've been let do just as I want to ever since I passed the turnstile. I'm going down to the beer tunnel and get a hard drink and then maybe I'll be persecuted—I'd fade away of ennui if this chrystallized dream of peace kept up," and he sauntered away to the plaisance.

The Columbian gift of the Illinois board of lady managers to the Children's building is a case filled with Chinese toys.

If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

The McCormick No. 4 Steel Mower

It's an ideal machine. There are more good ideas about its construction than can be found in any other mower. Probably that's why its sales are so enormous. It has the best foot-lift to be found on any mower; is fitted with the McCormick cold rolled finger bar, and will stand the severest tests possible to a grass-cutter. Guaranteed to work where others fail.

It's a light draft mower, and it's durable. It's an easy winner of field trials. It's a really valuable mower in more ways than can be enumerated here—and it costs but little more than a "cheap" machine.

The Illustrated McCormick Catalogue shows the special merits of this mower. We furnish it—so do our agents.

G. A. R. NOTICE!

We take this opportunity of informing our subscribers that the new Commissioner of Pensions has been appointed. He is an old soldier, and we believe that soldiers and their heirs will receive justice at his hands. We do not anticipate that there will be any radical changes in the administration of pension affairs under the new regime.

We would advise, however, that U. S. soldiers sailors and their heirs, take steps to make application at once, if they have not already done so, in order to secure the benefit of the early filing of their claims as in case there should be any future pension legislation. Such legislation is seldom retroactive. Therefore it is of great importance that applications be filed in the Department at the earliest possible date.

If U. S. Soldiers, Sailors, or their Widows, Children, or Parents desire information in regard to pending matters, they should write to The Press Claims Company, at Washington, D. C. and they will prepare and send the necessary papers, if such find them entitled under the laws enacted for their benefit.

CURIOS IN ELECTRICITY HALL.

Magic Pencil in the Exhibit of the Western Electric Company—How Some of the Beautiful and Wonderful Effects Are Produced—A Place Which Delights All World's Fair Visitors.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 21.—[Special.]—One of the most curious displays in the Electrical building is the magic pencil. Large script letters made of different colors, [illegible] form the initials of the Western Electrical company, and behind them is a pole or stick, supported by small wires and resembling a huge pencil. This pencil is all the time in motion, its movements being automatically controlled. It starts at the top of the "W," and follows the lines of that letter two down strokes and two up strokes. Then it jumps over to the "E," and finally traces the "Co." Wherever it touches, or appears to touch, it leaves a trail of fire behind it. The first thing it does is to illuminate the topmost lamp of the "W," and then the next lamp below burns brightly, and the third and all the others in turn.

The effect is just as if some unseen hands, guided by intelligence and purpose, were moving the big pencil and writing the characters literally in letters of fire. As soon as the pencil has completed its task it takes the back track, retraces the lines of the letters one after another, extinguishing lamp after lamp in its progress. The two movements together give a perfect illusion of the writing of letters in vivid lines and then rubbing them out again.

But it is only an illusion. The pencil, as a matter of fact, has nothing whatever to do with the lighting or extinguishing of the lamps. That is only a part of the theatrical effect designed to deceive the onlooker. It does so most successfully. In practice the lamps are lighted and extinguished by means of an automatic switch—a contrivance by which the current is turned on one lamp and then another in the series as regularly as tooth after tooth in the escapement wheel of a watch is brought into play, and on much the same principle. It is a very ingenious device. Turning on and off the current by means of a revolving cylinder whose periphery carries a series of contacts, is simple enough. The complicated part of the machine is the oscillating pencil, and this is mechanical. By arranging the base of a rod or pencil between a series of rollers of uneven surface which are in motion a certain orbit of movement is given to the free end; and in this case the rolls are so arranged as to make the orbit correspond to the lines of the desired letters. The cylinders are automatically reversed at a certain point, and this causes the pencil to retrace the lines which it has seemingly drawn. No more successful device than this is to be found in the spectacular part of the electrical show.

Another very interesting illustration of what may be done with electricity is shown near by, and it has the immense advantage of being useful as well as pretty. Near the center of the Electricity building stands a steel mast about forty or fifty feet high. Hung upon it, at different hights, are four powerful electric lamps. First they are all white, then all green or red. Now one of them only is white, or only one is red. In a few seconds two may be red and two green, or three green and one red. The number of changes which may be made with four positions and four colors is very great, as we see by watching the combinations which are shown on this staff in rapid succession. We are puzzled to know what all this is done for—what useful purpose it serves, and we press forward to investigate.

At the base of the steel pole stands a young man with a box on a table by his side. The box is about as big as a cheese box, and its top is of glass, and subdivided into small parts similar to the keys of a piano or organ. Each key is marked with a letter of the alphabet, or with two or three letters in combination. A little crank runs over the dial plate, and we notice that when the man in charge moves the crank to cover one of the characters he presses on a key and forces a little pin down upon that place of ivory. The effect is instantly to change the location of the colors on the staff.

Now we understand it. The attendant in charge offers explanations, but the device is so simple that explanations are really superfluous. This box is simply a switchboard. The characters on the keys are the naval signal-code. The steel mast corresponds to the foremast of a man-of-war, where the signals are displayed. When the attendant places the crank or switch at the key reading "JA," for instance (if my memory fails to give me the correct letters it doesn't matter, for the principle of operation is what we are after), a green light shows at the top, next below it a red, third a blue and at the bottom white. The meaning of this signal is "We are about to send a boat to you with dispatches." By a simple touch of his finger the man in charge of the signal box has uttered all this in unmistakable letters of fire, to be read several miles away, if needs be, by the officer who stands glass in hand watching for signals.

The operation of this method of night signaling on shipboard is so rapid and simple that an extended conversation can now be carried on in the time which was necessarily devoted to the expression of a single code sentence under the old plan of running up and hauling down lights. Thus we see that electricity is in more ways than one a boon on shipboard. Not only does it work the signals, illuminate the interior of the ship and fill the searchlights with a powerful radiance which discloses the presence of any craft for a mile around, but it is used to strengthen the magnets of the compass on steel ships and to propel forms of torpedoes against the enemy who dares approach within striking distance.

The uses of electricity in this electrical age are marvelously varied. In one corner of the big building we see the exhibits of the electrical forging companies. One of them is able to take a piece of steel six inches in diameter and fuse and weld it by the heat of electricity. Of course smaller pieces are handled with great ease in the fierce heat which comes from high pressure of the electric current.

Cooking by electricity is one of the newest things, and it is making quite a sensation in the Electrical building. In the north end of the gallery a western firm exhibits a complete line of cooking utensils for use with electricity as the heat. Here is the baking oven, for instance. It is of ordinary size, lined with asbestos and also with bright tin. There are resistance plates on the bottom and top of the oven, and a switch so arranged that two temperatures may be obtained, one for quick baking and the other for slow. A small glass door in each oven enables the operator to watch the process of baking and to regulate the current accordingly. The manufacturers of these ovens say it requires from twelve to fifteen minutes to heat the oven to a temperature of 250 degrees Fahrenheit, and that then the current may be turned off and the baking continued.

Electric pancake griddles are coming into use in restaurants and hotels. They are just the thing for those restaurants which make their griddle cakes in their show windows as an advertisement of their business. The electric griddle is neat, clean and quick, making no smoke or [illegible].

Broilers are shown in variety. Turn the switch on a cold broiler and in about three minutes it is hot enough for the meat. In two minutes more your steak is nicely broiled. Perhaps cooking will become fashionable when it may be done by simply pressing the button. Who would not like to work in her kitchen when she may have nickle-plated electric baking ovens, broilers, griddles, tea kettles, stew pans, chafing dishes, coffee pots, skillets?

Electricity is a pretty good domestic servant already, and it has only begun operations in the household field. It lights and heats the house, cooks the meals, carries messages from one part of the premises to another, runs the sewing machine and the clothes wringer. In about a year more they will have appliances by which it may be used for rocking the baby to sleep, currying and brushing horses, sweeping floors, hoeing in the garden and washing carriages.

THE MAGIC PENCIL.

Already my lady may curl her bangs with electrical tongs. For a couple of dollars she may buy a little nickle-plated stand about three by four inches, two inches high, trimmed with silk cord and furnished with two sizes of curling irons, large and small. The heat of the tongs is under perfect control of the user, and the whole apparatus may be easily carried in one compartment of a small traveling satchel. What a boon this should be to the woman who worries herself sick while traveling because her bangs are becoming unfrizzled and straightening out in long, awkward shreds. At any time she pleases she may turn on the current in the little electric heater, warm up her small-sized tongs and give the recalcitrant bangs a twist or two right before the eyes of the passengers, and probably not one of them would know what she was doing.

There are many other novel uses of electricity. Suppose a gentleman is very particular about his silk hat. He insists that it must always shine with that glossy lustre which can only be given it by the heat of the hatter's polishing iron. It is impossible to go to a hatter every hour or two, particularly while traveling. In lieu of that our dainty man supplies himself with a little electric hat polisher. He can carry it in his overcoat pocket if he likes and take it out at every street corner and give the nape of his silk hat a few deft, smoothing touches.

Heavier irons of the same style are made for use in hat stores and in laundries for polishing shirt fronts. All kinds of pressing irons are in the market. Tailors' goose irons weigh from twelve to twenty-five pounds, and will heat ready for use in about two minutes. Sad-irons for laundry and domestic use are offered in three or four sizes. No longer need the housewife build a roaring fire in the kitchen stove on a hot summer day merely for the sake of heating her sad-irons. All she has to do in this day and generation is to take her sad-iron down from the shelf and press a button. In two minutes it is hot enough for business. Moreover, it will remain at a uniform temperature. No running back and forth to the hot stove, changing irons, burning one's fingers, making the face red and losing the temper. With electrical sad-irons ironing will become a delight and even the eldest daughter may be induced to take some interest in the household laundry operations.

The chief difficulty about all these devices for cooking by electricity and the applications of the subtle fluid to household and light manufacturing purposes is the cost. It is a rather expensive luxury. For those who can afford it electrical cooking and electrical curling irons, glue pots, sealing wax heaters and all that sort of thing are neat and elegant. Nor should any one say that because just now they are rather too expensive for the masses of the people this is a condition likely to continue for some time. In the electrical field progress travels by limited express trains and within a twelve-month Edison or some of the thousands of other students of the magic current may find a method of producing electricity at one-half or one-quarter its present cost. It looks as if electricity will not stop till it has pervaded all the arts and industries.

ROBERT GRAVES.

Scene in the Alps by Electricity.

The Electric Scenic theater on the Midway plaisance is now open to the public. In this building is graphically shown what surprising results can be obtained by the use of electricity. The theater is a great educator and entertainer, and its novelty is one of its recommendations. At the commencement of the performance the auditorium is darkened and on the stage, dimply lighted, appears a Swiss scene in the morning among the Alps. The mountain gorges and peaks glow with red sunlight. By manipulating numerous keys the conductor produces the lights and shades, which makes the scene one of splendor. Countless stars appear in the blue dome and twinkle like real stars. In time the morning gives place to afternoon, and a thunderstorm which is very realistic appears. After a while the storm ceases and the clouds are dispelled. Then the moon rises and there is darkness in the valleys and moonlight on the mountain tops.

SIGHTS AND SCENES AT JACKSON PARK

A Brief Sketch of the Great Agricultural Building and the Quaint Relics in the La Rabida Convent.

Our third day at the big fair was well spent, and yet with a feeling of dissatisfaction at its close, that so little had been seen of the mighty array on exhibition. We went to the Park over the seventh street gate, and proceeded at once to the Michigan building to enquire for letters and papers from home. Then boarded the intramural train and went to the "pavilion" station, south of the grand basin and adjoining the stock pavilion. Alighting here we proceeded to the Agricultural building, where a few hours were spent to excellent advantage.

THE AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT, is one of the largest and most interesting on the entire grounds. The building itself is located south of the grand basin near the southeasterly corner of the park. It is 500 by 800 feet in size, with an annex on the south side 550 by 312 feet. The total floor area is over eighteen acres. The floor space is divided into four immense sections centering beneath a mammoth glass dome 130 feet high. The structure, with the annex, cost $620,000.

Beginning with section A, in the N. E. quarter, we find it wholly occupied by foreign exhibits. Here were cocoa and chocolate from the Netherlands; wood pulp from Sweden; various agricultural products from France and Denmark; a chocolate menier tower weighing 50 tons, worth $40,000 and made in one day; fertilizers from Uruguay; an extensive display of wools from New South Wales; an elephant tusk, 7 1-2 feet long, head dress of Zulu chief, stuffed ostriches with the young, and other curiosities from the Cape of Good Hope; a cheese from Canada weighing 22,000 pounds; Ceylon tea and coffee, from plant to cup; a model of Hawarden Castle, the Gladstone estate. The northwest quarter of section B contains large displays from Germany, Spain and Brazil; medicinal woods and plants from Paraguay; curiosities and minerals from British Guiana; a fine display of the tea industry from Japan. Section C, the southeast quarter, was devoted to State exhibits—New York, Missouri, Washington, Ohio, Illinois, Wyoming, Pennsylvania and Colorado being represented. These were arrayed in booths of fanciful and artistic design made out of native woods and cereal products. Many of them were exceedingly elaborate and costly. Section D was likewise devoted to State displays. Here the New England and Northwestern states were represented. Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa had elegant booths, the latter representing a corn palace. Nebraska and Montana had fine displays. In the New Hampshire booth was a curious plow made and used by Daniel Webster. The various galleries were filled with extensive displays, including butter and cheese apparatus; a large collection of wheat flour; a primitive flour mill run by an overshot wooden water wheel; all kinds of mineral waters; an immense collection of honey and preserved fruits; baking powders in infinite variety; soaps and tobaccos in almost endless array. Here were also found extensive collections from Australia and Cape Colony. The one story annex was given up wholly to agricultural implements, tools and machinery and was crowded with a most bewildering array of the latest and most improved machinery now in use on the farm. Old farm tools were to be seen in many of the booths, thus marking the contrast between farm machinery of 1800 and that of 1890. But dinner time—or lunch time, as they call it in Chicago—had come and we directed our steps towards

THE CASINO.

Here we procured a very respectable lunch for one dollar, which was served, (that is, the lunch,) by a French waiter, clad in a swallow-tailed coat and a white apron. The casino would be called an elegant building in most locations although it is a very modest edifice when surrounded by its collossal neighbors. Fashionable meals, if one indulge in the wine list, cost from $3.00 to 5.00, and the establishment is well patronized. Passing along the pathway between the massive columns of the peristyle we enter Music Hall, which is the counterpart of the Casino at the northeast corner of the grand basin. This contains an elegant auditorium, constructed like a modern theater, with a seating capacity of 3,500. The grand musical events which will be given on certain days during the season, will take place in this hall. Passing into the main building, the "Manufactures and Liberal Arts," as it is called, we fine ourselves beneath the largest single roof ever constructed by the hand of man on this planet. This mammoth structure has a ground area of thirty-one acres, and including the gallery sections has a floor area of forty-four acres. As many of the exhibits in this building were not yet installed, and many more were incomplete, we hastened along Columbian Ave., the great central isle, to the north end of the building where the elevator is located, and took a trip to the roof. A fine promenade walk has been constructed around the first break in the roof below the ridge pole. This walk is protected by a strong railing on both sides to insure perfect safety to the sight-seer, although on a windy day it behooves one to hang on to his hat. The entire circuit is just half a mile long, and a grander landscape view was never spread before mortal vision. Stretching away toward the rising sun the placid waters of Lake Michigan lay shimmering in the sunlight. On the south and west the little hamlets constituting the suburbs of Chicago dotted the landscape as far as the eye could reach. On the north the busy hive of industry and trade, with its great iron arteries stretching out in all directions, lies nestling in the lap of the lake. An hour is only too short a time to take in all the beauties of this promenade, and to enjoy it in its fullest measure, one should have an opera glass or a field glass to refer to occasionally.

Upon getting back to terra firma again we retraced our steps around to the east end of the grand basin, crossed the bridge over the south inlet and devoted the balance of the afternoon to the

LA RABIDA MONASTERY.

This building is one of the most quaint and ancient looking on the Park. It is an exact fac-simile of the original convent near Palos, Spain, which was erected in the seond century. Although located in a secluded part of the grounds it is always filled with visitors and is a veritable Paradise for relic hunters. It contains 1,067 relics pertaining to Columbus himself and the discovery of America, gathered from all quarters of the globe. Purchasing a guide book, which contains a full list of these antiquities, we set out on a tour of inspection, and the shades of night were falling before the entire circuit was completed. Among the principal curiosities to be seen we would mention a few as possessing especial interest: Arms and armor of Columbus' time; curious maps of the 15th century; portrait of Queen Isabella; the original will of Isabella executed Nov. 23, 1494; Isabella's crown; several mammoth oil paintings representing Columbus at La Rabida, Columbus explaining his theories to the Prior, the cloisters in the Convent, Columbus at the court of Isabella, Isabella pledging her jewels, departure of Columbus for America, the first sighting of land, and the landing of his crew on San Salvador. Several original letters, written by Columbus were in the collection; also two old bells from Santo Domingo; the first church bell that rung in the new world; the first book printed in English concerning America; the last will and testament of Columbus; the log book kept by Columbus; a fac-simile of the casket in which the body of Columbus rests. This list will afford some idea of what the convent contains, but it would require a personal visit of at least one day to satisfy the curiosity hunter. A walk of fifteen minutes brought us to the "L" station and a ride of fifty minutes landed us at Congress street. Thus ended the third day at Jackson Park.

The Baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Kerridge, Sunday evening, was full of sound, practical thought, not only for the class and young in general, but for every one.

Mr. and Mrs. McShane, of Ind., stopped over at Prof. White's on their way to Lane, Mich. Little Bertha Stanley went with them to make her home with her father at that place.

The contest Saturday eve was well attended. The speakers all deserve praise for their efforts. Each one did well, the medal was awarded to Ethel Pentecost, music was furnished by the children, and a quartette composed of Misses Shumaker and Colvin and Messrs. White and Hill. Miss May Cornelius, Supt. of Demorest work in this place, is to be complimented on the admirable arrangement of the whole affair.

New York no sooner got rid of one distingnished visitor than another one arrives. On the very day Eulalie left Chicago General Humidity arrived in town.

Deering to the Front

TO THE FARMERS OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

For the season of 1893 I wish to bring to your notice the great advantage you can derive during your harvest of hay and grain by the use of the latest improved and best harvesting machine in the world—made by Wm. Deering, of Chicago.

Here are a few reasons why you should buy a Deering:

1st—It has a jointed platform which when folded will allow the machine to pass through the same space as an ordinary buggy.

2nd—In ease of handling and lightness of draft it stands at the head.

3d—It never fails to tie, never chokes nor clogs, and uses less twine than other competing machines.

4th—It needs no expert to understand its construction. It requires no bothersome tinkering.

5th—All geared running journals are mounted in brass boxes, insuring easy running and long wearing qualities.

6th—The levers are so easily adjusted that any boy can run the machine who can drive a team.

7th—No weight on the horse's necks, as the machine is rear geared.

8th—Best material only is used in the construction of the Deering which is guaranteed by one of the oldest and best known firms existing.

Furthermore this company make their own twine and are not in the combine. Much more may be learned by calling at my warehouse and looking at the machines always on hand. Can prove their merits.

Yours truly,

C. L. Albaugh.

A display of carelessness amounting almost to criminality occurred on our streets Saturday evening when some person threw a bunch of lighted fire crackers into the road. As might have been expected, a run-away occurred, and the street being thronged with people and teams, it was by the merest chance that the horse was stopped and what might have been a most serious accident averted. An ordinance should be passed prohibiting this sort of thing, if one does not already exist.

Capt. Will Hayden went to New York last week to meet his sisters, Mabel and Clara, on their return trip from Europe. They arrived in New York a week ago Saturday, left there on Tuesday, stopping over one night at Buffalo and Cleveland, and arrived home Thursday. Clara stood the journey better than they feared she would. It is now nearly three years since Mabel went to Germany, and although she enjoyed her sojourn abroad, she is right glad to be at home once more.

The Chicago Entertainment Bureau has several good lodging houses in its control. One of them is the Cottage Grove Inn, located just half way between the business center of Chicago and Jackson Park, the cable car line passing the door. It contains some splendid rooms at very reasonable prices, ranging from $1.00 to $2.00, and accommodating from one to four persons. The Bureau also control fine rooms in private homes for $1.00 for two persons. People should engage their rooms beforehand, and they will find it to their advantage to call at this office and see what we can offer them in that line.

The "Time-Saver" is a guide to the World's Fair that deserves its name. It names and locates 5,000 of the most interesting things on the Exposition grounds, grading them according to their importance. No other guide does this. The visitor using a "Time-Saver" can see the Fair in one-third of the time usually occupied and without difficulty everything he wants to see. An encyclopedia of World's Fair information that can be carried in your breast pocket. Compiled by a newspaper man, who inspected every exhibit on the grounds; but nothing sold there will take its place. Ask your newsdealer for it, or send 25 cents to W. E. Hamilton, Room 12, No 288 South Clark St, Chicago, Ill.

Few people realize how strong a center for good educational work the Fayette Normal University is becoming in this section of the country. It is sending out every year large numbers of educated and cultured young ladies and gentlemen, well-trained teachers, skillful musicians and competent book-keepers and stenographers to take their places in the homes, schools and business-places of the land. So rapid has been the growth of the institution that the large University building could scarcely accommodate the school the past year. To meet the growing demand the college building and boarding hall in the western part of the village have been purchased and are being fitted up for school use. Thus in spite of its rapid growth, the institution has ample floor-space to meet all requirements for many years.

The Illustrated World's Fair for May is a holiday issue, exceeding in general exellence any former number. Not only are the exhibits liberally illustrated, but the main facts of the entire fair are presented in two admirable and lengthy reports of the Director-General, which cover no less than six pages of the magazine in very fine type. These reports are in themselves the best history of the Fair that has been printed. Some of the special pages of this issue are as follows: each a work of type of typographical art, with illustrations of a high character. the president's page; the Director-General's page; the Duke of Veragua's page; Dante's page; three Rabida pages; Dr. John Henry Barrow's page; Gov. Prince's page; the beautiful page of the "Poets of The Illustrated World's Fair"; sixteen large pictures of remarkable exibits, like State pavilions and the orange shows; the Chicago Fire; Seneca D. Kimbark; the City of Denver' showing the Rocky mountains; two full page poems of great merit by Keplinger and Lagutry; W. H. Jaques, the celebrated engineer; Major Truman; Windsor Castle; Von Rossler's wonderful picture; record of the opening, with the pictures of that event. This is the finest magazine so far printed in America. The founder's picture is handsomely presented. Send for a copy. Ask for it in Chicago. Jewell N. Halligan, McVicker's building. 25 cents a copy. $2.50 a year. Ten extra issues this summer.

A Defaulted Embezzler Who Preferred Death to Facing Disgrace.

DETROIT, June 19.—Some weeks ago everybody was astounded by discoveries of defalcations in the water office and the dismissal of several clerks, but to-day the climax was reached when Harry L. James, one of the disgraced clerks, a prominent member of the Michigan Yacht club and the light infantry, committed suicide. The peculations had been going on for years and the expert's report was printed Sunday morning, showing James to have been short $1,511.23.

He had told his wife Saturday night when he heard the report would be printed that he would kill himself, and early Sunday morning when she was in the yard, the report of a pistol from his room told that he had carried out his threat. James was 39 years of age, and leaves a widow and daughter 18 years old.

TOOK POISON.

Mrs. Ed Curry, of Mason, Dies from a Dose of Morphine.

It Is Thought She Took It with Suicidal Intent — Her Husband Also Tries to Kill Himself, But Without Success —Result of Domestic Troubles.

TRAGEDY AT MASON.

MASON, June 16.—Mason is greatly excited over the suicide of Mrs. Ed Curry and of the subsequent attempt of her husband to follow suit. Mrs. Curry has been taking morphine for the "grip" or some other slight ailment, and it is thought that she embraced the opportunity afforded by the presence of the poison to put herself out of the way. She died in the early afternoon Wednesday.

The husband seemed to be distracted over the death of his wife, but no one thought that he would take any desperate steps. Shortly after 6 o'clock Wednesday night he was found in an unconscious condition and apparently dead. He had taken two grains of morphine, much more than an ordinary dose. The doctors were called at once and efforts were made to resuscitate Mr. Curry. All night long two men walked him around the house, trying to awake him out of his stupor, but with comparatively little success. This morning he was still under the influence of the opiate.

Mrs. Curry's suicide is attributed to domestic troubles. For a long time her husband is said to have paid marked attentions to Mrs. McBride, who is the wife of a carriagemaker, and in the fall the two were arrested on a charge of adultery. Mrs. McBride was confined in the fall awaiting trial, but finally p[illegible] bail. On the day the trial was [illegible] off the complainant, Mr. M[illegible] failed to appear, and the wom[illegible] released. Since the trial Mrs. Curry has showed signs of continued jealousy, and it is believed this led to her death.

Curry is about 51 years old. His wife was 45. The couple have reared a 17-year-old daughter. Mrs. McBride is about 33 years of age and a woman of considerable beauty. She has one son, aged 13. Curry has recovered consciousness completely. He admits he took morphine with suicidal intent but declines to say what he will do in the future.

Mrs. Curry's adopted daughter, who was with her at the time she died, said that the doctor had been giving her morphine and some quieting pills for headache and had given specific instructions not to allow her any more. The daughter thinks she might have got the morphine and taken it by mistake.

CATCHES THE CROWDS.

Midway Plaisance at the Big World's Fair.

IT IS THE PARADISE OF SHOWMEN.

A Torrent of Humanity Constantly Pouring Through the Avenue of Cosmopolitans—The Irish Village and Blarney Castle, the Beauty Show and Many Other Attractions To Be Seen on the Plaisance.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 19.—[Special.]—Of course the Midway plaisance catches the crowds. This is not to be wondered at. It is a wonderful place. Imagine a strip of territory a mile long and as wide as a couple of city blocks in which the massed their attractions. Imagine a thoroughfare in which the representatives of all nations, their customs and costumes, their music and their means of transportation, and many of their industries and processes of manufacture are to be seen or heard. In the center of this, mightily overshadowing it all, place one of the greatest of all engineering marvels, the vertical wheel; and through this avenue of the cosmopolitans, this paradise of showmen, this apotheosis of all that is queer and spectacular, pour every hour of the day a torrent of humanity—humanity traveling afoot and on the backs of donkeys, horses, dromedaries and occasionally an elephant; humanity riding in wheel chairs of the western world and sedan chairs of the orient; humanity from every clime, in all sorts of uniforms and an immense variety of headgear. And this strange mixture, this condensation of a world of civilization and savagery into one street, is the Midway plaisance, the side-show feature of the World's Columbian exposition.

There is no need of my giving you a catalogue of the strange things that are to be seen here. The list is too long. I will only mention some of them in passing. Among the first things to attract your attention will be the Irish Village, where Blarney Castle has been cleverly reproduced, and where the bonnie Irish lasses make lace, butter and cheese, and Irish lads sell you trinkets fashioned out of bog oak, and genuine blackthorn walking sticks. But there are two Irish villages here, and both are managed by women. Lady Aberdeen is the mistress of one and Mrs. Hart of the other. Both are doing a good business, and their profits are to be devoted to the support of Irish industrial schools.

Across the way is the Beauty Show, a large building in which twenty or thirty comely young women, gaily attired in the costumes of the countries whence they came, sit on elevated benches and try to look pleasant while crowds of visitors stand and look at them and pass criticisms upon their faces and figures, for which privilege the visitors have paid the sum of 25 cents each. I am not surprised that this is about the only one of the sideshows that made money during the month of May. This concern paid a 10 per cent. dividend June 1, and at that rate will enrich its owners before November. The chief trouble the managers have is in keeping their girls. Even now they are advertising for more beauties to take the place of those who have deserted. One is not surprised to learn that the girls quickly become tired of the life. It must be very, very trying upon the nerves to sit there under the electric lights all day long, painted and powdered and dressed in finery, with shoals of men and women staring them in the face. A girl without any fine sensibilities might endure it, but one with pride and self-esteem would go insane in a month.

One beautiful, vivacious American girl was offered a fine salary to pose here as the representative of her country, and accepted. In three days she resigned, and said she would not sit there a month for a million dollars. The next girl stayed only one day. In six weeks at least a dozen American girls have tried this way of earning a living, and given it up in disgust. The saddest, most forlorn creature I have seen in the whole fair is the little mite of a Chinese woman who poses on the stage as the representative of the Celestial kingdom. She never smiles, and apparently does not know by experience what it is to laugh. All day she appears to be thinking of her home on the other side of the world. She reminds one of some gentle animal shut up in a cage and pining for liberty. So far she has not talked of throwing up her contract, for in a month here she earns more money than she and her father and mother and brothers and sisters together could earn in a year in China. Besides, she is treated very well by the managers of the show, as all the girls are. But some day, no doubt, she will run away and marry a rich Chinese laundrymen or tea merchant. Several of the foreign girls who came over to pose as representative beauties have already found husbands—and let us hope good ones—in free America.

How one's sympathies do go out to the poor sedan-chair men from Turkey. There are at least thirty of the poor fellows here, and some of them are old, gray-haired men. It is hard work, this sedan-chair carrying. The chair itself must weigh seventy-five pounds. Put within it a 200 pound American man or woman—the women appear to be particularly fond of this method of transportation—and it is a pretty heavy burden for two men to carry at the rate of three miles an hour under a broiling sun. Each Turk puts a strap over his shoulder and grasps the handles of the contrivance. Then they start off at a pretty good pace, and with a gait that is lightly. Comparing the sedan chairs of the Orient with the wheeled chairs of the Occident on the basis of amount of power employed, and the ratio is about ten to one. But the wheel chairs probably wouldn't do at all over the sandy roads of the lands whence the sedan chairs come. So, after all, it is every country and every people to those means of transportation best suited to their requirements.

The villages from Java, from Dahomey, from Germany and the street in Cairo are all very interesting. It looks as if all these enterprises would make money by the cartload during the remainder of the summer. In the German village there is always a great crowd, and it costs 25 cents to set foot within the gates. Once in, there is nothing to see, nothing to do, save to take seats, order luncheon, wine or beer and hear the bands play. The music is very good. A German military band can play a waltz that would tempt a man with one leg, and that full of gout, to look for a partner and a bit of oiled floor. Yet multitudes of people are eager to pay their 25 cents each, and pretty good prices for everything else, that they may enjoy the music. I had forgotten one other attraction in the German village—the frauleins who serve the ice cream and in some of the pavilions the steins of beer and other refreshments. It does one good to look upon the rosy faces, the bright eyes, the natural manners of these maidens from fatherland.

Throughout all the foreign restaurants in the Midway an effort has been made to preserve original costumes and furnishings, and to have the serving done by actually imported waiters. But this is not always possible in practice. In the Moorish cafe, where everything is dirty and uninviting, as one might expect in any eating house with which the Moors have to do, only five or six of the waiters ever saw the waters of the Mediterranean. Thirty or forty waiters, Germans, Irish, American, what-not, are attired in gorgeous Moorish outfits, with plenty of gold braid and yellow stuff, and they pass very well for swarthy Moors. Any one may pass for a Moor in Chicago unless he be careful to make vigorous application of soap and water five or six times a day.

The Centennial exposition at Philadelphia, you may remember, was a good school for Americans in the bread business. It taught us to give up the use of hot breads and of heavy breads and to take to the light, flaky but flavorsome bread of Vienna. The Vienna bakery at the Centennial caused a revolution in this country. There is a Vienna bakery here in the Midway plaisance, but it attracts very little attention. Vienna bread is no longer a novelty in America. But it looks as if the Chicago exposition were going to work another revolution in the diet of our people. The cocoa and chocolate people are making a desperate effort to supplant coffee. In the Agricultural building and various parts of the grounds they have booths at which they give away not only mugs of fragrant cocoa or chocolate, but light cakes as well. There are people who manage to spend a day at the fair without buying any luncheon at all. By "sampling" a few cups of cocoa, two or three of chocolate, a couple of plates of soup and beef tea—also given away by manufacturers—and for dessert concluding with the fruit given out to all comers by generous Californians, one may survive the day at no expense whatever to his pocketbook. The cocoa and chocolate people say they are going to spend a lot of money in an effort to break up the American habit of drinking coffee all the time, nothing but coffee. Americans are the greatest coffee-drinkers in the world. During the period of the World's fair the cocoa and chocolate firms expect to give away decoctions of their goods literally by the ton, but I don't believe even this heroic treatment will make much of an impression upon the coffee-drinking habit of the Americans.

One of the great curiosities of the day in Chicago is to be found in a building on the plaisance. It is spun glass. An enterprising firm has erected here complete glass works, where the visitor may see every stage of the process, from blowing and moulding to the manufacture of cut glass and the weaving of glass fabrics. One would naturally think a fabric made of glass would be hard, brittle and unsatisfactory. But, to the contrary, it is exceedingly soft and pliable. It is much like silk. As you may imagine, it is very beautiful, with a sheen and richness which even silk does not possess. But it is also very costly—$60 a yard I believe is the price. It works up charmingly in curtains, portieres, lamp shades and other decorations. One advantage which it possesses is that it may not only be dusted but may be washed, or be spunged off as often as desired and made as cleanly as when first put up.

The glass cloth, and all the processes of glass making and decorating, make up a show which is very alluring to the crowds. Midway plaisance from one end to the other is filled with just such attractive novelties.

ROBERT GRAVES.

IT IS EPIDEMIC.

Typhoid Fever Is Raging at Ironwood.

The Deaths from the Malady Average Five or Six Daily, and Over 400 Persons Are Down with the Disease.

BAD WATER THE CAUSE.

IRONWOOD, June 19.—The present epidemic of typhoid fever which now prevails here is the worst ever known in this state. All of the public schools have been closed on account of the disease and all available buildings turned into hospitals. Physicians are failing sick themselves from overwork and loss of sleep. The cases number over 400 now and deaths average from six to ten daily. All steps taken so far to stop the ravages of the disease have proved ineffectual. All of the mines on the Gogebic range are practically closed. People are leaving by carloads every day. Business is entirely suspended. Many citizens blame Superintendent Southers, of the water works, for the bad water, which is causing the epidemic. It is charged that he has not used filters for nine months. The feeling against him is very high, and personal violence has even been threatened in some quarters. Mr. Southers is out of the city at present.

Wants $15,000.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—Mrs. Lizzie E. Eldridge, now of Petoskey, Mich., is suing the North Chicago Railway company for $15,000 damages in Judge Baker's court. She alleges that January 14, 1891, as she was stepping off a North State street car, her dress caught on a bolt which was a part of the car, causing her to fall upon the ground. She says that she was so injured that she has been suffering from serious physical disability ever since.

Iron Trade Depressed.

ISHPEMING, June 19.—Owing to great depression in the iron trade, ore shipments have been very light since the opening of lake navigation, and for the past ten days have fallen off. In consequence the Chicago & Northwestern railway has laid off several hundred employes, and more will follow. Business at Escanaba, the ore port of the line, is practically paralyzed, as only a third of the normal business is being handled.

Michigan Millers to Meet.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 19.—The summer meeting of the Michigan State Millers' association will be held in the Michigan building at Jackson park June 28, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. This date is during the week designated by the exposition authorities as "millers' week," and is the day preceding "millers' day," when special ceremonies of a national character will take place under the auspices of the millers themselves.

Cut Her Throat.

BAY CITY, June 16.—Mrs. Isaac Potter, aged 22, cut her throat with a razor, almost severing her head from her body, and died within a few moments. A week ago a child was born to her and ever since the woman has been afflicted with mania. She refused to have anything to do with the child. Her husband was sitting near the room when she cut her throat and had been talking with her but a few moments before.

Out of the Market.

LANSING, June 16.—The state board of agriculture, which by the last legislature was given control of the remaining 150,000 acres of agricultural college lands, has withdrawn the entire tract from the market and will hold it for better prices. The land is situated in various counties in the upper part of the lower peninsula and is for the most part covered with hardwood timber.

Blaze at Hillsdale.

HILLSDALE, June 17.—Fire broke out in the table factory, occupied by the Hillsdale Manufacturing company, and the building and entire contents were lost. The loss on building and machinery is $13,000; stock on hand, $6,000; tools owned by employes, $1,500. The stock alone was insured for $1,000. The rest is a total loss. It is not known yet whether they will rebuild.

Alleged Swindler Caught.

LANSING, June 16.—Edward R. Teeple has been arrested here charged with obtaining money by false representations. He advertised himself as agent of "the Manhattan Loan company," of Chicago, which loaned money at 2 per cent. interest, and his customers allege that they failed to receive money for which they paid him a bonus and interest in advance.

Heavy Fire at Alba.

MANCELONA, June 15.—The business portion of the little town of Alba was almost totally destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon. The Exchange hotel and Edelstein's store alone stand in the business section. The contents of most of the buildings were burned. The loss exceeds $15,000; with little insurance. This is a serious blow to a town of 800 inhabitants.

Michigan Is the Tennis Champion.

MADISON, Wis., June 16.—The final contests in the collegiate tennis tournament resulted as follows: The championship in the doubles goes to Michigan, with Minnesota second, Wisconsin third, and Evanston fourth. Michigan also wins the championship in the singles, with Wisconsin second, Minnesota third, and Evanston fourth.

A Student Drowned.

KALAMAZOO, June 19.—Andrew J. Nelson, 21 years old, of Detroit, and a student in Kalamazoo college, was drowned while bathing in Woods lake Saturday afternoon. S. J. Hall, another student, nearly lost his life in trying to save his friend.

Another Pioneer Gone.

BATTLE CREEK, June 16.—James Bryant, an old pioneer of Cenvis township, dropped dead of heart failure. The deceased was a father of Mrs. Perry Mays. He was 75 years old, and had resided fifty-seven years in his township.

IT SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOUSE.

J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of la grippe, when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free trial bottles at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

New York no sooner got rid of one distinguished visitor than another one arrives. On the very day Eulalie left Chicago General Humidity arrived in town.

A GREAT BENEFACTOR.

"Educators are certainly the greatest [illegible] of the race and after them" ing Dr. Franklin Miles' popular works, we cannot help declaring him among the most entertaining and educating of authors."—New York Daily. He is not a stranger to our readers, as his advertisements appear in our columns in every issue, calling attention to the fact that his elegant work on Nervous and Heart diseases is distributed free by our enterprising druggists. Trial bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine are given away, also book of testimonials showing that it is unequalled for nervous prostration, headache, poor memory, dizziness, sleeplessness, neuralgia, hysteria, fits, epilepsy.

As a blood-purifier, the most eminent physicians prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the most powerful combination of vegetable alteratives ever offered to the Public. As a spring and family medicine, it may be freely used by old and young alike.

Peru makes herself a justly conspicuous South American country by declaring that she is about not to have a revolution.

RICH, RED BLOOD.

As naturally results from taking Hood's Sarsaparilla as personal cleanliness results from free use of soap and water. This great purifier thoroughly expels scrofula, salt rheum and all other impurities and builds up every organ of the body. Now is the time to take it.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm is an unfailing remedy for all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Urinary organs. It is a certain cure for dropsy, diabetes, bright's Disease, gravel, kidney weakness, incontinence of urine, bed wetting in children, biliousness, liver complaint and female troubles. A trial of this great remedy will convince you of its potency.

The Dearest Spot on Earth is the spot that's washed out without Pearline. It costs in clothes, in the rubbing and scrubbing that wears them out quickly; it takes twice the time, and double the labor. It's expensive washing before you get through with it—and the cost comes home to you, no matter who does the work.

Pearline saves money by saving work, wear, and time. It hurts nothing; washes and cleans everything. It costs no more than common soap, but it does more. It's cheap to begin with—but it's cheapest in the end.

Beware of imitations of Pearline which are being peddled from door to door. 196 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

We all know that Summer Complaint, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, etc., prevail during Summer and Autumn. There is no dispute or question on that point; The only question is regarding the Remedy to use, and as we know its quality and know how highly people speak of it and because we have it to sell, we unhesitatingly recommend Brant's Extract of Blackberry. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, either for adults or children. Where its merit is known, no other brand will sell. 25 cents of J. J. Orr, Tecumseh.

It is to be feared that so long as there are no checks placed upon those who sell tickets at the World's Fair, the "attendance" will continue to be disappointing.

MR. S. ERSKINE,
MRS. S. ERSKINE.

A letter received yesterday from the Chicago Entertainment Bureau stated that their rooms at Cottage Grove Inn and in private houses under their control are rapidly filling up. Temperance people who have been going to Harvey are now turning their attention to more convenient places in the city. In regard to the patronage they are receiving from teachers this letter states; Mr. G. T. Murphy, Assistant Supt. of St. Louis, has been here investigating the different hotels and Bureaus so that he might advise teachers in that city as to the best place for them to go. He stopped at the Cottage Grove Inn while here, took his meals across the street at a restaurant for 25 cents per meal. After thoroughly investigating all of the [illegible] presented to him he came to our office and said he was better pleased with ours than any he had seen, and said he would do all in his power to send the teachers who had not made other arrangments to us and he is keeping his word for a young man came from St. Louis to our Cottage Grove Inn and stated that Mr. Murphy was advising his teachers to come to us. We are negotiating with teachers of Omaha in the same way. We control a large number of rooms in private houses which can be procured at fifty cents to one dollar a day for each occupant; the best locations will be rapidly taken after the first of July and rooms should be secured in advance.

The Teacher's Institute.

The state institute for Lenawee county will be held at the High School building Adrian, beginning August 14th and continuing two weeks. Prof. E. C. Thompson, will be conductor, and he will be assisted by Webster Cook and H. C. Rankin. Special drill in penmanship will be given by Prof. P. R. Cleary, of Ypsilanti. All these gentlemen are well-known teachers and competent institute workers.

I make this preliminary announcement thus early in order that teachers may know how to arrange their vacation so as to attend the institute without interfering with other plans. I wish to urge upon all teachers, present and prospective, the importance of attending the institute. In addition to the work of the instructors mentioned above, I wish to give to country teachers a series of talks on the grade work and other matters of special interest to them. I therefore urge all such to arrange their affairs so as to attend, at least part of the time. A later announcement will appear in due time.

A Minister's Bicycling Advice.

A well known Methodist minister appears upon a bicycle, and the Rambler appropiates information which may be of much practical value to many of his readers. This minister had at last settled for himself the very important question of securing needed exercise. He had experimented in many ways tried regular walking hours, the gymnasium, horseback riding, etc.—but found each impracticable. The difficulty was to discover some sort of exercise which would be pleasurable. All that he desired he claims to have obtained in the safety bicycle. But a man, past forty-five years of age and decidedly an overweight learn to ride? Certainly if he can endure considerable humiliation of personal pride and a good deal of tumbling; if he can smile agreeably while his neighbors, who have gathered to see him make his initial efforts, volunteer their pleasant and hopeful comments; and especially if he can receive graciously the taunts of the street urchin who takes in at a sight the fact that he is an apprentis in the business. My friend was mounted upon a Victor, with spring fork, which, he said, was the "heavy man's machine." Some of our ministers and their wives may be seen riding about their charges and making pastoral calls together.

Epworth League Convention at Cleveland, June 29th to July 2nd

The Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y Co., will on June 28th and 29th sell excursion tickets to Cleveland and return at very low rates, good to return until July 3rd, inclusive.

He is one of the best bred sons of his illustrious sire, and a great stock horse. He is a sure foal getter, and his colts are large, strong and very handsome, and show splendidly at the trot.

Nutpatch was sired by the greatest sire that lives or ever has lived, age considered, Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. The sire of 104 in 2:30 or better, 22 of which have records from 2:20 to 2:09 3-4 in 1891. Nutwood by Belmont, he by Alexander's Abdallah, he by Hambletonian 10; here are four great stallions because they all had great dams. A Literary Sensation.

Uncle Tom's Cabin has certainly broke loose. The copyright on this most famous of American novels, by Mrs. Stowe, has recently expired, which frees its publication from the monopoly of the high-priced publishers, and though in anticipation of this fact they have within a few months greatly reduced its price, now that it is really unchained the consequences are something surprising. John B. Alden, Publisher, of New York, issues several editions, selling them only direct (not through agents or book sellers); one in good type, paper covers, for 5 cents, sent post-paid, or the same bound in cloth for 10 cents, with postage 7 cents extra; also an excellent large-type edition, on fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth, for 25 cents, postage 10 cents. Surely a copy of Uncle Tom's Cabin will soon be found in every home where it is not already. Mr. Alden sends a 32-page pamphlet describing many of his publications free, or a catalogue of 128 pages of choice books, a veritable literary gold mine for book-lovers, for 2 cents. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

EYE SPECIALIST AND ELECTRIONIST will be at LILLEY HOUSE, Tecumseh, Mich.
Thursday and Friday, June 29 and 30,
TWO DAYS ONLY.
CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATIONS FREE.

If you are interested in the condition of your eyes, call on the noted Dr. Galleher. He is an expert in his profession. Eyesight is precious—more valuable than any other of the special senses. The Doctor has treated in the last 12 months more than 3,500 cases of all forms of eye trouble and errors of refractions, such as Glaucoma, Ulcera ion of the Cornea, Granulation of the Iris, Presbyopia, Paralysis of Accomodation, Spasm of Accomodation, Hypermetrobia, Aphakia, Myopia, Astigmatism, Anisometropia, Strabismus, Diplopia, Asthenopia, etc. Have you ever stopped to think how many people in this world are blind from their own negligence and carelessness in not giving their eyes attention at the proper time? You now have the opportunity of consulting one who gives all his time in treating eronic eye trouble. Thousands of persons in this world that do not use glasses that should, then again there are thousands of persons using gasses they think suited to their eyes, but the truth of the matter is, the glasses do not correct the trouble, but aggravate it and produce headache, spots before the eyes, inflamation, granulation, winking, trembling spells, various nerve and brain affections, catracts, burning and smarting of the eyes, etc.; entailing not only positive injury to the sight, but untold misery and blindness. Dr. Galleher makes examinations that few in this country can make. He has instruments with which he can examine every muscle and fibre in the inside of the eye. He can tell you in an instant after examining your eyes whether he can benefit you or not, and will truthfully say so. It should be understood that Dr. Galleher is well known throughout the Eastern States as a practical and successful electrionist. He invented some of the finest electrical appliances ever imported to this country. Remember that Dr Galleher does not give one drop of medicine. He is the only man in America who has the exclusive sale of Dr. Edgar Scott's Positive Catarrh Cure. An instrument put up of compressed and medicated gasses, which is Dr. S's. own invention. Dr. Galleher also has apoliances which will remove a tape worm in from two to four hours or no charges made. Testimonials of the best people in this country at his room at the hotel. Call early and secure convenient hours for free consultation and examination.

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER,

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground." We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crop, and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peaceful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank the neighbors and friends for their kindness during the sickness and death of our mother; also for the beautiful floral pieces.

MRS. JAMES CURRY AND FAMILY.

Ann Lord was born in Hay Breken, England, Feb. 15, 1813. She left her native country at the age of twenty years and came to America. The following year she was married to James Thomson, in the State of New York, and lived there until the Mexican War, when he heard his country's call and went, never to return. Four children blessed this union, three girls and one boy. One daughter now lives in the city of Jackson, this State. Mrs. Thomson was married to Joseph Dennison in the year 1843 and lived in New York State until 1854, when they came to Michigan and settled in the town of Augusta, where they lived until they moved to Milan township, where he died May 13, 1872. One daughter blessed this union, Mrs. James Curry, of Ridgeway, Michigan, with whom she lived until the day of her death, which was June 19, 1893. She was eighty years, four months and four days old. It can be truly said that she was a devoted mother and grandmother, caring for little in this world except that her loved ones be provided for. One of the last wishes she was heard to express was that Freddie might grow up to be a good man. While suffering from great weakness she was heard to say, "I am afraid I am getting too impatient." Her life was an example of Godliness.

When at school our old 'mentor' used to tell us:

"If you much trouble would avoid,
Five things observe with care;
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where."

This was amusingly illustrated a few days ago, not a thousand miles from here. A gay party from one of the lake resorts, stopped to make a trifling purchase at a country store, and one of the girls addressing a youngster sitting on the steps, lisped, "ah there, 'Buh' does your mother know yo u're out?" "Yes ma'am,' promptly replied the young man, "she sent me out to buy a donkey; are you for sale?" Tableau!

Isaac Pennington a well and favorably known citizen of this place, passed away Sunday A. M. the 25 inst., after a sickness of twenty weeks occasioned by a fall on the ice on the 16th of last February. He was a pioneer here, having come to this county from Farmington, N. Y., with his father when but six years of age. He was a model farmer and interested in everything that could make the homes and lives of those around him prosperous and happy. He was a birthright member of the society of Friends and his meekness, patience, quietness, and withal holy life advanced his high and holy calling as a child of God and many feel that a knowledge of him has come into their lives as an influence more enduring than time. He leaves a widow and daughter, also many relatives and friends to mourn his loss. He was a good husband, a kind father, a true friend and christian citizen. His simple, honest, pure life spent in the service of God and humanity showed to the world the power of humble faith in the son of God to make private lives redolent with the sweetness of christian usefulness. The funeral services were held at the house on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. David J. Lewis officiating.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The Commencement Exercises of the Class of '93—A Fine Programme Presented—Meeting of the Alumni

The weather clerk always has a benignant smile upon his countenance on the day of the Raisin Valley Commencement. Stormy weather on that day is almost an unheard occurrence. Last Friday was no exception to the general rule; a more perfect June day is seldom seen in this latitude, and the literary exercises within the home-like rooms of the Seminary building were in perfect harmony with the weather outside. The audience room was tastily decorated with vines and flowers, the platform being covered with wild ferns and moss. Upon the blackboard in the rear of the rostrum was the class motto, "Rowing, Not Drifting," done in large evergreen letters, and a beautiful piece of crayon work, the words "Class of '93" in the center. This latter was executed by E. L. Glick, of Hudson. The class consisted of five graduates.

Promptly at half past ten o'clock Prof. White called the large audience to order, those taking part in the programme having filed into the hall and taken their seats on the rostrum, to the music of a march played by Miss Ella Jackson. The exercises were announced in the following order:

Invocation—Rev. Edward Mott.
Vocal Solo—"Across the Dee," Dora Grayson, Tecumseh.
Oration—The Finite and the Infinite, Fred Hunt, Rome.
Oration—Our Policy Toward Aliens, Adelbert Vedder, Adrian.
Oration—The Means, Universal, William A. Dawson, Holloway.
Instrumental Solo—"Rondeau," Ella Jackson, Tecumseh.
Oration—Canada and the United States, Clarence W. Burtless, Tipton.
Oration—I Didn't Think, Linora Charles, Tecumseh.
Conferring of Diplomas—Prof. White
Class Address—W. N. Trueblood, Richmond, Ind.
Vocal Solo—"The Minstrel Boy," Dora Grayson, Tecumseh.
Benediction—Rev. Edward Mott.

The exercises throughout were of superior merit. The orations were all carefully prepared and finely delivered, showing good scholarship and thorough training. Misses Ella Jackson and Dora Grayson acquitted themselves with their usual credit. Prof. White gave the diplomas, with a few exceedingly appropriate remarks. The address to the class by Prof. Trueblood was a superior production. No abstract would do it justice and our space will not permit its publication in full. We append an abstract of the graduating essays, which will show their general character.

The Finite and the Infinite.

BY FRED HUNT.

In looking over the annals of the world from time to time, when the area of civilization was comparatively small indeed, and tracing, step by step, the progress of mankind, one will find things to excite his admiration and wonder. We can see how provinces have grown into nations of great influence and power, rearing men of high intellectual ability, who have given to the world great truths, which have been no small item in the advancement of civilization. There have been great warriors, who have been able to conquer the world. The great navigators of the world have been many. We of this country honor one above all the rest, who, amid many trials, gave to the world a new continent. There have been great literary characters, whose works have been treasured up by the nations of the world.

All this has been planned for the comfort of man by our All-Wise-Father. As a weak compensation, let man guide his little craft with a firm hand in the right direction, and not drift. God and his angels watch over him from above.

Our Policy Toward Aliens.

BY ADELBERT VEDDER.

The cholera epidemic of last year has forced this question of immigration on the minds of the American people, not merely as regards danger of infectious diseases, but also as to what the policy of America should be toward immigrants. The question is not one requiring quarantine laws, for the laws on that subject are sufficient if they be carried out. Neither should it be a question for party or sectional contests, but a question as to which will be the better policy for the United States. In the early period of our history there were many conditions favoring unrestricted immigration, which do not now exist. Prominent among these was our vast country, which needed men to develop it, and America could not furnish those men. The conditions in Europe, too, at that time were of such a nature as to send an entirely different class of people from those who come at the present time. From the time of the first settlement of the American colonies to the present, there have been two classes of immigrants.

America is a nation well fitted to teach the principles of liberty to all nations on the earth. If we allow a debasement of our population, it will be impossible to maintain our standard, and our mission of liberty will be a failure. Success can be secured only by a determination that none shall be allowed to make their homes here save such as come prepared to enter upon American citizenship, without lowering its high standard.

The Means, Universal.

BY WM. A. DAWSON.

We are now in the last decade of the 19th century of the Christian era, an epoch in history in which the general well-being of mankind, and the conditions of society, are the best; the attainments of man the greatest ever reached. The present conditions of society and mankind have been achieved by slow progress, by centuries of exertion, experience and education. Education has been the means universal of mankind, the security of society, and the maintenance of freedom. Education is not an end in itself, but a means to an end; an end only in that it prepares the individual to best fulfil his station in life for the greatest good and happiness of himself and his fellow men.

The preservation of society and state, and the advancement of man, demand universal education; an education which acquaints him with the rights and privileges which are his, which he ought to possess, and the manner in which he should use his power for the well being of himself and fellow men.

Canada And the United States.

BY CLARENCE W. BURTLESS.

For over a quarter of a century the English speaking people of the continent have been developing side by side, and yet in perfect independence of each other. On account of the different opinions of patriotism held by the people of the two sections, their paths diverged, and a political war has arisen between the two countries. Movements have been begun in Canada toward arousing public sentiment in favor of annexation to the United States. The principal cause of the present movement is the fact that Canada is now on an equal footing with other foreign countries in relation to the United States. The present tariff destroys her home market, and compels Canadians to ship most of their goods to England.

The fact cannot be successfully disputed that the true interests of the parties concerned, and the development of the resources of both countries, can be best accomplished by a union of the two great English speaking peoples of this continent, and it is the duty of every American citizen to approve a course that promises to be so productive of good.

I Didn't Think.

BY LINORA CHARLES.

In the garden of Eden where everything was beautiful, and abounding in the richest of flowers and most luscious of fruits, our Mother Eve looked at her hands, lacerated with thorns and lamented the disobedience which brought her to such dire results, all because "she didn't think." All through life, amidst our friendships and duties, we take all the joys that come as a matter of course, and until some great sorrow befalls us. We forget how many a word we might have spoken to have cheered some one on life's journey, or how many a kind act we might have done which would have drawn hearts more closely to our own, which have been omitted all because we "didn't think." How sad it would be at the end of life if we should have educated our minds, and omitted the higher education, all because of that one phrase, "we didn't think."

After a picnic dinner in the grove the annual Reunion Exercises of the Seminary were held, commencing at 2 o'clock. The business meeting came first, in which the officers were elected, and a program prepared for another year.

Mary C. Wood then read a historical sketch of the establishment and early days of the Seminary, which will appear in a condensed form some time in the future. William O. Beal, of the class of last year, delivered an oration, and Frank Hill gave a recitation. Celia Jones who was to have had a poem was not present, and the meeting which had been very interesting closed.

The Alumni Exercises were held in the evening and opened by instrumental music by Laura Sheffield. Next was an oration by Chauncey Graves. A vocal solo by Laura Sheffield. Recitation by Nellie Bowerman and class history of each of the four past years interpersed with music. The exercises were very interesting and a banquet was served at the close at which some very interesting toasts were given.

THE MOVING SIDEWALK

Novel Method of Transportation at the Fair.

A LONG RIDE FOR FIVE CENTS.

Something About the Multiple Speed and Traction Railway Which Is in Operation on the Great Pier at Jackson Park—How Women Get On and Off the Ingenious Contrivance.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 26.—[Special.]—One of the distinctively Yankee curiosities here in the way of methods of transportation is the moving sidewalk, or the multiple speed and traction railway. It is not only a railway which affords pleasure to visitors and gives them a glimpse of a genuine novelty, but it is a great convenience to the many thousands of people who use the steamboats in going to and fro between the exposition and the city. The moving sidewalk occupies nearly the whole length of the big pier which the managers of the exposition constructed here, and which is the greatest pier in the world. The pier is one of the many astonishing features of the World's fair. If it had been erected by some large commercial city, as the result of years of demand and agitation, and to meet the requirements of a large and increasing water commerce, one would not have been surprised. But that such a giant structure should be built for the mere convenience of embarking and landing passengers during a single summer is almost incredible. The pier is 2,500 feet long, or nearly half a mile, and it is about 400 feet wide. Even these figures do not give one an adequate idea of its vastness.

The steamboats, of which there is a large fleet plying all the time from the city, eight miles away, touch pretty well out toward the end of the pier, and a lucky thing it is, therefore, that some means of transportation from one end of the pier to the other has been provided.

The moving sidewalk is a very simple affair. It occupies the space enclosed under a shed-like roof down the center of the pier. At either end the shed makes a turn like the upper end of a figure "8." To take a ride on this sidewalk you approach one of the booths and buy a ticket, the cost of which is 5 cents. Then you pass through a turn-stile—there are turn-stiles everywhere in and about the World's fair—and ascending a short flight of steps find yourself confronted by a long bare strip of moving floor. At a distance of ten or twelve feet apart at the edge of this moving strip nearest you is a row of iron posts, on the top of each of which is a sign:

> Grasp This Post in Stepping on or Off and Face FORWARD!

If you follow this simple advice you will have no trouble in getting aboard the railway without cars or tracks. The platform is moving along at a rate of about two miles an hour, and if one goes about it in the right way it is very easy indeed to step on, even without grasping one of the iron posts. But it is better to follow instructions and to take hold of one of the uprights, for then it is almost impossible to fall. But do not forget to face forward. That is the secret of the whole matter, as most men already understand. Some women do not understand it, and it seems will never be taught one of the simplest principles of movement and safety in the wide world. Every day one may see women endeavoring to mount this exceedingly gentle steed, in utter defiance of the "forward" rule. There appears to be something perverse in the feminine mind which induces her to try to do things in a way different from that followed by the more experienced half of humanity. Of course, in this instance the perverse woman either gets a little fall, not at all dangerous to life or limb (for on the moveable sidewalk such a thing as a serious accident is well-nigh impossible), but certainly very embarrassing. No woman likes to measure her full length on the floor, with a show of shoes and hosiery and a disarrangement of hair and temper, in full view of the public; though I sometimes fancy the younger women who are attended by attentive escorts do like to slip their footing on the moving sidewalk for no other purpose than to be caught in the arms of those same attentive young gentlemen and placed on their feet aright.

Can anyone tell why women persist in stepping off street cars with their backs where their faces should be? Not one man in 10,000, no matter how little may be his experience with street cars, will make this mistake. At least one-third of the women who use street cars every day of their lives alight with their faces turned toward the rear end of the coach, so that any start of the vehicle will be sure to trip them up and send them flat on their backs in an awkward and sometimes destructive heap. If the moving sidewalk has any useful purpose to serve during the continuance of this fair it is to teach women how to get on and off public vehicles. It serves as a sort of object lesson in this simple matter, and I am sure is doing a world of good.

Having once reached the bare, moving platform the passenger finds he has three options before him. One is to remain where he is, another to walk in either direction (hence the term "sidewalk") and the third is to step upon an adjoining platform, partly covered with benches, and moving in the same direction as the other. This seat-platform moves just twice as fast as the bare platform, or at the rate of about four miles an hour. But since a man can easily walk at the rate of four miles an hour, and the first platform is moving half that speed, it follows that if he stays on the first one and walks at the rate of four miles an hour he will be covering space at the rate of six miles an hour, or one-half faster than the platform which has the seats upon it.

The ride upon this novel railway is quite enjoyable, particularly on a hot day. The roof overhead keeps off the rays of the sun, and there is nearly always a fresh breeze blowing across the pier. Often the little railway system is crowded to its full capacity, and it will hold about three thousand persons at once. The managers permit a passenger to ride as long and as far as he likes for one fare, so that the leisurely, lazy and greedy person may come in the morning, drop a nickel in the slot and stay till midnight, riding all the time. Of course very few people have the time or inclination to ride more than an hour, and the proprietors of the multiple speed and traction railway expect to earn very large profits before the summer is over. There is a passion in the American public mind for riding on something or other, and this is about the most novel of the devices which ingenious men have put forward to profit by this universal aspiration. The expenses of operating it are small.

The inventor of this railway hoped he had solved with it the great problem of rapid transit in cities. His plan was to have not alone two platforms moving in parallel at different speeds, but five or six platforms. It is easy to see that if the first platform moved at the rate of three miles an hour, the second at six miles and with an increase of three miles for each additional part of the system, the sixth platform would have a speed of eighteen miles an hour. Capitalists have looked into the system, but their conclusion is that it is too cumbersome and too likely to be troublesome for the use of elderly and infirm [illegible] great danger of accidents. Therefore the probabilities are that the multiple speed and traction will never come into use for any purpose but that of novelty or pleasure riding on such occasions as this.

Another novel railway here is known as the ice road. It is simply a series of toboggan slides, sharp declivities and gentle ascents. Within an inclosure of timbers made like a large trough the cars run. But instead of rolling on wheels they slide on pipes that are covered with ice, chemically formed. Ammonia is pumped through the pipes on the same principle that ice and cold brine are made for the breweries and other industrial concerns. A thick coating of frost appears on the surface of the pipes, and along this smooth roadway the cars, which are made to fit the pipes, glide with great ease. At the bottoms of the declines they come in contact with cables operated by machinery, and being attached thereto are lifted to the tops of the inclines. There the cables are dropped and the trains of cars slide down the hills with almost incredible speed. At the trial of this railway a couple of weeks ago the car became unmanageable and flew up and down and round and round the course four or five times, beyond the control of the engineer. Finally it jumped the track, throwing its passengers out upon the ground, killing one of them and injuring several others. No accident has occurred since, however, and it is asserted that the device is perfectly safe for passengers.

Much more scientific is the Barre sliding railway. This was tried at Paris, and was a great success there during the exposition of four years ago, carrying hundreds of thousands of passengers without a single accident. I have already described the principle on which this road operates, but it will do no harm to speak of it again. The cars have no wheels, but are provided with shoes which fit over the rails. The rails are pipes, through which water is forced under high pressure. Apertures in the tops of the pipes are automatically opened by the shoes of the cars, and the water issues forth, only to be confined under the shoes, which take the place of wheels. The result is that a thin film of water is formed all along, and on this film the train floats without jar, friction or noise. Propelling power is also applied hydraulically. Streams of water issue from the pipes and strike wings put on the cars for that purpose, thus giving motion to the vehicles and sending them along at a very rapid rate.

The ice railway is not very long, only some five or six hundred feet, but it is well patronized, especially by young people who enjoy its novel sensation of pitching down sharp hills and jumping at a rate sure to produce chills in the region of the spinal column and to cause screams to issue from the mouths of the feminine passengers. The sliding or hydraulic railway is much longer. It extends nearly the whole length of the plaisance, a distance of about one mile. Here, too, the passengers are numerous, and many of the riders are thoughtful men who wonder why the system cannot be successfully applied to transit in large cities. Absence of noise, of dust, of cinders and of particles of abraded metal falling down upon the people in the streets below would seem to recommend the plan for elevated railways. The speed produced is very great, running often as high as 100 miles in an hour. But there may be difficulties of economy of power, or of freezing of the water in the pipes or films, that would render the system unavailable for commercial use in this climate.

At any rate, these and other novel methods of transportation to be found at the world's fair form a most interesting and instructive exhibit.

Summer School at the Fair.

Professor Hiram A. Gooch, having triumphed in his pet scheme to have established a summer school for the practical study of the exposition will open the same for instruction in pavilion A of the Administration building, in the room formerly devoted to the use of the National commission. Professor Gooch has been connected with the Chicago university and is regarded as a thoroughly competent man. He will be assisted by a corps of competent teachers. The school will consist of a series of daily lectures, which will be continued during the exposition season.

The lectures will begin each morning at 9 and after an hour's talk the pupils will be taken for an observation of the subjects discussed. The entire course will include sixteen departments, which will be taken up and studied in the following order: Electricity, fine arts, liberal arts, ethnology and historical archaeology, government exhibits, woman's work, agriculture, horticulture, live stock, fisheries, mining and metallury, machinery, transportation, manufactures, isolated and collective exhibits, manners and customs of Midway plaisance.

A week will be devoted to each department and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible while allowing thorough and systematic study.

THE MODERN INVALID

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with other luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

If the Woman's Congress would be called blessed for all future time let it take a shy at reducing the big theatre hat before it adjourns.

PHYSICIANS PUZZLED.

Many persons are unable to sleep on their left side. The cause has long been a puzzle to physicians. Metropolitan papers speak with great interest of Dr. Franklin Miles, the eminent Indiana, who has proven that this habit arises from a diseased heart. He has examined and kept on record thousands of cases. His New Heart Cure, a wonderful remedy, sold at Baker & Hall's. Thousands testify to its value as a cure for Heart Diseases. Mrs. Chas. Benoy, Loveland, Colo., says its effects on her were marvelous. Elegant Book on heart disease free.

"It is with much gratitude that I tell of the wonderful help received from Hood's Sarsaparilla. For several years I have been a very great sufferer with rheumatism. G. A. R. NOTICE!

We take this opportunity of informing our subscribers that the new Commissioner of Pensions has been appointed. He is an old soldier, and we believe that soldiers and their heirs will receive justice at his hands. We do not anticipate that there will be any radical changes in the administration of pension affairs under the new regime.

We would advise, however, that U. S. soldiers sailors, and their heirs, take steps to make application at once, if they have not already done so, in order to secure the benefit of the early filing of their claims in case there should be any future pension legislation. Such legislation is seldom retroactive. Therefore it is of great importance that applications be filed in the Department at the earliest possible date.

If U. S. Soldiers, Sailors, or their Widows, Children, or Parents desire information in regard to pension matters, they should write to The Press Claims Company, at Washington, D. C. and they will prepare and send the necessary application, if they find them entitled under the numerous laws enacted for their benefit.

THE BIG FERRIS WHEEL

It Is the Chief Sensation of the World's Fair.

INVENTOR DECLARED A GENIUS.

When He First Broached His Plans to the Directors of the World's Fair They Thought He Was Crazy—A Description of the Wheel as It Stands in Midway Plaisance.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 28.—[Special.]—There is nothing in the World's Columbian exposition that compares in genuine novelty and sensationalism with the great vertical wheel which stands in the very center of Midway plaisance. In these letters I long ago predicted that this giant structure would be the chief sensation of the World's fair, just as the Eiffel tower was the chief sensation of the Paris exposition, and my prediction has been verified. Though the wheel has been in operation to the public but a few days, vast crowds of people constantly surround it watching its movements, and thousands more pay their half dollar apiece for the privilege of going around upon it.

Considered from the engineering standpoint as well as from that of popular interest this is a greater marvel than the Eiffel tower, which earned a great reputation for its builder and a small fortune for its owners. Whereas the Eiffel tower was simply a bridge a thousand feet long erected upon a strong foundation and placed on end, a simple construction like a couple of Chicago's tall steel buildings stood one upon the other and resting upon a tall foundation of sufficient strength to hold them, the vertical wheel is a bridge 825 feet long, 80 feet wide and constructed of steel, twisted into a circle and hung upon an axle round which it revolves by means of the force given it by powerful steam engines. The Eiffel tower involved no new engineering principle, and when finished was a thing dead and lifeless. The wheel, on the other hand, has movement, grace, the indescribable charm possessed by a vast body in action.

What the genesis of the vertical wheel was in the brain of its inventor is an interesting thought. Undoubtedly it had its origin in the horizontal merry-go-round, and that started in the whirligig which country boys used to make with a post and a plank set across the top of it, pinioned at its middle. From the whirligig to the flying horses or merry-go-round was but a step. The merry-go-round has had its greatest development at the sea shore resorts of Coney island and Atlantic city. At the latter place the owner of the merry-go-round owns also a good share of the town. The nimble nickels flowing into his coffers in an uninterrupted stream all summer long have enabled him to buy no end of corner lots and erect brick blocks thereon.

Some one saw that the horizontal wheel was coining money and concluded to go it one better by building a vertical wheel. There are vertical wheels at the sea shore, and some of their kind have been brought to the World's fair and may be seen outside the fair gates taking passengers round at the old rate of a nickel a ride. These small vertical wheels must have been the suggestion to Ferris, the bridge builder and engineer. He said he would build a wheel that would astonish the world, and by the side of the little wheels of the sea shore be as the ocean itself to a mill pond.

He prepared his plans and came to Chicago to ask permission to erect his wheel within the World's fair grounds. At first the fair directors only laughed at him. They thought he was crazy, that he was a crank. Then they granted him a concession, but without any thought that he would ever build his wheel. After a time they concluded that it was not wise to bother themselves further with such a visionary individual, and they cancelled the concession. They were not going to have a wild-eyed man with wheels in his head lumbering up the center of the plaisance with his contraptions. But Ferris, confident of success and backed by ample capital, stuck to the scheme and induced the directors, after a time, to again reconsider their action and again permit him to go ahead. This is the brief history of the struggle this genius had to secure recognition even from such progressive and wide-awake men as the directors of the World's fair. Such has been the history of genius ever.

It is almost impossible either by picture or description in words to give you an idea of what this wheel is like. A mere statement of its dimensions, 250 feet in diameter, 825 feet in circumference, 80 feet broad and weight more than 4,000 tons, does not mean much to the average mind. It may help the reader to understand what the structure is like if I say that the highest point of the wheel is as far from the ground as the top of one ten-story building would be if it were put on the roof of another building of equal hight.

When you look at this wheel as it stands on the plaisance you are struck by the resemblance it bears to some mighty bicycle. It has the same sort of a hub, the same rods and struts running therefrom to the periphery, the same light airiness of model. In truth, it seems too light. One fears the slender rods which must support the whole enormous weight are too puny to fulfill their office. One cannot avoid the thought of what would happen if a high wind should come sweeping across the prairie and attack this structure broadside. Would the thin rods be sufficient to sustain not only the enormous weight of the structure and that of the 2,000 passengers who might chance to be in the cars, but the pressure of the wind as well? Engineer Ferris says the wheel is strong enough to do all this. Other engineers, some of them men of eminence in their profession, say the same thing. Therefore the public seems content to take it for granted that the wheel is not only the greatest novelty of the age, but that riding upon it is as safe as riding over a bridge that is placed horizontally on masonry piers.

There are thirty-six cars on the wheel. Each is 27 feet long, 9 feet high and 13 feet broad. It is like an enormous bird cage. Human beings are to be the inhabitants. The doors are closed when the passengers are within, and locked. The windows are covered with a strong wire netting. There is a conductor to each car to look after the comfort of passengers. No crank will have an opportunity to commit suicide from this wheel, no hysterical woman shall jump from a window. From platforms built on the ground six cars are loaded at one time. Each car will seat, on revolving chairs, forty passengers. Therefore the thirty-six cars will seat 1,440 passengers. The entire wheel has a capacity of 2,000 persons.

As soon as the first six cars are loaded the man in charge gives the signal and the steam is turned into the cylinders of the thousand horse-power engine which moves the vast machine. Slowly, with just enough trembling and oscillating to make the nerves of passengers quiver, the wheel revolves far enough to bring six more cars to the loading platforms. Thus the loading goes on, six cars at a time; and thus, also, the passengers make their ascent and their acquaintance with the mysteries of the wheel on the installment plan, by slow degrees. You will see that in the process of taking on passengers (providing there are people enough to fill all the cars, as there generally are) the wheel must make one entire revolution. By this time the occupants of the coaches have become somewhat accustomed to their novel situation. They have ceased to think of possible danger and are occupied with the beauty of the panorama which lies far below them.

Now comes the most interesting feature of the trip. The wheel is set in motion at a more rapid pace, though still not very fast, and is not stopped until a complete revolution has been made. It is an indescribable sensation, that of revolving through such a vast orbit in a bird cage, that of swinging in a circle far out over the plaisance in one direction, then turning in the other direction, and still higher, and finally beginning the descent from such a great hight. People wonder what would happen if the pinions which hold the cars through their roofs should break, or refuse to revolve. They wonder how they would get down if the machinery should break and the engineer be unable to further revolve the wheel, thus leaving them dangling in mid air. While they are thinking of these things the movement ceases, then starts up again, and finally it becomes their turn to step out on the wooden platform and down again to mother earth.

I have no desire to advertise the wheel when I tell you a trip upon it is worth taking. You cannot advertise the wheel, anyway, any more than you can advertise the fair, or the Atlantic ocean. They are all too big. They are their own advertisement. The novel sensation, the opportunity to study a great engineering work, the beauty of the scene presented from the great altitude, all combine to make the trip on this structure fully worth the time and the cost.

As yet there is not the slightest reason to fear the safety of the machine. The steel towers which support the vast bicycle wheel are bedded and bolted into thirty feet of concrete. They are calculated to support five times the weight and the wind pressure produced by a tornado of a hundred and fifty miles an hour. Motion is imparted to the mass by means of huge cogs in which a link belt fits. If anything should break and it be desirable to stop the machinery there is a powerful brake operated by compressed air. The axle which runs from the top of one tower to the other, 140 feet in the air, is the greatest steel forging ever made, being 32 inches in diameter and 45 feet long, weighing fifty-six tons. How Ferris ever got it up there is a mystery to me, but he did it. The cars are so attached to the wheel, it is said, that it is impossible for one of them to fall, and equally impossible for them to fail to turn so as to preserve the center of gravity.

What is the principle, the chief principle, on which the wheel is constructed? It is that of a bicycle wheel, as I have said, except that this wheel does not rest upon the surface but depends from the steel axle. The lower half of the wheel simply hangs from the mighty axle, and this lower half supports the upper half by means of the steel framework of its two rims. That is the whole thing in a nut shell. The wheel, though apparently rigid in its construction, has just enough elasticity to make this method of support possible, and yet not enough elasticity to produce any appreciable trembling or slipping effect.

Now the World's fair directors are glad they changed their minds and decided to recognize this genius. Not only have they thereby secured the greatest sensation of the fair, but without a dollar of outlay on their part have made certain of an enormous revenue. The exposition gets one-half the earnings of the wheel, and it is estimated the total receipts will average something like $10,000 a day during the remainder of the summer. The cost of the wheel, complete, was about $350,000. Engineer Ferris is likely to reap a rich reward for his boldness and enterprise.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes.

☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermoter. Where one goes others follow, and we "Take the Country." Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 6th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in futile imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO. 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

L. M. WALDRON, Agent, Tecumseh.

GALVANIZED it is not enough to make portions of a wheel of galvanized metal. That leaves exposed edges and bolt holes to rust. The Steel Aermotor is galvanized after being completed; thus absolutely protected from rust and decay.

Crossing the Threshold.

"FOR VALUE RECEIVED, WE PROMISE TO PAY."

The Commencement Exercises of the Tecumseh High School, Held Last Thursday Evening at the Opera House.

The graduating class of the High School for 1893 consisted of eight members, six young ladies and two young gentlemen. Though not as large as some previous classes, it made up in quality what it lacked in quantity and the entire program of exercises presented on graduation night was one of superior merit. Everything conspired to make the exercises interesting and successful. The weather was perfect, a typical June day, bright and balmy and yet not too sultry. The willing hands of the Juniors and others had transformed the opera house rostrum into a bower of beauty. The parlor scene was set in the rear. Banks of potted plants and flowers were arranged at either end of the stage. The front of the stage and also the front of the gallery were trimmed with festoons of white and yellow bunting, representing the class colors. The class motto, "For value received we promise to pay," was wrought in large gold letters on a white scroll, which was suspended across the stage near the top of the drop curtain. Behind it was a heavy screen of asparagus branches, forming a dark green background, which brought out the motto to fine advantage. The hall was lighted with two arc lights in addition to the usual gas lights. Eight small tables were arranged in front of the stage, one for each graduate, which were literally smothered beneath bouquets and valuable gifts and offerings for the members of the class. The house was filled to repletion, but it was not overcrowded, and the interest was kept up without faltering from the initial chorus to the benediction. The essays were indicative of thorough scholarship and careful training and the musical interludes were of superior merit, adding very much to the general tone of the exercises.

Promptly at eight o'clock Prof. Kellogg called the assemblage to order, the class filed upon the stage and sang a chorus, and the program was then announced in the following order:

Invocation—Rev. James Gorton.

Inst. Solo, Valse, Raff—Miss Mary Mills.

Salutatory—Linda Hall.

Oration, Hawaiian Islands—Edward McClure.

Music—"My Lover Will Come To-day," DeKoven—Miss Annie Agnes Woodward.

Essay, The Benefits of Foreign Immigration—Bertha Smeltzer.

Essay, "The Evils of Foreign Immigration—Cora Payne.

Cornet Solo. "The Warrior's Dream," D. S. McCosh—Mr. George Knapp.

Essay, Chances of the American Girl—Mary Eaton.

Essay, University Extension—Edith Ingersoll.

College Songs—Chorus by twenty boys.

Essay, Independence of American Literature—Julia Wood.

Valedictory, Higher Education—Walter Burnett.

Music, "For All Eternity," Mascheroni—Prof. Jarvis of Detroit and Miss Annie Agnes Woodward.

Presentation of Diplomas—Dr. L. G. North.

Class Song.

Benediction—Rev. J. P. Varner.

The instrumental solo by Miss Mary Mills was finely rendered and was something of a surprise to those who for the first time witnessed her proficiency. The solo by Miss Agnes Woodward was sung with her usual grace and melody. The cornet solo by Mr. Geo. Knapp was a fine selection, well rendered, Miss Jennie Root accompanying on the piano. The duet by Prof. Jarvis and Miss Woodward took the audience by storm and the former responded to a hearty encore with a beautiful vocal solo. Prof. Jarvis is the teacher o' whom Miss Woodward has been taking vocal lessons in Detroit. A chorus of twenty boys from the schools, under the direction of Miss Grayson, gave a sample of College songs which was awarded a lively encore, and the boys responded with another sample of the same kind. The jovial, rattling character of college vocal music always takes the prize with a general audience. Dr. North's remarks, in presenting the diplomas, were exceedingly appropriate. His fatherly admonition to the graduates, if heeded as it should be, will bring forth good fruit. The class song, sung by the class itself, was a fitting conclusion to a superior program. One marked peculiarity of the class is the fact that they are all good singers, and when we say that they all averaged high in scholarly attainments we indulge in no flattery whatever. The audience retired after the benediction, highly delighted with the evening's entertainment, feeling that a better Commencement program has never been given in Tecumseh and wishing success and prosperity to the class of ninety-three. A lack of space alone prevents our publishing the essays entire, for they were well worthy of that mark of respect, but an abstract of each is appended, which will disclose their style and character.

Salutatory.

BY LINDA E. HALL.

Kind friends of the class of '93, mine is the pleasant duty of extending to you a most cordial welcome. The time has now come for the class of '93 to sever its connection with the Tecumseh High School and the associations so dear to us. Tecumseh is fortunate in its public sentiment concerning not only the primary schools but the High School as well. Some are prone to think lightly of the High School, that its advantages are confined to the few and that 'tis a burden grievous to be borne by the tax payers, that schooling higher than the eighth grade should be carried on by private enterprise. The barriers which have arisen between the higher and lower classes of society are caused not so much from monetary conditions as from a difference of taste between the educated and the uneducated. With the existing system of public education, the youth in moderate circumstances of self made men among the brightest minds of our country. To him the High School is a constant reminder that he can claim the place his ambition seeks, by proper effort. If in after years he looks back with regret upon lost opportunities he has only himself to blame. Pestalozzi says: "The principal end of elementary education is to cultivate the faculties, to exercise them, to strengthen them and finally to polish them." But we need not look to theory alone in this matter. We have only to study the career of those who have gone from our own High School, those of whom Tecumseh may well be proud. In this high school was laid the moral and intellectual foundation upon which they have built. Its value to them cannot be measured by a monetary standard. Cannot as much be expected in all future time?

The Hawaiian Islands.

By Edward S. McClure.

But little over a century ago a group of islands was discovered in the Pacific ocean by Capt. Cook, an English navigator. The discovery did not attract any attention at that time beyond the fact that upon one of these islands the unfortunate discoverer lost his life. Soon after this time Kamehameha, chief of the island of Hawaii, acquired a small fleet of trading vessels, made himself master of the adjacent islands, and founded a monarchy. He encouraged trade with foreigners, which greatly increased his revenue and consolidated his power. His son, who succeeded to the throne in 1819, abolished idolatry and admitted Christian missionaries. Since then the progress of the islands has been rapid. Their independence was guaranteed by the United States, England and France in 1844. In 1874 Kalakaua became king, and during his reign he was compelled to sign a new constitution which restricted his power and gave greater privileges to foreigners. The native population has continued to decrease. In January, 1893, Queen Liliuokalani attempted to re-establish absolutism. The Cabinet refused to accede to this backward step, a provisional government was formed, and the queen was driven from power. The Reciprocity treaty of 1875 allowed sugar to come into this country free, which amounted to a large bonus on their sugar and diverted ninety-one per cent of their trade to the United States. Honolulu is their chief city. It is supplied with a water system from a mountain reservoir, is lighted by electricity, has electric cars and thirteen hundred telephones. It is located on the direct route between San Francisco and Australia. Its commercial importance is assured and its value to the United States is fully recognized. The civilized part of the population say to us: "We Americans are in danger of being handed over to barbarism. If we are, you will suffer as well as we." Does not this nation owe a duty of help and protection to a weak community, struggling up from heathenism to Christianity?

Benefits of Foreign Immigration.

BY BERTHA F. SMELTZER.

I have not taken up this subject expecting to bring out any new facts or to advance any new theories upon it. It might seem presumptions for me to discuss the question at all had not our last State legislature left the political door slightly ajar, that women might step in to participate in municipal elections. Hence I may be pardoned for venturing upon a discussion of this theme. Since the first settlement at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607, the tide of immigration has constantly been flowing westward to our shores until the number arriving here between 1880 and 1890 far exceeded that of any previous decade. From the beginning of our constitutional history this question has been discussed with earnestness by the masses of the people and by statesmen and scholars as well. It is estimated that the foreign-born population of the United States will number ten millions, at least one-fifth of whom are wage-workers. At only one dollar a day this class adds six hundred million dollars a year to the wealth of the country. All of our great public works have been carried on by this means. The miners of England, Wales and Hungary bring the products of our mines to the surface, the sturdy immigrants of Norway and Sweden bring the products of our forests to market, the German and Irish reclaim the many acres of land once considered worthless. Without the aid of these immigrants we could not boast of our rapid progress in material development, resources and wealth. The great demand for and scarcity of domestic help is another reason for encouraging immigration. Even the farmers about Tecumseh are in need of help. As long as the ranks of American workers fail to supply the demand why should we reject these willing foreign workers? Again, some of the foreign-born population are among our most skilled and talented citizens. We should remember that Alexander Hamilton, Carl Schurz, James Smithson, Louis Agassiz and a host of others were of foreign birth and that we owe them a debt of gratitude which money cannot repay.

Evils of Foreign Immigration.

BY CORA M. PAYNE.

When I chose this subject I had no thought of presenting any new arguments upon it, much less to give any solution of the problem, but simply to present the question in the light in which it appears to me. I have found it a deeply interesting question as well as a serious one. It cannot be denied that past immigration has been of great benefit to this country. It was by the aid of foreigners alone that the country was settled originally. It may seem strange that what has been such a benefit could become an injury, yet such is the fact. Look at the change that has taken place in the character of our immigration. Fifty years ago the voyage was a long and perilous one. None but thrifty, sturdy men and women would brave the journey, and they were a great benefit to the country upon their arrival here. Now every inducement is held out to the paupers and criminals of Europe to immigrate here and the trip is so easy that the weakest and most vicious are the readiest to come. It is from these classes that most of our labor troubles arise. The English, Irish, German and Scandinavian immigration is decreasing, while the influx of Russians, Bohemians and Italians is rapidly increasing. These latter are ignorant and degraded, many of them cannot read or write, and their introduction is fast corrupting American improvements would be retarded if immigration was stopped, for much of our unskilled labor is done by these foreigners. But this very thing is becoming a national evil. Are not Americans acquiring a sentiment of disdain for honest labor? As a result are not many Americans resorting to dishonest means of gaining a livelihood? When any nation begins to look upon honest toil with disdain there is cause for alarm. There are many blessings in disguise and philsophers say that labor is one of them. Statistics show that it is the foreign element largely which is filling our almshouses and prisons. The almighty dollar should not decide this issue. Would not any advantage be dearly bought at the cost of lowering the standard of American citizenship?

Chances of the American Girl.

BY A. MARY EATON.

One of the most important features of the World's Fair was the Woman's Congress held there a few weeks ago. Representative women were present from all parts of the civilized globe. No such congress was ever attempted before and its very occurrence is an evidence of the advanced position woman now holds. The many subjects so ably discussed prove that woman has been thinking. People are surprised at the present position of woman and at the work she has been accomplishing. The educational advance of woman has been very marked during the past century. One hundred years ago she had few advantages. Now she succeeds, not only in the ordinary avocations of woman, such as teaching, clerking, etc., but also in more important lines of work. We see her in the editorial chair, managing papers and magazines. As authors we have our Harriet Beecher Stowe, Mrs. Browning and Louisa M. Alcott.

Women have also been successful as physicians and dentists. They are also successful as florists and caterers and some have proven their ability in fruit culture. Women are also inventors, and one enterprising woman now owns twenty-one patents, seven of them her invention. Edison prefers women machinists to make the delicate parts of his electrical inventions. He says they have more sense in one minute than most men have in their whole lives and he proves his faith by keeping two hundred women in his employ. There are many women farmers, stockraisers, homesteaders, horticulturists and bee keepers. The American girl of to-day, by proper out door exercise, can boast of better health than her grandmother could. This age is surely one of progress. Both men and women are changing. One generation ago the door of woman's opportunity was only slightly ajar, but the present day is opening up grand possibilities for women. But she will never be satisfied with less rights and privileges than are accorded to her brother. She demands and will obtain the ballot.

University Extension.

BY EDITH L. INGERSOLL.

What is known as University Extension is a comparatively new movement, but in the short time that has elapsed since its inception it has proven itself to be practical and has met with remarkable success. As the term indicates, it aims to bring within reach of the people the culture offered by our higher institutions of learning. These are the details of the plan. The people in any town who wish to avail themselves of its benefits decide on what course of study they wish to pursue, and a lecturer is sent to them from the nearest college engaged in the work. The course consists of twelve lectures delivered weekly. The lecture lasts one hour and at its close an informal session of another hour is held, in which the subject is discussed at length to the members of the enrolled class. These class sessions are considered a very important feature of the work. A syllabus of the lecture containing questions and references for home study is given to each member of the class. This system had its origin at Oxford, England, about twenty years ago. The first course met with popular favor at once, and since then the growth of interest has been rapid and continuous. During the season of 1891-92 over eighty thousand students followed these courses. About three years ago the system was introduced into America and it has met with the most flattering results. One hundred and twenty are now engaged in this work representing nineteen different states. What is an educated person? What is the meaning of the word educate? It is derived from the Latin "educo" which means to draw out. To educate a person then does not mean simply to cram knowledge into him, but to bring out the talent already within him. This is true education, that a man may be master of himself. Our common schools lay the foundation for such an education. The first eight years deal only with the elementary branches. In the High School the student is introduced to the sciences and the languages, but it is a mere introduction. Hence we can truly say that to-night is not the finishing but only the commencement of our education. To carry on this educational work our colleges and universities were founded. Comparatively few however are able to avail themselves of these advantages. The majority cannot; and it is just this latter class that University Extension is designed to reach. It makes the masses see and realize that they need a higher education, and if it does no more than this, to create among our people a longing for higher and better things, then truly is University Extension a success.

Independence of American Literature.

BY JULIA M. WOOD.

There is but one thing more interesting than the intellectual history of a man and that is the intellectual history of a nation. The year 1607 may be called the date of the birth of American literature, for the English colonists began making literature as soon as they arrived on our soil. The first book written in America was a series of letters by that remarkable man, Capt. John Smith. In an isolated country of growth and quality a native genius soon discovers his special gift and proper field. There are few Americans who are not instantly recognized abroad as being very different from Englishmen, not only in feature and speech but in their sentiments, thoughts and feelings. They are distinctly American. As the states began to unite a national feeling grew up and then came our love of freedom, adventurous habit of experimenting and sense of [illegible] American stand erect and believe himself the peer of any man. In taking even the most cursory view of our literature one is impressed with the share woman has had in its production. Until recently, literature as a profession has hardly existed in America. Cooper's Spy was the first really American novel. Many others by various authors soon followed. Within the last quarter of a century the popular school of American humor has reached its culmination. These humorous authors have been so different in form and expression from any European humor that they are a unique addition to the humorous literature of the world. There is a constant decrease in the number of English books reprinted in America. For nearly one hundred years the American school-boy has been supplied with books suited to American tastes and breathing American ideas. The number of American books reprinted abroad is constantly increasing. Concerning the future of our literature, can we not expect as grand a development for it as our country in her business relations has enjoyed?

Valedictory—Higher Education.

BY WALTER E. BURNETT.

Friends and classmates! With the close of another school year we are assembled to greet each other and to repeat the parting words which every Commencement exercise necessitates. Our hearts and interests will still remain with each other and while our paths, which have so long run parallel, will now diverge, we trust that pleasant memories will still remain. While one may prosper without a higher education we must believe that such an education fits one to more successfully solve the problems of life. Many of our successful business men started as poor boys, without education, but with good habits and perseverance. Yet it is an admitted fact that the advantages of a college or university course is an important factor of success. The supreme object of education is the development of the mind. We may ask: Is the broad or specific education the one of highest worth? Why not educate a man along the line on which he is to move? Then comes the more important question: Can a man acquire a good specific education without first obtaining a fairly good general education? One young man would become an eye specialist. He gives his whole attention to the study of the eye. Is it not necessary that he should understand the other parts of anatomy—that he should be a good general physician? Take the case of the farmer. Until recently farming was thought to require no especial preparation and little ability save to do hard work. But even here science offers suggestions which increase the returns of labor and make them more certain. Botanists have learned that the humble bee, instead of being the enemy of every boy, is the fertilizer of every clover field. To promote the knowledge necessary to successful farming agricultural colleges are founded and receive liberal aid from Congress and the states. Then to whom should this higher education be given? The daughters and sons alike. May we—the class of '93—all understand the import of our motto—"For value received, we promise to pay." And as we part to-night, and sever the old associations which time has endeared to us, may pleasant memories of the past be as a beacon light on the voyage of life before us.

The Arena for July.

The fiction in the July Arena is a very notable feature. "The Confessions of a Suicide," by the well-known author and critic, Coulson Karnahan, is one of the most weird, and in a peculiar way powerful, creation of recent years. Those looking for something out of the ordinary should peruse this extraordinary paper. "The Charities of Dives" is entirely different, and in it Mr. Carman in a most interesting way deals some telling blows against present day injustice. "Who Broke Up De Meeting," by Miss Will Allen Dromgoole, lightens the number, it being a charmingly humorous sketch in negro dialect. There are also in this issue many strong papers on political, social, religious and literary subjects, beside the first instalment of the verdict of eminent jurors in the Bacon Shakespeare trial. Among those who render opinions in this case in the July Arena are the Marquis of Lorne and Henry George.

Some Interesting Information Regarding the Handsome Michigan State Building at Jackson Park.

ITS OBJECTS EXPLAINED.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 26.—Michigan people who visit the world's fair find on the grounds a state building which is large enough to hold three regiments, one to each floor. All the floors, except for the space given to stuffed animals and state education, are devoted to the free use of visitors.

Visitors will find that Michigan's big house is essentially a home or sort of lounging headquarters. The broad veranda which runs around the building is profusely supplied with chairs and benches. In the large Muskegon and Saginaw reception rooms of the first floor are easy chairs and leather sofas. On the second floor the chairs are just being put into the assembly-room. On the third floor are rooms where several hundred people may eat lunch at one time. The custodian says that the building can accommodate 3,000 people comfortably in one day.

It is estimated that up to date 30,000 Michigan people have visited the building and registered. This represents about the total attendance from Michigan at the centennial in 1876. The record shows that 31,000 people from Michigan went to Philadelphia. It is expected that in the month of July alone the number of visitors from Michigan will be far above 31,000. The rush has not fairly begun. Very few of the country people have begun to arrive. They are said to be waiting for reduced rates on the railroads. Most of those who have registered up to date came from Detroit, Kalamazoo, Niles, St. Joe, Muskegon, Saginaw or other good-sized towns. There has also been a liberal sprinkling from the upper peninsula.

No meals are served at the state building. Cigars are sold and there is a stand where all the principal daily papers of the state may be procured. For several weeks the reading room has been stocked with nearly all the county papers, so that the people from any part of the Wolverine state will be apt to find their home paper without much trouble. The building has toilet rooms and a check room for parcels.

Every afternoon at 2 o'clock a piano recital is given in the Muskegon room on the first floor of the building. A concert is also given every Wednesday at 2 o'clock in the assembly-room on the second floor. All the entertainment will be provided by Michigan talent. Every resident or native of Michigan who visits the building is expected to put his name on the big register in the main rotunda. September 13 and 14 have been set apart as Michigan days, and it is believed they will mark the largest attendance from that state.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Commencement Exercises at Ann Arbor—Graduates Number 749.

ANN ARBOR, June 26.—This has been one of the most successful years in the history of the University of Michigan, and this week will see its brilliant close. Never before have the senior classes of the various departments been as large as during the present year, and Thursday 749 graduates will receive their diplomas. The largest class is that of the law department, numbering 350, many of whom have been admitted to the bar of this (Washtenaw) county and of the supreme court of Michigan. Next in number comes the literary class, with 260 graduates, followed by the medical class of both schools, with sixty-five members. Other departments swell the grand total to 749.

The opening exercises of the commencement week were held in University hall. President Angell delivered the baccalaureate address. The choral union and members of the musical faculty furnished the music. The address was a discourse on the lessons to be learned from the life of St. Paul, applying each of the characteristics of the apostle as an example for imitation by the students.

A Big Sawmill Burned.

FAIL TO DO THEIR DUTY.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty toward themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. H. Herbeck, of Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from Nervous Prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, who tried all other remedies, declares that after three week's use of Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists. Trial bottle free.

When money is "tight" it proves that it is abundantly able to take care of itself.

THE LADIES.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use the California liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co., printed near the bottom of the package.

THE ART PRESERVATIVE

Interesting Exhibition for the World's Fair Visitor

TO BE SEEN IN MACHINERY HALL.

Printing Presses Which Print and Fold 48,000 Four-Page Papers Per Hour—The Daily Columbian, the Composite Paper, Printed at the Fair Grounds—An Old Time Relic—Printing Types.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 28.— [Special.]—Machinery is always attractive to the popular eye, but machinery that is in motion, and is performing the function which it was intended to perform, is doubly so. Therefore one need not be surprised to find in what the exposition managers call the palace of Mechanical Arts, but which in common parlance is Machinery hall, vast crowds of visitors from early morn till late at night. The people cannot be blamed for flocking hither. I risk the assertion that nowhere, at any time, did any one ever see a display of machinery equal to that to be found in this vast building, which is one of the most beautiful and impressive structures on the grounds. It is like some modernized and industrial cathedral of Milan, and the work which goes on under its roof is the highest type of the religion of utility. All the great engines and machines are interesting, but particularly so those which are set to work, those which turn out the goods and the wares just as they do in the great machine shops of the nations which sent them here.

If we take a run through the big hall looking for machinery that is at work we shall first of all, very properly, come in contact with the art preservative of all arts, the printing machines. There is something very fascinating about the array of web perfecting presses here. In all there are a dozen of them, I think, representing all leading American makers. When we say the American makers are represented that is as good as saying that the greatest presses of all the world are here; for ingenious as our friends across the sea are in many manufacturing lines, this country has always taken the lead in printing machinery, and probably always will. All the important improvements in this class of machines during the last fifty years—and in that time the art of newspaper printing has been revolutionized—had their origin in this country.

One of the most perfect machines in the world is a fast printing press. It is not very large, nor yet so very complicated, considering what it does, but it performs a wonderful lot of work. The head pressman sees that the plates are properly attached to the fast-flying cylinders, that the tapes are in order and everything ready, and then he moves a lever. Behold the result. Almost without noise, without bustle or confusion, without the touch of human hands, 48,000 completed four-page papers roll out in an hour, printed, folded, perfect. It is not necessary for me to describe the process to you. It is enough to say the paper is fed from a roll which contains a sheet about two miles long, and that the stereotyped plates are attached to cylinders which have a very rapid rotary motion.

These presses are used for the actual printing of newspapers. The Daily Columbian is one of the papers printed here, and it is also one of the most curious papers of the world. It is a composite paper, being made up of three pages of matter prepared by the managers of the exposition, and is to that extent an official journal. The remaining five pages are the first pages of the five English morning papers of Chicago of that day. This is done by each of the papers sending down to the exposition a cast of the stereotype page, while the three pages of the Columbian itself are put in type in one of the newspaper offices and sent here in the same way. So that by purchasing a copy of the Daily Columbian visitors get not only the official announcements of the day, but the first pages of all the great daily morning papers of Chicago. An odd looking newspaper it makes, sure enough, and almost any day one may read the same item of news written up in five different ways and with widely differing statements of fact. Some papers contradict one day what they printed the day before, but here is a paper which often contradicts on its sixth page what it says on its seventh, and reaffirms the original statement on its eighth. The afternoon papers of Chicago, five in number, all print editions in Machinery hall, each having its own press here and supplying a large corps of newsboys who at once go out selling copies to the crowds.

The whole display is creditable to American press builders and newspapers, and visitors seem never to tire watching the magic presses turning out their thousands of papers. The press exhibit is by long odds the most thorough ever made. It embraces not only newspaper presses but presses for commercial work, and some of these are new and constructed on principles but recently discovered. One press is used all the time for turning out lithograph pictures of scenes in the exposition, and these colored prints, which are really quite artistic, find ready sale. A striking contrast with one of the fast perfecting presses is afforded by the exhibit of the first press used in New Hampshire, which stands near by. It is an old wooden contrivance, and was built by Thomas Draper in Boston in 1742. That was 150 years ago, and you couldn't expect much of a press built in those days. The old-timer is still able to turn out a fair quality of work, and a pressman stands by its side all day, inking the form on its ancient bed with a hand-roller and striking off impressions of a little circular as fast as he is able. The circular reads as follows:

> By the > Campbell Printing Prefs & Mfg. Co.
> World's Fair, Chicago, June 23, 1893.
> —o—
> Once I waf young and fpry as any of my name,
> Now I am old and flow, but I get there juft the fame.

As fast as he takes these sheets from the press he hands them out to the curious people who surround the relic of printing in the old days, and there are always about five times as many outstretched hands as there are circulars to put into them.

The people are fascinated by the printing art. To some of them it is something almost uncanny. At any rate, it is mysterious. I should judge from watching the crowds that not one person in ten on an average has ever seen a press at work, and fewer still have ever had printing types in their hands. Here are not only presses of a hundred kinds, but type-making machinery that is very curious. A little machine, no larger than a sewing machine, rattles away at a steady pace, and every rattle throws off a perfect, or nearly perfect, type. It melts the metal, casts it, and turns it over to the finishers. Girls sit at tables before glittering piles of these little jewels which rule the world and with incredible dexterity arrange them in long lines, the printing ends upward and the nicks outward. These long lines are then taken to the expert finisher, who dresses them down in lathes and every type is examined under a microscope to see if it is perfect enough to be permitted to go to some newspaper office to print the day's intelligence for your reading and mine.

Type setting machines are a product of the past five or eight years. I remember at the Centennial exposition there was but one typesetting machine, and it was on the principle of throwing a matrix into play that should cast each letter separately. I believe that machine was not a commercial success. Now there are several successful typesetting machines. They are operated much as a typewriter is operated, by a key-board. In one cach stroke of a key makes an impression in a matrix, and when a line has been finished that line is cast in type-metal and shoved out to take its proper place in the column. In another machine holes are punched in a sheet of paper and these holes make a pattern like the pattern sheet which you see in the looms, and the sheet being run through a casting machine the letters are individually cast and dropped into their proper places.

By the use of these and other successful typesetting machines one man is able to do the work which three or four were required to do under the old plan of picking up letter after letter while standing at the case. In other words, to set the type for this letter is a big day's work for one man under the old plan; under the new he could set three or four such letters, or from six to eight columns of matter. Typesetting machines are rapidly coming into use in this country and Europe, and the International Typographical union, the highest organization of compositors, encourages their use.

Next to the printing machines I think the looms attract more attention than any other process here. There is to the layman something so mysterious, so unfathomable about a loom that he stands before it as if he were in the presence of a necromancer in steel and iron. I have watched these machines by the hour, without asking any questions, determined to study out for myself the principle on which they are constructed. I know no more about it now than I did before, and shall have to acknowledge myself beaten and seek explanation the next time I go into Machinery hall. They weave figures quite as readily as straight goods, and here you may see an Administration building towel woven before your eyes, and then buy it for 75 cents and take it home as a souvenir of the exposition. Better still, you may see a silk loom weave a beautiful handkerchief, bearing within its woop and warf a picture of the building in which you stand, a portrait of Mrs. Cleveland, Mr. Harrison or of Columbus, and they will take this to another loom and embroider your name in it, and thus make you a fitting and worthy souvenir. So fine is this art of weaving figures that in one of the silk pieces here they place both the words and music of the "Star Spangled Banner," and it is almost as perfect as if it were printed from type.

Here you may see all kinds of cloth woven, and carpets and great art squares. You may see, also, the whole process of cotton spinning, from the raw cotton in bales to the cloth or thread. One of the most wonderful machines in the whole display is the apparatus which winds the finished thread upon the spools. It is a little machine, but see what it is capable of doing. It winds exactly 200 yards of thread upon each spool—no more, no less. When it has done this it cuts the little slit which you see in the rim of every spool you buy, draws the thread therein, and then cuts the thread. Now it is ready for more world's to conquer. Dropping these eight spools it feeds itself eight empty spools, puts them in place on the spindles, fills them with thread—exactly 200 yards again—and drops them. Thus it goes on for hours without the touch of human hand.

There are so many other interesting processes here that the visitor becomes almost bewildered by the multiplicity of charms. He may see paper boxes made by machinery, may see eight ribbons woven at once, may see embroidery machines, delicate and beautiful; and may see a tailor's cutter carve out pattern pieces for men's garments from thirty thicknesses of cloth at every stroke. When you come to the exposition be sure to see the printing, the weaving, the spinning and other processes in Machinery hall.

WIPED OUT BY FIRE.

The Town of Ewing Said to Have Been Practically Destroyed.

Losses by Forest Fires Are Enormous—Many Acres of Standing Timber Totally Ruined—Much Damage to Crops.

WIDESPREAD RUIN.

MARQUETTE, June 22.—Information was received Wednesday to the effect that the hamlet of Ewing, in Chocolay township, this county, together with Kearney's sawmill, was destroyed by forest fires Sunday. The loss is about $8,000. The charcoal kilns upon which the place depended have been closed down. Nearly all the inhabitants had moved away, and the few who were left had a very narrow escape. Fire destroyed the headquarters of the Thomas Nestor estate lumbering operations at O'Brien and the large general store, warehouses and barns. The camps, with their entire contents, were in ashes. The loss exceeds $15,000. This was one of the largest lumber camps in northern Michigan. Five thousand acres of Bardonoquette homestead country, opened to settlement last November, have been burned over, and all standing pine was damaged so badly that it will have to be cut this summer to be salable at all. It is freely charged that lumbermen started the fire to compel homesteaders to sell the timber at once. Much suffering is entailed, as settlers are left utterly destitute and depend upon the slow transportation for supplies. The huckleberry crop, which forms an important source of revenue to Marquette during several weeks of the summer, will amount to little this season, as the berry plants, from Chocolay to Sand river, have been swept by fire.

FOR LIFE.

Sentence Passed Upon Frank Hayes, Aged 20, for Murder at Detroit.

DETROIT, June 26.—Frank Hayes has been declared guilty of murder and sentenced to imprisonment for life. He was taken to the state's prison Saturday night. He is not quite 20 years old.

The jury was out two hours and two jurymen voted seven times for acquittal before an agreement was reached. A more heartrending scene has never been witnessed in court than when Hayes was declared guilty. He apparently felt no emotion, but his mother and sisters, residing in Rochester, were broken down with grief.

[The crime of which Hayes was convicted is that of shooting Fred H. Kelly, a clerk in Caldwell's drug store in this city. Kelly was also under 20 years old. On the morning of November 19 last he was found dead in the cellar of the store. He had been shot in the back of the head. The murderer evidently doused Kelly at night on the plea of filling a prescription. A bogus written prescription was found at the case. Kelly had begun to put it up and had taken the lamp to go into the cellar to replenish a bottle. It is surmised that the murderer followed the clerk into the cellar and shot him there. Kelly's pockets were rifled and his overcoat and revolver were missing. Suspicion immediately settled upon Hayes. He was found at his boarding place, with his satchel packed and about to leave. In the satchel were the revolver and overcoat which belonged to the murdered boy.]

CAUSED BY A RUN.

A Bank at Greenville Decides to Close Its Doors.

GREENVILLE, June 23.—The City national bank suspended payment Thursday morning, and George B. Caldwell, bank examiner, took possession. The failure is due to a steady run on the bank, which has continued since June 1, $52,000 having been withdrawn in three weeks and the inability of the bank officers to negotiate loans, although they had gilt-edged securities. The examination up to this time shows $210,000 deposits and $312,000 assets. It is not known yet whether the bank will be able to resume or have to go into the receiver's hands. The bank was examined September 28 last and reported to be in good condition.

KILLED HIMSELF.

A Prominent and Wealthy Grand Rapids Man Commits Suicide.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 23.—John A. B. Mead, nephew of the late Maj. A. B. Watson and one of the most prominent young capitalists and business men, committed suicide Thursday morning by taking chloral. A young widow survives him. No motive for the deed is known, and there is much surprise that Mead, who inherited a large sum of money from his uncle and who had a splendid business and pleasant home, should have killed himself.

A Sudden Call.

DETROIT, June 23.—J. T. Whiting, the oldest vesselman in this city, died suddenly Thursday at noon. For many years he had been the agent here of the principal steamer lines between Buffalo and Lakes Michigan and Superior. He owned the steamers Meteor and Pewabic at the time of their collision on Lake Huron in 1862, when the Pewabic was sunk with a loss of 200 lives.

Miss Augusta Bruce left here last Friday for a short visit at Perrysburg, Ohio. From there she will go to Seattle, Washington, for a few weeks and expects to sail from San Francisco for Hawaii about the first of August.

J. C. Eddy and wife arrived here from Ida Grove, Iowa, last Wednesday night. They started immediately upon hearing of the serious illness of Crowell Eddy. Mr. Eddy's condition is about the same as it has been during the past two weeks.

A little daughter of Mr. Blakeman was quite seriously hurt last Saturday. She was walking around the base of a tombstone in the cemetery when the slab fell, striking her and breaking in two at the same time. No bones were broken but one side was terribly bruised. She was carried home and Dr. White was called. She is doing nicely now.

The Alumni exercises held at the town hall Friday evening were very pleasant. The history, by Mae Morey, was especially enjoyed. Will Eagan was unable to get here in time for the exercises so his oration will have to go over to another year. The banquet held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Clark was largely attended and proved, as all those occasions do, very enjoyable.

St. John's Day was duly observed by the Masonic fraternity by the usual decoration of graves and a festival at their hall in the evening. The program was opened by a prayer by Rev. Stone, followed by a solo, "The Bridge," by Miss Grace Stevens. Mrs. George Hard recited "How the old horse won the bet." Rev. Stone gave a ten minutes' talk and the program was closed by a solo, "Sands o Dee," by Miss Laura Clark. The usual number of good things to eat were there, the usual number of good people were present, the usual number of good things were said, the usual good-nights were exchanged and another St. John's Day was numbered with the past.

A degree of moderation was given to the extremely warm weather that prevailed last week, that was very acceptable to the six graduates of the Clinton High School who made their bow and spoke their pieces to the public last Thursday evening. The exercises were unusually pleasant, each one performing his or her allotted part with an excellence denoting much study and many anxious thoughts. The presents received by the class surpassed in number and value any ever before given here. Prof. Daniels has reason to feel extremely proud of the class he has worked with during the past three years, and they should feel very grateful to the teacher without whose patience and timely encouragement they would scarcely have reached their goal.

A Sad and Shocking Death.

We gather from the Times of Monday and Tuesday these particulars in regard to the death of Miss Bertha Burnham, of Deerfield.

Bertha Burnham, youngest daughter of E. E. Burnham, is said to be dying to-day of hydrophobia. Bertha was one of the Deerfield high school graduates on the 26th of May last, and took the Adrian college scholarship for leading her class. She is an unusually bright and lovable girl, 18 years old, possessing many accomplishments, with the gift to win the loving respect of all.

About ten weeks ago she was bitten by a pug dog, which seemed to be astray, and which she attempted to pet. The dog was not thought to be ill, but was lost sight of and has not been heard from since.

Bertha had been ill for several days but Saturday went down to her father's store, and acting as cashier paid out something more than one th usand dollars for wool, which was brought in that forenoon. But at noon she was obliged to go to bed, and has rapidly grown worse since. Her sufferings are terrible and death will be a relief.

Miss Bertha Burnham, the unfortunate young lady referred to yesterday as suffering from hydrophobia, passed away, after hours of suffering, at two o'clock on Monday afternoon.

By her modesty, accomplishments and estimable disposition, Miss Burnham had endeared herself to all, and her sad and untimely taking off has cast a feeling of gloom and sorrow over our entire community.

The three physicians called in combating the case, Drs. Yale, McDonald and Scriber, remained with their suffering charge to the last, and exhausted all the resources of professional skill, but to no purpose. The terrible and unusual affliction baffled their best efforts, although their labors ended only when the hand of death brought cessation of suffering.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and was attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends.

TO THE FARMERS OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

For the season of 1893 I wish to bring to your notice the great advantage you can derive during your harvest of hay and grain by the use of the latest improved and best harvesting machine in the world—made by Wm. Deering, of Chicago.

Here are a few reasons why you should buy a Deering:

1st—It has a jointed platform which when folded will allow the machine to pass through the same space as an ordinary buggy.

2nd—In ease of handling and lightness of draft it stands at the head.

3d—It never fails to tie, never chokes nor clogs, and uses less twine than other competing machines.

4th—It needs no expert to understand its construction. It requires no bothersome tinkering.

5th—All geared running journals are mounted in brass boxes, insuring easy running and long wearing qualities.

6th—The levers are so easily adjusted that any boy can run the machine who can drive a team.

7th—No weight on the horse's necks, as the machine is rear geared.

8th—Best material only is used in the construction of the Deering which is guaranteed by one of the oldest and best known firms existing.

Furthermore this company make their own twine and are not in the combine. Much more may be learned by calling at my warehouse and looking at the machines always on hand. Can prove their merits.

Yours truly,

C. L. Albaugh.

I ALSO SELL THIS SEASON THE

CELEBRATED MINNEAPOLIS BINDER,

This Binder, as it stands to-day, has more friends than any other three canvass binder made.

The "Minnie," with the only 40 inch drive-wheel, stands out alone against the craze for pretty machines, which has tempted makers to reduce their wheel four and even six inches in diameter, and reduce the other proportions of their binders all the way through. The farmers say to us: "The big Minnie wheel don't slip, drives strong, and runs well on all ground." We make it as firm as an island. We shape the rim to shed sand instead of spooning it up and pouring it on gears and hub when the wind blows or the machine tips. This powerful wheel runs the machine through thick and thin—particularly thick. No other compares with it for the big hustling West. While you cheerily sail your "Minnie" through perhaps a storm-tossed crop, and not a wave of trouble rolls across your peaceful breast, look at your neighbor foundering with his 34-inch-wheel pleasure binder, and don't gloat, but silently bless the "Minnie" that there is nothing small about her but noise.

PRIZES ON PATENTS.

How to Get Twenty-five Hundred Dollars For Nothing.

Would you like to make twenty-five hundred dollars? If you would, read carefully what follows and you may see a way to do it.

The Press Claims Company devotes much attention to patents. It has handled thousands of applications for inventions, but it would like to handle thousands more. There is plenty of inventive talent at large in this country needing nothing but encouragement to produce good results. That encouragement the Press Claims Company proposes to to give.

NOT SO HARD AS IT SEEMS.

A patent strikes most people as an appalling formidable thing. The idea is that an inventor must be a natural genius, like Edison or Bell; that he must devote years to delving in complicated mechanical problems and that he must spend a fortune on duplicate experiments before be can get a new device to a patentable degree of perfection. This delusion the company desires to dispel. It desires to get into the head of the public a clear comprehension of the fact that it is not the great, complex, and expensive inventions that bring the best returns to their authors, but the little, simple, cheap ones—the things that seem so absurdly trivial that the average citizen would feel somewhat ashamed of bringing them to the attention of the Patent Office.

Edison says that the profits he has received from the patents on all his marvelous inventions have not been sufficient to pay the cost of his experiments. But the man who conceived the idea of fastening a bit of rubber cord to a child's ball so that it would come back to hand when thrown, made a fortune out of his scheme. The modern sewing machine is a miracle of ingenuity—the product of the toil of hundreds of busy brains through a hundred and fifty years, but the whole brillant result rests upon the simple device of putting the eye of the needle at the point instead of at the other end.

THE LITTLE THINGS ARE MOST VALUABLE.

Comparatively few people regard themselves as inventors, but almost everybody has been struck, at one time or another, with ideas that seemed calculated to reduce some of the little frictions of life. Usually such ideas are dismissed without further thought.

"Why don't the railway company make its car windows so that they can be slid up and down without breaking the passengers' backs?" exclaims the traveler. "If I were running the road I would make them in such a way."

"What was the man that made the saucepan thinking of?" grumbles the cook. "He never had to work over a stove, or he would have known how it ought to have been fixed."

"Hang such a collar button!" growls the man who is late for breakfast. "If I were in the business I'd make buttons that wouldn't slip out, or break off, or gouge out the back of my neck."

And then the various sufferers forget about their grievances and begin to think of something else. If they would sit down at the next convenient opportunity, put their ideas about car windows, saucepans, and collar buttons into practical shape, and then apply for patents, they might find themselves as independently wealthy as the man who invented the iron umbrella ring, or the one who patented the fifteen puzzle.

A TEMPTING OFFER.

To induce people to keep track of their bright ideas and see what there is in them, the Press Claims Company has resolved to offer a prize.

To the person who submits to it the simplest and most promising invention, from a commercial point of view, the company will give twenty-five hundred dollars in cash. In addition to refunding the fees for securing the patent.

It will also advertise the invention free of charge.

This offer is subject to the following conditions:

Every competitor must obtain a patent for his invention through the company. He must first apply for a preliminary search, the cost of which will be five dollars. Should this search show his invention to be unpatentable, he can withdraw without further expense. Otherwise he will be expected to complete his application and take out a patent in the regular way. The total expense, including Government and Bureau fees, will be seventy dollars. For this, whether he secures the prize or not, the inventor will have a patent that ought to be a valuable property to him. The prize will be awarded by a jury consisting of three reputable patent attorneys of Washington. Intending competitors should fill out the following blank, and forward it with their application:

_____, _____, 1893.

"I submit the within described invention in competition for the Twenty-five hundred Dollar Prize offered by the Press Claims Company.

NO BLANKS IN THIS COMPETITION.

This is a competition of rather an unusual nature. It is common to offer prizes for the best story, or picture, or architectural plan, all the competitors risking the loss of their labor and the successful one merely selling his for the amount of the prize. But the Press Claims Company's offer is something entirely different. Each person is asked merely to help himself, and the one who helps himself to the best advantage is to be rewarded for doing it. The prize is only a stimulus to do something that would be well worth doing without it. The architect whose competitive plan for a club house on a certain corner is not accepted has spent his labor on something of very little use to him. But the person who patents a simple and useful device in the Press Claims Company's competition, need not worry if he fail to secure the prize. He has a substantial result to show for his work—one that will command its value in the market at any time.

The plain man who uses any article in his daily work ought to know better how to improve it than the mechanical expert who studies it only from the theoretical point of view. Get rid of the idea that an improvement can be too simple to be worth patenting. The simpler the better. The person who best succeeds in combining simplicity and popularity will get the Press Claims Company's twenty-five hundred dollars.

The responsibility of this company may be judged from the fact that its stock is held by about three hundred of the leading newspapers of the United States.

DETROIT'S
Great Racing Carnival

The arranging of details for the great Blue Ribbon meeting of the Detroit Driving Club are fast approaching completion. Elegantly illustrated posters and window hangers, setting forth the programme and dates of the meeting ornament the bill-boards and other available places, not only in every town and city of importance throughout Michigan, but neighboring states and the provinces as well. The most cheering reports are received at the secretary's office from horsemen from Maine to California, signifying their intention to take part in the great carnival sport during the third week in July. Some of the most noted trotters and pacers on the turf will contest for the rich purses hung up by the club. For obvious reasons their names are withheld for the present, but after July 3 they will be given to the public. Nearly all of the leading stables of America will have representatives in one or more of the great events of the week. Already stable accommodations are being spoken for, and early next week there will be a gathering of horses here such as never was seen before on the grounds of the Detroit Driving Club. For the five special purses that are closed enough entries have been received to insure a large field of horses, and when these are added entries to the ten regular classes, some estimate can be found of the magnitude of the meeting that will take place July 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. Last year was a year of phenomenal performances; this season promises to be still more so. Horses that cannot beat 2:20 are no longer in it at any of the big meetings, and the 2 and 3-year-olds that cannot march to about that tune will find themselves struggling hopelessly in the rear. There is no money in sight for the youngster that cannot beat 2:25. There will be some "hot ones" in the colt stakes this year. It is the opinion of many horsemen that the 2, 3 and 4-year stakes will be among the fastest and most interesting that will be trotted or paced this season. The Detroit Driving Club will spare no pains to put their track in the best possible condition for fast work, hoping that some world's record may be broken over it during this meeting. The souvenir book will be ready for distribution in about ten days, and will be found fully up to the standard of previous years.

Nothing Like It.

"Nothing like it has ever been seen in this country."—that is the opinion of every visitor to Hagenbeck's Zoological Arena on Midway Plaisance, on the World's Fair grounds. Every day, from morning till late in the evening, thousands of World's Fair visitors crowd this wonderful show, to witness the performance of the lions on horseback, tigers on velocipedes, trained pigs, the rare monkeys and parrots, and thousands of other wonderful curiosities. Don't fail to see the greatest of all animal shows when visiting the World's Fair grounds. A restaurant with popular prices is in the building.

MINING OF DIAMONDS.

You Can See How It Is Done at the Fair.

EARTH FROM KIMBERLEY MINES.

Tons of It Are Stored on the Exposition Grounds and Guarded by Big Zulus—The Process of Extracting the Precious Gems from the Diamondiferous Earth, of Cutting and Polishing.

WORLD'S FAIR, July 3.—[Special.]—The display of diamonds here is rich and rare. All the world loves gems, and the people who are not able to indulge in the luxury of their possession seem at least as fond of them as those who are. While an American firm displays the richest collection of precious stones to be found in the exposition, the most interesting exhibit is that which comes from far-away South Africa. The Cape Colony diamond display is one of the show features of the World's fair, for it exhibits all the various processes of diamond manipulation from the mine to the finished jewel which reflects the lights and colors of day. This display is in three parts, and all three are wonderfully attractive to visitors. Crowds of people constantly surround them.

First is the storehouse of diamondiferous earth from the famous Kimberley mines of South Africa. You may have seen pictures of these mines. They are great holes in the ground, looking much like the stone quarries which are common enough in our own country, save that the diamond mine has running down through it innumerable wire ropes which are used as tramways for carrying the masses of rocks to the surface of the surrounding ground, there to be pulverized and manipulated in the search for their precious contents. The common tradition about diamonds is that the miners go down into the mines and wander about picking up the stones in pebbles or small detached pieces. While it is true diamonds are sometimes found in this way, just as nuggets of gold are found in the gold fields, the number of stones that are picked up in this way would not meet the demands of a day's market in the single city of Chicago. Practically all of the diamonds are found in masses of rock and earth, from which they must be extracted by a method of grinding and washing not unlike that which is pursued in quartz mining in the western gold fields.

The diamond-earth storehouse is located in the western part of the grounds, near the big ice-making house where you may skate on actual ice all summer long. It is an enclosure about 60 feet in diameter, surrounded by a high and strong stockade, and circular in form with a single narrow gate. Here two or three Zulus are always on guard. They are powerful fellows, each as black as a black cat in a dark night, and over six feet tall. They are armed to the teeth, and their motto is that of a certain detective firm in this country—"We Never Sleep." Great muscular fellows they are, their half-bare bodies glistening in the sunshine and showing their tendons and sinews. Wicked are their eyes, and wickeder their weapons, giving promise of warm reception should any one attempt to pilfer from their trust. They are assisted in the work of guarding the diamond dirt by a squad of Columbian guards who patrol the outside of the enclosure, and who are there day and night, with a change of force every four hours.

Besides this double line of guards, the corral or storehouse is surrounded by electric wires which will give alarm in the police station of the fair situated some distance away in case they are interfered with by marauders. With all these safeguards it is difficult to see how even the most enterprising of Americans burglars or desperadoes could get away with any of this precious dirt. It wouldn't do them much good if they were able to overcome the guards and make off with a few bags of the stuff, for it would be only by the biggest kind of luck that their booty would pan out more than two or three hundred dollars in value, and besides, an outlaw with a half dozen bags of dirt on his hands, which must be skillfully treated if it is to be worth anything, would be in almost as much of a quandary as the thief who stole a tiger.

Within this enclosure are 1,200 sacks of ore, 900 of which are pulverized. In all there is about 400 tons of rock and earth. Its value is unknown. It all depends upon luck. If the dirt pans out rich it might be worth a million dollars. If it pans out poorly it might not be worth more than a hundred thousand. But at any rate it is so valuable that its owners do not propose to take any risks about having it stolen.

From the diamond warehouse to the southern end of the Mining building runs a large wire-rope tramway of American construction. This tramway serves a double purpose. It is not only an exhibit of the usefulness of this method of transportation, especially adapted to mines, but it carries the ore from the diamond storehouse to the Mining building, where is the most interesting exhibit of all—the grinding, washing, finding and treatment of diamonds. A peculiarity of the diamond rock is that if left exposed to the air for about six months it becomes soft and easily pulverized, and that is what has been done with the 900 bags of dirt. It is ready for manipulation, and after seeing a ton or two of it sent over to the Mining building by the wire tramway it will pay us to walk around and see what becomes of it.

Pushing our way through a dense crowd which surrounds the Cape Town display near the southern end of the central aisle in the building devoted to minerals, we find ourselves watching a big, black Zulu who is doing the hardest work of his life. He is trying to keep a throng of curious Americans from pressing too closely upon a rail which protects the diamond process, for there is fear they may break it down. Every one is eager to see the bags opened by the men in charge, and to see the brown dirt poured out into a hopper or big pan in which is running water and by which the dirt is reduced to the consistency of a soft mud. From this pan the mud goes into a cylinder which has a rotary motion and which is provided with a series of apertures.

As the cylinder revolves the smallest pebbles are thrust out through the first series of openings, and the larger ones go on till they come to apertures which are wide enough to permit their escape. These various collections of stones are then passed over to the sorter, who occupies a position of great responsibility. He spreads the pebbles out upon a table with a loving sort of hand. Then he paws them over and over, looking for those which have nature's precious crystals within them. His eye is quick and eager, and it would be safe to wager that few stones of value get by him in the course of a year. The big Zulus who stand guard near by keep an eye on the little pile of pebbles, too, as if they were irresistibly fascinated by the spectacle. Their eyes are so well trained that they can tell a diamond pebble as far as they can see it, and they find it impossible to repress the impulse to sing out to the sorter whenever they see one. They are like children who can't keep their eyes away from the goodies nor their tongues still in their heads when the candy is going around.

A pan of dirt usually brings out about two diamonds, though such a thing as an average is hard to determine. Some pans produce nothing at all. The sorter scans ever so eagerly, pawing the pebbles over, over and over with never a sight of one that looks as if it might have anything of value concealed within. The next pan may show the same barrenness of results, and the next, and by this time the patience of the workmen and the spectators are sorely tired. But the fourth pan, perchance, will prove itself rich in jewels. Five or six, and sometimes as many as twelve, diamonds are taken from a single pan of the pulverized earth. Then the eyes of the big Zulus dance.

Just how the sorter determines which are diamond pebbles and which are not is something that the uninitiated cannot understand. Occasionally a diamond pebble shows what it is so that no one could mistake it. Opalescent it is over more or less of its surface, though not brilliant; rather a dull, greenish gray, without glisten or beauty. But many more show no sign of the value concealed within their brown or black exteriors. It matters not how black and dull the outside, the sorter is supposed to know by some sort of instinct, something in the touch or feel of the pebble, whether it is worth laying carefully aside for further investigation or whether it shall be permitted to pass away with the refuse. His vision is so acute, his instinct so perfect or his touch so accurate, or in some way he is able to do his work so unerringly, that the manager of the exhibit said he wouldn't give a dollar a ton for the pebbles that had passed the skilled sorter's inspection.

There is a pile of rock here which one would like to get his fingers on. It is about as big as a strong man could run away with by the help of a good bag, and in the dark mass may be seen imbedded five or six of the opalescent pebbles, each a good-sized diamond. It would be so easy to lean forward and pick one or two of them out with a jack-knife; and possibly some one would do it if the big, shiny Zulu didn't stand there with an eye on forty people at once.

Now the rough diamonds are turned over to the polishers or lapidaries. The first thing this skilled workmen does is to make a study of the stone. He turns it over and over in his hands, lovingly and thoughtfully. Then he measures its surfaces. Finally he puts it under a lathe and begins to grind away its outer covering. In Europe, where most of the diamond-cutting is done, all the work is performed by hand, but this would not do for America. Our inventors have devised little machines, each making 2,000 revolutions a minute, which grind the diamonds down to the size and form which may prove to their best advantage. All this work is done behind glass cases. It is a hot place for the operators, and one cannot blame them for putting in but three or four hours a day. Usually they work from ten to twelve in the morning and from two to four in the afternoon, at which hours it is best to go to the Cape Town display. The last stage of all is the polishing of the stone. This is done with the dust which has accumulated from the earlier or dressing processes, and is literally an illustration of the adage that it takes a diamond to cut a diamond.

The third part of this Cape Town exhibit, and one which interests many visitors, is found near the machines. It consists of pictures and models of the mines and processes used in Africa, and specimens of the ore. Polite attendants are always here to show and explain. In the Manufactures building, right next to the clock tower, a New York firm shows more than a million dollars' worth of diamonds in a space not to exceed forty feet square. It is like a dream of beauty and magnificence. Across the aisle the French have a display almost as rich and beautiful. Here of course the crowds are always so thick that one is lucky indeed if he can get near enough to see without waiting an hour for his turn.

ROBERT GRAVES.

Among all of the various exhibits and curiosities at the World's fair the art of glass-making as illustrated by the Venice-Murano artists and sculptors in glass is perhaps the most thoroughly interesting. The company has done noble work for Italy as well as for the Columbian exposition by bringing to Chicago the artists and the highly skilled workmen who are daily delighting the throngs of visitors in the Midway plaisance.

A GHASTLY FIND.

Fishermen Discover a Box of Bones Near Traverse City.

It Is Believed They Are the Remains of the Ely Family, Who Mysteriously Disappeared in 1871—Were They Murdered?

A MYSTERY.

TRAVERSE CITY, June 30.—The north woods are full of mysteries that will never be explained. The finding of a box of human bones in a cedar swamp near Traverse City by two fishermen points to the solution of one of the mysterious disappearances that have become common of late years. In 1871 a farmer named Ely, living on the shore of Long lake, disappeared with his entire family, between two days, leaving everything untouched in his house. A hired man came forward with a deed of the house and farm that had never been recorded and claimed everything as his own, though he could not explain how he came to have it. Nothing was done at the time, and in 1876 Mr. Ely's father came to hunt him up, but could never find a trace of his son or his family. Nothing could be proved against the new owner, but he did not seem to enjoy life and the old farm and house soon fell into disrepute, and the house has stood silent and deserted for years with empty windows and echoing rooms. Some time ago a chest of woman's clothes was found in the thick woods near the house, and identified as belonging to Mrs. Ely, but no one has taken any steps to prove anything of late years, and the box of human bones is the first decisive thing that has ever been unearthed. The man who was supposed to know more than any living person about the mystery died a year or so ago, and probably never be solved.

STRONG WITNESSES.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is that of Nathan Allisons, a well known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for ten years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness, pain in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc.; one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with Heart Disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediately after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold also free book, by Baker & Hall.

GREAT SAVING RESULTS FROM THE USE OF SAPOLIO

A HOME MISSIONARY.

JOSEPH ADDISON HALLOCK (Octogenarian.)

HIS EXPERIENCE WITH THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT.

AN OLD MAN WITH PROGRESSIVE IDEAS AND HIS DESIRE TO ENLIGHTEN THE PUBLIC.

The winter of 1884-85 was my first experience with rheumatism. I was traveling as a home missionary, and with great difficulty and suffering I reached my appointments. It was located in my hips and back. From that time to this year of grace, 1891, I have suffered more or less under the grip of that disease. About three years later, liver complaint, and the calomel taken to cure it, fastened upon the walls and organs of my chest, a rheumatic affection from which I was never wholly free, and at times even a breath was cruelty. Yet, in a general way, my health has been as good, perhaps better than the average of men.

During the last days of the last year I bought of Dr. Owen two of the Owen Electric Belts. One I have worn, the other my daughter has worn. In either case the remedial has been satisfactory. The rheumatism of my chest and hips I can no longer find. A limited case of varicocele, of more than thirty years standing, after two weeks' use of the Belt, has diminished to a small lump, and a few days later could not be found. A nasal catarrh of years had entirely affected the substance of the nose that a friend in jest twitted me of brandy. My nose is itself again, and other symptoms of nasal and throat catarrh are fast disappearing. I am carrying my deafness of seven years with them.

I have studied electricity in its bearings upon mental and physico mental phenomena for fifty years, and have seen its wonders in these directions, and, thus prepared, my attention was easily turned to its efficiency in controlling the nerves, muscles and motions of the living, as galvanism does those of the recent dead.

I have no wish to undervalue any appliance which carries a real electric current from a genuine battery to human nerves with a gentle, a genial force; but I do wish to do my utmost to disarm public fears as to the well-ordered Electric Belts.

Cures Others

Will cure You, is a true statement of the action of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, when taken for diseases originating in impure blood; but, while this assertion is true of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, as thousands can attest, it cannot be truthfully applied to other preparations, which unprincipled dealers will recommend, and try to impose upon you, as "just as good as Ayer's." Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's only, if you need a blood-purifier and would be benefited permanently. This medicine, for nearly fifty years, has enjoyed a reputation, and made a record for cures, that has never been equaled by other preparations. AYER'S Sarsaparilla eradicates the taint of hereditary scrofula and other blood diseases from the system, and it has, deservedly, the confidence of the people.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

"I cannot forbear to express my joy at the relief I have obtained from the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with kidney troubles for about six months, suffering greatly with pains in the small of my back. In addition to this, my body was covered with pimply eruptions. The remedies prescribed failed to help me. I then began to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and, in a short time, the pains ceased and the pimples disappeared. I advise every youngman or woman, in case of sickness resulting from impure blood, no matter how long standing the case may be, to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla."—H. L. Jarmann, 33 William st., New York City.

BABIES AT THEIR BEST.

HAPPY IDEA OF THE EXPOSITION.

A Place Where Babies Are Taken Care of by Neat Nurses in Blue Gowns and White Caps—The Cute Little Foreign Babies in Midway Plaisance—The Dahomey Baby a Drawing Card.

WORLD'S FAIR, July 5.—[Special.]—There is an old saying that all the world loves a lover. This may be true, but I should a good deal rather risk my reputation for accuracy on the statement that all the world loves a baby. We see this at the exposition, as we see it everywhere. A day or two ago I was walking along the plaisance, I saw a group of people ahead of me surrounding some object that had excited their interest. On drawing near I found ten or fifteen ladies and gentlemen gathered about an Algerian woman who had in her arms a dirty-faced, scabby little fellow of one or one and a half years. He was dressed in the garb of his native land, of course, and was not pretty; but he was an infant, and a foreign infant at that, and the ladies and gentlemen who stopped for a look at him evidently thought him very cute and nice, for the women kissed his face, dirt and all, and the men gave him nickels and dimes.

This was a typical incident of the plaisance. There are a number of foreign babies and children here, and they attract a great deal of attention. In the Esquimaux village there are two or three juveniles, fat and greasy little persons with black, stringy hair and unlovely eyes and an appetite for American quarters. They have been fed on sweetmeats and popcorn, and cake from the luncheon boxes of visitors and other goodies till I fear they are in no fit condition to go back to their northern home and there endure the privations of their simple life amid the snowdrifts and icebergs.

The Soudanese children attract a good deal of attention, too, but for some reason or other no one wants to pet them. They wear great shocks of hair on the tops of their heads, thick as mats and causing them to resemble small editions of Paderewski. Possibly these bunches of hair discourage familiarity on the part of visitors. One could imagine almost anything of those top-knots, though it might be wise not to permit curiosity to be followed by investigation.

Now that the Javanese village is open to the world a large number of visitors within the quaint enclosure inquire for the little woman whose heart has been made sad by the loss of her baby since she came to America. The little woman's name is Mio, and she is not much bigger than a pint of cider, with tawny hair and great lustrous eyes. It is worth going miles to see how the women of Christendom sympathize with her. They have heard of her, far and near, as the woman whose baby died on the plaisance, and they want to say a kind word to her and buy something of her. Indeed, it is the baby, alive or dead, that makes the whole world kin.

We saw that a few days ago in the Dahomey village. There is a Dahomey baby, and every one wants to see it. But every one doesn't. The mother of this black little savage is an Amazon of the Amazons. She is six feet tall, weighs probably 200 pounds, and there isn't an ounce of superfluous flesh on her body. She is muscular, active, energetic, sometimes ferocious; especially when the awful orchestra that plays in the theater sets up its wildest howl and the drums are beat most viciously. Then the blood is stirred in her Amazonian veins, she brandishes her war club with mighty swings, shows her teeth as if she would like to eat some one alive, and lets off a whoop of savage defiance. But she is a woman, nevertheless; and when they send word to her that her baby has roused from its slumber in the thatched mud-hut down in the corner of the corral she drops her war club and her voice and starts on a run to give baby comfort from the ample breast of her stalwart body. This Dahomey baby thrives and grows fat, notwithstanding the warlike tendency of its mother; and it is, as well, quite a source of revenue to the Frenchman who set up this village from the west coast of Africa. So many visitors want to see the little savage babe that a regular admission fee of 10 cents has been charged for some time, and the number of visitors must amount to five or six hundred in a day. A baby that can lie on its black back and sleep and occasionally wake up to howl for its Amazonian mother and fight off a flea or two, and at the same time earn forty or fifty dollars a day, is a pretty smart sort of an infant, even if it does come from the benighted land of savagery.

In the Dahomey village is a little chap about five years old. He is as ugly as sin and he doesn't wear much to hide his hideousness. But with all his ugliness of body he seems to have an amiable disposition, for the other day he fell violently in love with a pretty little American girl and ran up to her and threw his black, bony arms around her. Oddly enough the little American was not a bit frightened, but laughed and thought the performance a good joke, enjoying it as well as did the large number of people who witnessed it. Possibly she thought savage adoration of her civilized charms was quite the proper thing, and this tribute thereto though somewhat too demonstrative was not to be despised or rejected.

If you want to see babies at their best, and the popular love for them at its sweetest pitch, leave the plaisance and the savages and go into the Children's building which stands just south of the building devoted to woman. I don't know who it was that first thought of this idea of having a children's building here at the fair, but whoever she was—of course it was a she—is deserving a monument. It was one of the happy ideas of the Columbian exposition, and is working out better than its best friends could have hoped for. The idea was, you will remember, to have a childrens' building in which there should be toys, and playrooms, and a nursery, and all that sort of thing. Well, they were a little late in getting everything ready, but it is in full operation at last, and there is nothing within the gates of the fair that attracts more attention or elicits more favorable comment than this structure devoted to babies and children. The idea kept growing and growing and taking in new feature after new feature till it is finally a pretty comprehensive affair. There is not very much in the world of babyhood that is not shown here, and shown to best possible advantage.

There is a crowd at the Children's building all the time, and if you want to get in to see what the little folks are doing you will have to exercise some patience. But it is worth your time and waiting. You presently find yourself within a large court, roofed, but very light and airy. In the center is a gymnasium, in which thirty or forty small boys and girls are having the best sort of a time. They are flying to and fro on the swings, jumping over the exercising horses, lifting weights, enjoying themselves in a great variety of ways. All around them, and in the gallery overhead, is a crowd of people watching the scene with eager eyes. But this is not the best picture the Children's building has to show. At one end of this court is a high partition of glass, and here the people are as thick as they can stand and others are waiting to take the place of those who are next the glass. What can it be that they are looking at? What is the fascination behind those transparent partitions?

Simply babies. Plain, commonplace, everyday American babies. Half of them are asleep, lying in sweet little cribs, with their faces shaded from the strong rays of light. On one side the glass a swarm of adults, eager, pushing, noisy, full of the activity and ambition of this hustling life of ours, on the other side sleeping infancy, unconscious of the work and worry and evil of this world, and some of them, no doubt, destined not to live long enough to know it by personal experience. The contrast between the two sides of the glass is strong indeed.

In the nurseries—for there are three or four of them in a row—the floors are bare. Awnings keep out the strong rays of the sun. The light is dull and soft. A line of cribs extend around the outer edge of the apartments. Each crib has a baby in it, and the nurses, trim and pretty in their simple blue gowns and white caps, have more babies in their arms, some just entering the land of lullaby and others already there. These are waiting their turn in the cradles. A dozen or more little tots are playing on the floor, with a great variety of toys to amuse themselves with. The toys have been contributed from all the nations of the earth, and he is a hard infant to please who cannot be satisfied with his choice from this collection.

At the door which leads to the office of the nurseries a number of women are waiting with babies in their arms. These are visitors to the fair, who want to deposit their infant charges and receive checks therefor. They are so tired, some of these poor mothers, that one feels sorry when he hears the clerk say, "We are full now and can't take another baby for two hours." It seems a pity that when they thought of such a happy idea as this day nursery where for a quarter of a dollar a mother may leave a baby and be sure that it will have good, intelligent and skillful care, they did not make the building large enough to accommodate all comers. Every day mothers with weary arms and haggard faces that tell of the struggle they have been making to see the exposition and take care of their babies at the same time, present themselves at the door of the nursery only to be disappointed with the word that all the space is taken.

In one of the nurseries babies are admitted along with their own private nurses, and I made the suggestion to the ladies in charge of the building that they amend their rules and keep out such infants as were already provided with regular attendants. People who have nurses employed to look after their infants should remain away from the Children's building and leave what room there is in that beneficent structure for the accommodation of babies who have no nurses except their tired mothers. If the Children's building is good for anything it is as a haven of rest to babies who have been made sore and peevish by being lugged about the fair grounds, without the opportunity for restful sleep, and for the mothers who have carried them about from building to building with aching limbs and weary feet. One of my own babies was left here a day or two in charge of her nurse, and it seemed a great convenience to all concerned. But as soon as I discovered that there wasn't room enough in the nurseries to accommodate the nurseless babies I said mine could remain at the hotel. If the ladies in charge of the building are wise they will make a rule that only babies without nurses shall be admitted.

Upstairs are some more interesting baby pictures. There are class-rooms in which you may look through another glass partition and see about fifteen little men and women playing through the kindergarten exercises. There are plenty of people in this country who have never had an opportunity to see what a kindergarten is like, and this is an opportunity which they hail with much delight. It is a pretty scene, enough, and familiarity seems never to rob it of its fascinations. Besides the kindergarten there is a school room in which sloyd is shown in full operation. Sloyd is something comparatively new in this country, but as near as I can make out it is an enlarged sort of kindergarten, suitable for children and extending the Froebel principle through a great variety of exercises, thoughts and trainings of the mind. In sloyd they use all the geometric forms, as they do in kindergarten work, but, going much farther, use also tools with which to make these forms and change them. The new system is taught by competent teachers from the east and by many who have come from Europe, and now that the schools are closed and both teachers and pupils are free to spend their vacations at the fair the attendance from the public schools of this country is becoming a distinct daily feature at the exposition.

The World's fair is a splendid place for the children, if one can make arrangements by which they may see what they wish to see without wearying themselves and every one else in the party. A very good method, pursued by several friends of mine with large families, is to take the little folks about two afternoons a week, devoting the whole of these half days to their amusement, and leaving them at home the remainder of the time.

HIS GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Bishop George D. Gillespie Celebrates the Anniversary of His Ordination.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 1.—Fifty years ago Rt. Rev. George D. Gillespie, bishop of the western Michigan Episcopal diocese, was ordained a minister, and on Friday he appropriately celebrated his golden jubilee. In the morning solemn services of prayer and thanksgiving were held in St. Mark's church. Bishop Gillespie delivered an address briefly recalling his life in the ministry. In the afternoon and evening a reception was given at the bishop's residence and many friends called to extend congratulations. Numerous letters and telegrams were received. A number of rich presents were given him in honor of the anniversary.

[Bishop Gillespie was born June 14, 1819, in Goshen, N. Y. He entered the theological seminary at the age of 18, and graduated in 1840, receiving the deacon's order June 28, of that year, in St. Peter's church, New York, from Bishop P. F. Onderdonk. He was ordained June 30, 1843, in St. Mark's church, Leroy, N. Y., by Bishop L. Laney, and entered upon his pastoral duties as rector of St. Mark's. He was for six years rector of St. Paul's church, Cincinnati; ten years rector of Zion church, Palmyra, N. Y., and then became rector of St. Andrew's church, Ann Arbor. When the Michigan diocese was divided, at the fortieth annual convention in 1874, Dr. Gillespie was elected bishop of the western Michigan diocese. He was elected December 2, 1874, and was consecrated in St. Mark's church, this city, February 24 following. He has found time outside of his church duties to do much real missionary work for charity and philanthropy. For years he has been chairman of the state board of charities and corrections, and has done much to ameliorate the condition of the inmates of jails, almshouses, asylums and reformatories, and has acquired a reputation in this direction that is not confined solely to Michigan.]

NOT YET SETTLED.

Irregularities Make Necessary a Review of the Famous Leonard Case.

GRAND RAPIDS, July 1.—In the circuit court a writ has been granted renewing for review a phase in the Leonard case from the probate court. Fred H. Leonard, of the big crockery and hardware firm of H. Leonard Sons & Co., was adjudged mentally incompetent and placed under guardianship. After this had been done he married a grass widow, and his guardian, to get him away from the widow pending suit to annul the marriage, represented to the probate court that he was insane and asked for an order admitting him to a private asylum. The order asked for was granted, and to avoid its execution Leonard and his wife went to Chicago, beyond the jurisdiction of the court. In asking for the writ gross irregularities in the probate court proceedings are alleged, among other things, that the two physicians appointed to examine him made certificates without seeing him at all. In granting the writ, which is returnable September 25, the circuit court forbids the guardian to interfere with Leonard in any way or to attempt to restrain him.

OVER-PRODUCTION.

This Is What Has Caused the Closing of Many Mines.

ISHPEMING, June 30.—Orders have been received to close down the Winthrop mine. This will throw about 400 men out of employment. Only two big mines are now left in working order, and it is thought that one of these will close down. The cause of the closing down of all the mines is said to be the over-production of the past year. The product of Lake Superior mines last year was 9,000,000 tons, an increase of 2,000,000 tons over 1891. This spring there were 2,500,000 tons of unsold ore in eastern ports. Of the other mines, many have been unable to pay expenses during the past few years.

Miller, president; Miss Faith Helmer, vice president; Miss Mattie Catton, secretary.

Growing Fast in Michigan.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 1.—At the world's fair building and loan congress, J. T. Rich, of Michigan, reported that the building association movement in his state is growing rapidly. The rate of interest is from 8 to 10 per cent. The national associations, Mr. Rich said, are at work in the state and are doing some business, but the people as a rule distrust them and they are not making great headway.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. ☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermoter. Where one goes others follow, and we "Take the Country." Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our Aermotor in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 15 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing we manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 27-29 Beale St., San Francisco.

HOW TO SEE THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A Daily Program or Schedule for a Two Weeks' Visit at Jackson Park.

We take it for granted, that every man and woman in this vicinity—to say nothing of old maids and children—who can spare the expense and time, will pay Jackson Park a visit during the coming four months. A few of the more fortunate ones, whose time is not wholly engrossed with business cares and whose bank account is in healthy condition, will be able to pay for first-class accommodations, and tarry from one to three months, "doing" the great Fair by easy stages, and making a comprehensive examination of all the sights worth seeing. Many will have time to make a flying trip of two or three days only, and they must select a few buildings and exhibits, which inclination or business may prompt them to visit. We presume however that a large majority of the visitors from this section will remain from one to three weeks. To strike a fair average, most visitors can arrange their affairs to be absent from home about two weeks. How can this limited time be put to the best use to the sight seer on Jackson Park?

The better plan is to take an early day train on the outward trip. You will arrive in Chicago about the middle of the afternoon and have plenty of time to hunt up your lodging rooms, get settled in your quarters and enjoy a comfortable night's rest. Accommodations, at least rooms, ought to be engaged beforehand. A very good plan is to secure rooms and breakfast at one place and take the remaining meals at restaurants and lunch counters, which are to be found in all sections of the city, and which abound in great variety within the confines of the Park. Allowing one day for seeing some of the sights in Chicago itself, with the one day spent on the road, it will leave twelve days in which to visit the sights on Jackson Park and the Midway Plaisance connected therewith.

We are aware that no daily schedule or program could be adopted which would suit every one. Individual tastes differ. The portrait painter might wish to devote extra time to the Art Gallery, while the raiser of fancy stock might leave the Art Gallery and Woman's building out of his routine entirely. All we can do is to strike an average and make out a schedule for the average visitor. The first essential, for one who would employ his time to the best advantage is to purchase a guide book and carefully study the map. In fact this guide book, which is small and easily carried, should be his constant companion during his daily visits. An opera glass also will be found very convenient almost every hour in the day for both interior and exterior views.

There are four general routes of transportation between the city and suburbs and the fair enclosure, all of which should be utilized on different days. These are the Illinois Central road, which runs trains from the lake front to all the western entrances to the Park; the "L" road, which has a station within the grounds; the cable line of street cars, which runs one block from the northwest entrance, and the big Lake steamers which make half hour trips to the pier near the south-east corner of the park. With the experience already gained, if we had the power of making our visit anew, we should take the lake trip on the morning of the first day—especially if it be a pleasant one—and enter the big show by the front door rather than through the back fence. The trip will introduce one to the new type of "whaleback" vessels. He can have a broad and full view of the Manufacturers building, with nothing intervening to hide its magnificent proportions. He sees the glittering domes and steeples and towers, rising from the midst of the great White City before him. As he disembarks and walks up the pier, he enters that stupendous collenade or peristyle, constituting the grand front entrance to the Park. Passing through the peristyle, he enters the broad plaza surrounding the grand basin. The broad lagoon is dotted with gay gondoliers and electric launches. At the eastern end of the lagoon towns the colossal statue of the Republic, gleaming in brighest gold. At the western end of the lagoon is the graceful MacMonnies fountain backed by the huge gilded dome of the administration building. On the left rise the mighty Agricultural building and palace of machinery; on the right the end facades of the Manufacturers, Electricity and Mining buildings. These together form a scene of architectural grandeur, such as no mortal eye on this planet ever witnessed before. One should then take a round trip through the lagoons in an electric launch. A trip will comsume about an hour and will carry one within a stone's throw of all the larger buildings on the Park. The launch will halt at most of the landings to receive and discharge passengers. The ride itself is a delightful one, as the lauches are propelled at the speed of about twenty miles an hour, and the trip gives one a better idea, than a day's tramp would, of the general topography of the grounds and location of the buildings. The route makes a circuit of the wooded island which gives one a fine view of its beauties. Upon returning to the grand basin, one can alight at the landing in front of the Agricultural Building and a few moments walk brings him to the south loop of the intramural railway. This is an elevated electric railroad, the first one ever constructed in the United States. A round trip costs only ten cents. This road is the greatest annihilator of space and dispenser of comfort within the confines of the park. It makes almost an entire circuit of the grounds, taking a course around the outskirts, and supplements the water trip through the lagoons in an admirable manner. Taking the full trip, one alights at the North loop near the U. S. Government building and an hour or two can then be profitably spent in strolling about the wooded island and visiting the Japanese village thereon. Nature and the landscape gardner's art have combined to render this island a bower of loveliness. One might then cross over the bridge leading to the main building, enter at the north archway and take a ride in the elevator, located near North entrance, to the roof. A walk has been constructed completely around the central portion of the roof, protected by a railing to insure perfect safety. The entire circuit is exactly a half mile in length, and a grander landscape view or more imposing architectural display, one can never hope to behold again within an ordinary life time. The beautiful waters of Lake Michigan on the east, the little villages constituting the suberbs of Chicago, on the south and west, and the big bustling city on the north give a pleasing variety to the view. Upon reaching terra firma again, one can take the promenade on the lake shore, north through the cluster of foreign buildings, thence west along the broad north ave among the State buildiugs to the Michigan. Enter this, register your name, make yourself at home and take a rest. Here you can fitly terminate your first day's visit, and leaving the Park at 57th street, take the cable line to the city.

Upon the morning of the second day, one can take a trip to the Park by an overland route: perhaps the "L" road would be the better route. The visitor will enter the grounds at a central point and a few rods walk will bring him to the Administration building. This contains no exhibit but its architectural and decorative features are well worthy of study. It constitutes the official headquarters of the big show. The forenoon can well be spent in the Agricultural Building, which is only a short walk from the Administration. Behind and South of this structure are located the stock sheds, the Forestry and Dairy buildings which will occupy most of the afternoon. The balance of the day can be given to the La-Rabida Convent, which contains over 1000 relics pertaining to Columbus, gathered from all quarters of the globe.

The morning of the third day will find most visitors somewhat fatigued, but more ambitious than ever to improve every moment of their time, and put in a full day's work. The Transportation and Machinery buildings are in the same part of the grounds, handy by each other, and one whole day can profitably be given to these. An hour or two might be given towards night to the smaller affairs just south of Machinery Hall, such as the Cliff Dwellers, the White Horse Inn, the Wind Mill exhibit and other private buildings. The Mines and Electricity buildings might well engross the attention of an inventor or mechanical expert for at least a week, but both of these buildings in our present schedule must be allotted to one day. An hour or two might be spared for the Waukesha Mineral Water building and a stroll through the terminal R. R. station in the same vicinity.

The great hall of Manufactures and Liberal Arts, which encloses beneath its sweeping roof thirty acres of ground space and fourteen acres more of gallery, can be most conveniently reached from the steamboat landing. The visitor who has only twelve days to devote to the entire show ought to allot at least two whole days to this building. The greatest variety of exhibits will be found therein. All the useful arts and sciences are represented, and nearly every nation on earth has sent its quota of treasures to enrich the wonderful and varied collection which is gathered within those walls. At least two days will be required for even a cursory examination of its contents. If the visitor's time at the Fair is cut down to three or four daos, this program of course must be molified, but every visitor should not fail to give a fair share of his entire time to this mammoth structure of science and art.

One-half of our program is completed, and only six days remain to visit the balance of the big show. The seventh day can be devoted to the U. S. building, which contains a host of relics, naval and military curiosities, the Naval show or battle ship in the harbor, and the Fisheries building. Lunch can be taken at the Swedish or Polish cafe, both of which border on the lagoon neor the Fisheries. The eighth day should be given up almost wholly to the Woman's building and Horticultural hall. A half day to each is the least possible time to enable one to do justice to the manifold beauties which they contain. An hour might be spared from one or the other to visit the White Star, Puck and Children's buildings, all of which are in that vicinity. And the Michigan should not be overlooked upon any day, for some friends or acquaintances are generally found at the State headquarters.

One entire day should be set aside for the Art Gallery and this fraction of time will be found far too short for the person who possesses a taste for paintings and statuary. It contains within its walls the largest and grandest collection of art treasures ever seen on the western hemisphere. It is one of the richest jewels in the corona of the Fair.

One day can be given to a tour of the State buildings, which are clustered about the northern end of the Park. All of them are rich or quaint in architectural design and abound in interesting features. The group of foreign buildings along the Lake Shore, twenty in number, should fill in one day of sight seeing. These buildings, though of modest size, represent the oriental styles of architecture, and are filled with curiosities from foreign lands. The visitor who gives only one day to these will regret the approach of nightfall.

Eleven out of our twelve days' program have thus been disposed of, and there remains for the final day's trip the novelties, spectacular shows and foreign scenes, grouped within the Midway Plaisance. For most of them a fee is charged, but they should not be overlooked on that account, unless the dictates of stern economy compel it. In the line of curiosities alone the Midway section is the most attractive feature of the Exposition.

Thus our allotted two weeks' time is filled. Many people would modify it somewhat, but for the average visitor it would be found both convenient and acceptable. This trip can be made and all expenses paid in a liberal way for $50.00. The man who can spare that sum, with two weeks' time, and fails to visit Jackson Park this summer will have cause to regret it as long as he lives.

THE ALUMNI REUNION.

The regular annual exercises of the High School Alumni Society were held in Armory Hall, at the usual time, on the day succeeding commencement. The fact that most of the officers were absent, caused much delay in arranging the program and it looked at one time that the meeting would not be held at all. Capt. Hayden and Walter Burridge volunteered their services and the reunion was held with a very good program. Although the attendance was smaller than usual those present were glad they came for a very pleasant evening was passed by all.

Capt. Hayden officiated as President and called the meeting to order and the program was opened with prayer by Rev. H. A. Smith. A selection by the orchestra followed which was finely given. Capt. Hayden then gave the address of welcome to the class of '93, and the response in behalf of the class was made by Walter Burnett.

An oration, or more properly an essay, was read by S. C. Stacy, W. J. Morse gave a poem and Miss Elida James a history of the class of '84. The regular program closed with another selection by the orchestra. The company then fell upon the refreshments, and did their duty in that direction. Mr. W. B. Darling acted as caterer and it is needless to say that his part of the entertainment was well performed.

In the absence of the toastmaster, Mr, Frank Kellogg was drafted into the service and his easy, humorous way of filling that position gave spice and variety the "after-dinner" part of the exercises. The following toasts were presented, all of which were responded to very appropriately:

A Wonderful World—Dr. Geo. Howell.

The Gentlemeh—Miss Edith Ingersoll.

Fence Corners—Dr. L. G. North.

Seen Through the Microscope—Prof. L. M. Kellogg.

The following list of officers was reported for the ensuing year and unanimously elected after which the meeting adjourned.

THE CLASS HISTORY.

In the class of '84 were six members, only four of whom are now living.

According to the High School catalogue Miss May Farley's history is first. For three years after leaving school she taught a term each in Newburg, Franklin and Macon, and a year in Jackson. In '87 she accepted a school in Ashtabula, Ohio, where she taught four months, after which she entered a business college in Detroit, where she took a course in shorthand and bookkeeping. After finishing her studies there she took a position in a lawyer's office at Youngstown, Ohio, where she remained three months. The next seven months were spent in Buffalo in the Board of Trade. In April of '92 she went to Jackson, where she is still keeping books for the Mich. Mfg Co.

After graduation in 1884 Mabel Guiwits passed some months in the study of music and the ordinary duties of home life. The following winter she taught for a short time a school in the township of Rome, this county. In 1885 she visited the State of New York, where she remained about one year, teaching a portion of the time, but was forced to relinquish her work on account of ill-health. Returning to Michigan she again took up the study of music, of which she was passionately fond, but again her health failed and after one month's illness she died March 28th, 1886.

Will J. C. Hastings entered the University of Michigan in the fall of '84, where he studied one year and a half. The time since then has been spent in Tecumseh, where he was married in 1889 to Miss Lizzie Frazer.

Edgar L. Ide, devoted his first two years to S. C. Stacy and Uncle Sam. In the fall of '86 he left home for Detroit and was engaged in Prestons' Bank until he was obliged, on account of poor health, to make a change. Since then he has been in the employ of the Peninsular White Lead Works, his present address. On April 17, 1890, he was married to a Detroit girl.

B. Frank Lamkins taught one year in Franklin. In the fall of '85 he entered the law school at Ann Arbor. In July of the following year he was taken ill. In September of the same year he was married to Miss Edith Parkhurst. In May, '87, he engaged in the hardware business in Kansas, where they remained until '89, when they returned to Michigan. In the summer of '90 he received an appointment at Washington which he accepted and held until June of '92, when failing health made it necessary for him to resign. They returned to his home in Franklin, where he was ill nearly all summer, and died Aug. 7, '92, of consumption of the throat.

Ernest L. Shepard's history is not complete, for circumstances denied to the historian the privilege of direct communication. However, his first year, after leaving the Tecumseh High School, was spent in the University of Michigan, and since then he has been in the employ of the Government at Washington.

ALUMNI POEM—"PLANS."

Since you have chosen me
Alumni poet of 'ninety-three,
You need not your minds prepare
For lofty flights in poetic air.

In childhood's happy day,
Passing our lives in joyous play,
We build our castles, lay our plans;
Trusting they'll forever stand,
Waiting the glad day
When these shall be found
Resting on firmer ground.
That day comes at last,
But ah! all too soon 'tis past;
And ere we scarce can realize
Its austere presence and arise,
The veil is lifted from our eyes.
Our plans in childhood's day
Are ever bright, but never stay,
Until we see them fulfilled,
And our castle walls with pleasure gild.

And ere we know that joy;
That comes without alloy,
We enter Education's palace fair,
And revel 'mid her pleasures rare.
Some seek Clio's pleasant day,
And live with her in historic days.
Others in Minerva's temple dwell,
Striving in warlike actions to excel.
But those of gentle mind and soul
Love Erato's virtues to extol,
We soon advance again,
And each takes up a greater plan
In Manhood's wider fields,
Where Education kindly leads.
And we ever in fond memory turn
To our Alma Mater's golden days,
From whence we our knowledge gained.
Although we were oft-times pained
When teachers would us compel
To learn our lessons, and learn them well,—
That heaven's richest blessings rest
Upon them now, is our request.
But we must not dwell upon the past,
For the present will not last;
So on we journey without fear,
To carry out the plans that we hold dear.
And as we each succeeding one complete,
While in the race for fame we all compete,—
Each one, should he wish the prize to gain,
Must seek the aid of brothers twain,—
Stern Labor and Determination grand,—
Who willingly lend a hand
To help us reach the topmost round
Of this wondrous ladder of fame.
Where shines Reputation's brilliant flame.
And we await our heart's desire,
To which we each aspire.
And when we've gained the prize,
We then may feast our eager eyes
Upon the scenes, as they go by,
In memory's panorama fair.
And as we rest beneath the azure dome,
We long for an abiding home,
Where we may rest without annoy,
And triumph in eternal joy;
When, soft as the summer wind,
A gentle voice comes to our mind,
And tells us to cease our longings all.
For He that careth for the sparrow small,
Has for his children a home prepared,
Which by the faithful may be shared.
And as the close of life draws near,
And we are called to leave its plans so dear,
For another's working here,
While we obey the summons clear.
And thus we find, from child to man,
Our lives are one stupendous plan,
By the Almighty wisdom planned,
And wrought by God's eternal hand.
His plans are sure.—
No trails, no windings to allure;
But sure to end within the gates,
If we follow as he dictates.
May we, as members of the Alumni here,
Join in the grand reunion there;
And behold complete the plan,
Vouched safe by God to man.

The day of bombs, noise, firecrackers, and general enthusiasm, with the after-effects of missing fingers, eyes and an air of arnica, bandages and ugliness is over, and the celebrators have settled back again to the duties of everyday hustling. Co. C., together with a goodly number of citizens, spent the day in Jackson, celebrating and taking in Forepaugh's circus at the same time. All report a large day and a good time. Others went to Blissfield to hear what their eagle had to say and to see Blissfield's crack ball club do up the High School boys from this place. Some spent the day at the different lake resorts in boating, picnicing, and imagining they were having an elegant time, while the more ease-loving people satisfied themselves with a cool spot at home and the thought that while everyone else was getting over the effects of a days outing, they would be one days rest ahead.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Cairnes, of Texas, are spending a few weeks with friends in this vicinity. Mrs. Cairns, formerly Phoebe U. Hunt, was a resident of Franklin thirty-four years and they will find plenty of old friends to visit.

An important article, entitled "The Future of Presbyterianism in the United States," has been written for the July numbor of the North American Review by Prof. Charles A. Briggs, whose recent trial for "heresy" created so much excitement.

Rev. Jas. Gorton left for Chicago last Saturday where he will remain a few weeks with friends. He thinks some of locating in Wisconsin. His departure from Tecumseh is sincerely regretted by his many friends here, but they hope he may prosper wherever his lot may in be the future.

We have received a copy of the official directory of the Calumbian Exposition published by the W. B. Conkey Co. of Chicago. It contains an official list of all the exhibits and a large amount of other statistical and descriptive matter. The work is much more complete than the original plan contemplated and is having a tremendous sale.

The ball game at Blissfield Tuesday p. m. for the championship of the county, between the Blissfield and Tecumseh Nine resulted in a victory for the former, the score standing 12 to 16. The Blissfield men evidently were determined that the championshsp should not go to mere school boys as they had secured the services of strong outside players and were prepared to fight a hard battle, which they found necessary.

The 4th was seemingly not a day conductive to ballooning. Prof. Bartholomew's gas baloon refused to rise with him at Jackson and the ascent was given up. At Wampler's Lake Prof. Fleming, of Jackson, was billed for an an ascention and parachute drop. After rising some three or four hundred feet he cut loose and dropped to earth like a stone, the parachute not filling at all. Lucky for him he struck in a marsh near the lake and went into the mud with a thump which impaired his breathing apparatus for a short time, but as far as learned he will suffer no serious results from his tumble; but there must be a last time.

Much of the present business depression is due to lack of confidence, and hoarding of money by those who are afraid the amount in hand is all they will ever get. There has been run after run on various banks, but with only a very few exceptions they have paid everything needed on demand, one Chicago bank keeping open until two o'clock in the morning for the accommodation of anxious depositors. But all this feeling can be overcome largely if every man who owes a dollar and has the money in hand will pay up promptly. That will pay another man's debts to the extent of a dollar and so keep on turning and paying other debts. By keeping what money is in sight moving in this way the result will be apparent in a gradual restoration of confidence and a reviving of business.

Wheat harvest will soon be here.

Miss Lena Lawrence, of Detroit, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. W. C. Fisher and daughter, Gertrude leave this afternoon for Nantucket, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Pittman, of Detroit, spent the 4th here. They have rented the H. L. Stewart house and intend spending the summer in our village.

Married, on the 5th inst., by the Rev. J. Phelps, rector of St. Peter's Church, Tecumseh, Mr. Marcena E. Thomas, of Macon, and Miss Celia McCollum, of Saline, Mich.

At Weston, Lanawee county, says a correspondent of the Detroit Evening News, lives a 5-year old literary prodigy. Little Willie Fox has a memory of which any man might be proud. In his young brain he has stored away and always ready for use some 50 different pieces of poetry. One of these has 60 long verses. He recited it to the News the other day without omitting a single line. He prefers poetry, but in the absence of that, he is satisfied with geography. He has all the countries and cities and rivers of Europe, and the states of America, with their capitals at his finger ends, and can relate many interesting ancedotes about former presidents of the United States.

Married, Wednesday, July 5th, 1893, at 1:30 p. m., at the residence of the brides parents in this village, by Rev. J. P. Varner, Mr. Dwella A. Hodges and Miss Ella Jackson. A large number of friends were present to witness the ceremony and extend congratulations. The couple received a splendid variety of handsome presents among the more valuable of which we noticed a fifty dollar bank note. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges left on the evening train for an extended visit in New York, Mr. Hodges' former home, after which they will return to Jackson, where they expect to reside. Mrs. Hodges has lived in our village since her childhood and was a general favorite with all her associates who will regret to lose her from their circle. Mr. Hodges has made numerous friends since his acquaintance here. Together with a host of friends the HERALD extends its best wishes for the future happiness of the pair.

The weekly paper known for the last twenty-five years as "The Christian Union" with its first issue for July changes its title to The Outlook. It will remain unchanged in other respects, except in the line of improvement and enlargement. It will be, as before, a family paper, non-denominational in religious matters, and giving large space to the current history of our times; to literature, economics and progressive movements of all sorts, and to home life. The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott will remain as its editor-in-chief, with Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie as his associate, and an editorial staff of several members. New type; the begining of a serial by Maartens, the Dutch novelist who has just sprung into fame; increase in the number and improvement in the quality of the illustrations—these are some of the features of the first number of the new volume of this successful periodical.

Will Waldron received a telegram Tuesday announcing the death of Mrs. Waldron's father, Mr. George Griswold, at the home of his son-in-law, J. W. Crane, at Elmhurst, Ill. Mr. Griswold has for years been a sufferer from heart trouble, but was feeling quite well and with his wife, determined to visit his daughter, Mrs. Crane, at Elmhurst and incidentally visit the World's Fair. The long trip affected Mr. Griswold some but he soon recovered, and was seemingly as well as usual. Last Monday feeling somewhat fatigued he concluded not to visit the Fair that day. During the forenoon he was taken very ill, and although every medical aid was given him, he expired at 3:45 o'clock Tuesday morning. The remains were brought here for interment, the funeral to be held at the house at 3 o'clock, p. m. today. Mr. Griswold was a man seventy years of age and had been a resident of this county since he was three years of age. He has always been a prominent citizen and many friends will regretfully to learn of his demise.

The Free Press of recent date contains this item: "The interstate commerce commission has rendered a decision classifying and determining the freight rate of a celebrated Michigan product. The question came up in the case of the Tecumseh Celery Company against the Cincinnati, Jackson and Mackinaw Railway Company. The commission decides that for that portion of its line over which the western classification is in force the Wabash Road should class celery with asparagus and other vegetables of that class." The decision was rendered June 15th, and is a complete victory for the Celery Co. Walter C. Burridge was the attorney for the complaimant, who has favored us with a copy of the report and opinion. The Celery Co. had a clear case and the decision of the commission required a change in the rates charged on celery by the Wabash Railroad, reducing the figures from 51 cents to 34 cents per hundred from Tecumseh to Kansas City. Mr. Hollister, the Manager of the Celery Co., is to be congratulated upon the outcome, as he was responsible for the action. The decision will be a benefit to all the celery growers of this section, no less than to the Tecumseh Co.

WHY ARE WHEELER & WILSON'S "No. 9" SEWING MACHINES POPULAR?

BECAUSE LADIES BUY THEM LIKE THEM AND TELL THEIR FRIENDS.

Many ladies have used our machines twenty to thirty years in their family work, and are still using the original machines we furnished them a generation ago. Many of our machines have run more than twenty years without repairs, other than needles. With proper care they never wear out, and seldom need repair.

We have built sewing machines for more than forty years and have constantly improved them. We build our machines on honor, and they are recognized everywhere as the most accurately fitted and finely finished sewing machines in the world. Our latest, the "No. 9," is the result of our long experience. In competition with the leading machines of the world, it received the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition of 1889, as the best, other machines receiving only complimentary medals of gold, silver and bronze. The Grand Prize was what all sought for, and our machine was awarded it.

THE MAKING OF GLASS.

Interesting and Instructive to All People.

WORLD'S FAIR GLASS FACTORY.

Visitors to the Midway Plaisance Can See How All Manner of Costly and Cheap Glass Is Manufactured by Skillful Workmen—The Work of Making Cut Glassware—Spinning Glass.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 30.—[Special.]—For some of the most interesting features of the fair the enterprise of American manufacturers is to be given credit. On the Midway plaisance, for instance, where there is an assemblage of savage life and strange peoples from all over the world, there is no more interesting exhibit than that made by a firm of glass blowers. They have erected here a complete plant, with steam engines, a great furnace, machinery of all sorts, and perhaps 200 workmen and salesmen. Here they carry on the whole business of glass making, blowing, moulding, coloring, cutting. If one may judge by the popularity of the factory among the visitors to the fair not many of our people have had the pleasure of seeing the glass-making process. Great crowds are constantly passing in and out the doors. It is not a free show, either, though the admission fee is only 10 cents, and this is refunded on the purchase price of any article you may wish to buy within. The proprietors say they charge even this small sum not for the sake of revenue, but to prevent their place being uncomfortably crowded as would be the case if there were no admission fee whatever.

Entering this World's fair glass factory you find yourself near the base of a big glass furnace. Through the little doors which the workmen open now and then you may see the mass of molten glass within, red and glowing. One of the blowers sticks his tube through the open door, worms it around in there for a moment, and withdraws it with a small quantity of molten metal adhering to the end. He lifts this in the air, blows through the tube with his lungs, and inflates the mass of molten stuff to a globule. By rolling it upon a hard, smooth surface he causes the bulb to assume any form he wishes, an electric light globe, a tumbler, a vase, a saucer, a flower-holder. He adorns it with glass of various colors which is wound upon his globe much as a cord is wound on a bobbin in a spinning machine. He fashions the exterior of his bulb in various forms by rolling it along patterns. The whole process is so simply and quickly done, the glowing mass of glass being handled as if it were plaster or clay, that one is amazed.

The cheaper line of work is going on at the same time near by. This is what is known as pressed glass. One man reaches into the furnace with a long tube, extracts a small quantity of metal, plunges it into a mould, another man cutting off the superfluous portion with a pair of scissors, a lever is pulled and the piston of the mould comes down pressing the glass into the shape of a butter dish or cream pitcher. In a trice the bit of molten stuff has been converted into a dish that is almost perfect. A little finishing, a bit of polishing done also by machinery, will make it ready for the market; and when it is done it will be a thing of beauty, bright and glistening, almost as clear and fine as cut glass itself, and yet very cheap. This is but one of an almost infinite variety of methods by which modern manufacturers produce the most beautiful articles at prices within the reach of the multitude.

The bowls, pitchers and glasses which are to be decorated by hand are produced in the same way, though of finer material and more careful workmanship. The beauty of cut glass consists not so much in the quality of the material as in the exquisite nature of the work put upon it. In this World's fair glass factory you may see glass-cutting in all its phases. A dozen or more young men sit before emery wheels working by steam power with streams of water trickling down upon their peripheries, grinding and cutting the surfaces of the glass dishes according to the patterns which have been chalked upon them in the pattern room. To produce a perfect cut glass rose bowl of medium size one young man will work for a week or more, and thus you may see why it is that cut glassware costs so much money. He must grind and grind, cut and cut, hour after hour to produce the almost innumerable prisms which reflect the rays of light like a diamond and make this product of the glass-blower's art like the finest precious stones.

There are single pieces of cut glass in this exhibit which represent a month's hard work by the most skillful of mechanics in the grinding and polishing alone, and perhaps two weeks more of work in superintendence, inspection, finishing and assistance. The result of all this effort is glorious, and costly.

Some of the most beautiful souvenirs of the exposition are made in glass. All sorts of articles have pictures of the principal exposition buildings within them in delicate lines. On some you may have your name engraved while you wait. These engraved souvenirs are very popular, and large numbers of them are sold every day.

But the most wonderful thing in the show is the glass fabric. One of the workmen in this concern discovered some time ago that he could spin glass into threads of even size and texture just as wool or cotton is spun. He talked to the proprietor about it, and the result was that the firm decided to make a specialty of spun glass articles in case they could find sale for them. They began in a modest way, but their wares, on account of novelty as well as beauty, have attained such popularity that glass spinning is now an important feature of the business. It would be difficult to imagine anything more dazzling and curious than this process. The molten glass is spun out into a long thread by the rotation of a spindle, and on being cooled is wound around a bobbin precisely as one would wind yarn, though of course the diameter of the spool is pretty large. The makers say the glass spins out in very even thickness, and runs surprisingly "true." From the spinning it goes to the loom. One girl cuts the threads into the proper lengths and inspects them for faults. Another operates the loom. Each glass thread is laid in by hand, and a careful movement of the machine pushes it to its place in the fabric. Then another thread is put in, and so thread by thread the metal textile grows. It is slow work, a nimble fingered girl, with one assistant, being able to make but a quarter of a yard of glass cloth in a day.

Naturally glass cloth is expensive. Sixty dollars a yard is the present price, and it is easy to figure out from this basis what the value of a dress pattern would be. The firm is now making a glass gown for the Princess Eulalia, who saw some of the fabric and the method of making it a few weeks ago, during her visit to the fair, and was greatly impressed with it. The value of the princess' glass gown will be something like $1,000.

This fabric, contrary to general expectation, is soft and silken. There is nothing harsh or brittle about it. It is a sheen of jewels. It is the finest of silks plastered over with crystals. Glass fabric has this advantage over most other fabrics, it will not wear out. It does not tarnish in water, and if stained by a foreign substance may be washed with soap and water or with chemicals without in any way injuring its texture or color. I should not imagine it would ever be popular for dress goods. In the first place it is too expensive, and though the manufacturers may be able to cheapen it somewhat as they develop their processes, it is not likely to come within the reach of every-day purses. Moreover, it is too pretentious for any wear but to ballrooms, and there it should be magnificent. Where the glass fabric is of most service is in the making hangings for rooms, curtains, portiers, of and wall decorations. It is not only rich and handsome, but it lasts forever and may always be cleaned. If dust accumulates upon it, take it down and souse it in water. Glass fabric is one of the novelties of the exposition, and the manufacturers make up a great variety of small articles of it to be sold as souvenirs at reasonable prices.

Another interesting and novel exhibit at the fair is a beautiful wagon, the metal portions of which are constructed of aluminum, the first time that this metal has been put to such practical use. The possibilities of aluminum are almost totally unknown as yet, but great interest is felt in the future of this valuable metal. Thirty-five years ago it was merely a chemical curiosity. Today many scientific writers think it is destined ultimately to succeed all other metals for mechanical and ornamental purposes. A striking illustration of its value is given in the beautiful wagon which has been made by a noted Indiana firm of wagon makers. The tires of the wagon are made of steel, burnished and plated to glisten like mirrors. All the remaining metal in the vehicle, consisting of bolts, nuts, screws, rods, clips, braces, chains, nails, etc., are made of solid aluminum, 149 pounds of the metal having been used in finishing the wagon. If iron had been used instead its weight would have been 490 pounds. The wood work on the wagon is equally as beautiful as the metal portion. The pole is of curly ash, and the hubs of yellow birch. The remainder of the wood work of the gear is white second growth Indiana hickory. It is finished with oil and rubbing varnish, to protect the fiber and natural luster of the wood without concealing its natural beauty. The box is made of rosewood inlaid with a border of holly and with thirty-five medals awarded to the makers since 1852. The log required in order to get boards of a size adequate for the box, sides and ends, weighed 1,505 pounds and cost in the raw state $230.80. It was cut in the province of Belmonte, Brazil, and was brought down the Belmonte river many miles in a huge canoe, thence by bark to Bahia, Brazil, and from there to New York by steamer. It required the services of a woodworker three months to prepare the box for the finisher, and thirty successive processes to bring it to its present state of polish. Aluminum is now worth about 90 cents a pound. At one time it sold for $91 a pound. In 1889 it was reduced as low as $1.50, and in 1891 it sold at $1.00. In 1892, competition in America and abroad had forced the price down to 50 cents a pound. The metal is never found in a natural state, but lies united with oxygen in clay, feldspar, corundum, cryolite, and most other minerals. It comes chiefly from Baux, a small village in the south of France. Deposits have also been found in the United States, and it has been estimated that the metal constitutes about one-twelfta of the earth's crust. There are a number of processes for obtaining the metal and it is hoped to yet cheapen its production so that it can come into general use. Its weight is about one-third that of iron, and one-seventh that of gold. When cast it is as soft as silver, but when rolled or hammered it becomes almost as hard as iron. Its tensile strength is twelve tons to the square inch. It does not rust and the mechanical world looks forward to the day when it shall become as cheap as iron and revolutionize at least one branch of mechanic arts.

ROBERT GRAVES.

A glorious plan of continental bell ringing has been evolved by the directors of the World's fair. It will be the grandest peal of rejoicing ever heard. At noon, exactly, by central standard time, the new liberty bell will ring out in tones which will be echoed around the earth. At the same time all the boats in the harbor will salute and every bell in the city will be rung. But the ringing will not end there. Arrangements are being made to have every bell in the United States peal forth at exactly 12 o'clock noon, Chicago time. At night by far the grandest and most extensive pyrotechnic display ever seen will be given.

A number of exhibitors have been giving away fans as advertisements, much to the dismay of the man who has the franchise for selling the comfort producers. As protests did no good, the concessionaire has appealed to the exposition authorities asking that they prevent his trade from being ruined.

An exhibit from the holy land has been received at the Transportation building. Among othe things it includes a model of the boats used on the Sea of Galilee in the time of Christ.

CARAVELS AT DETROIT.

Escorted Up the River by the Fessenden and a Host of Yachts.

DETROIT, July 1.—The Spanish caravels arrived here just before noon Friday in tow of the steamer Heela and were accorded a noisy and enthusiastic reception. The caravels were met at the mouth of Detroit river by the revenue cutter Fessenden and a large number of steam yachts from the Michigan Yacht club. Thus escorted, they came up the river slowly. As the caravels passed Fort Wayne a national salute was fired. Every yacht of the city was in the vicinity of the anchorage grounds, and a private reception was given at the club house until 2 o'clock. After that hour the general public came to see the Spanish visitors, and an immense crowd filled the park. The Nineteenth United States Infantry band furnished music all day at the club house.

One License Covers Many Bars.

LANSING, July 3.—An important decision in a liquor case was handed down by the Michigan supreme court Saturday. In the case of Courtright against the common council of Newaygo the court holds in brief that two or even a greater number of bars may be conducted for the sale of liquor under one license, provided they are in the same building and operated by the same person who occupies the entire premises. In the case of a hotel the license is held to cover every room desired for the purpose. It is believed that the decision will revolutionize the retail liquor business in the state, as heretofore upstairs and downstairs bars in hotels and places of like nature have been required to be run under separate licenses.

DETROIT'S

Blue Ribbon Meeting

FOR 1893.

The Annual Summer Meeting of the Detroit Driving Club, which takes place July 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21, will be the grandest one ever held on any grounds in the United States. Success is assured from the start, for several reasons. Chief among these reasons is the fact that no other meeting of any prominence is held during that week in all this broad land of ours, hence no clashing of dates to conflict, and practically will be the means of concentrating every stable in training to Detroit's Blue Ribbon Meeting. The five special classes which closed April 5 with purses amounting to $21,000, with the magnificent entry list of 102 horses for five classes, shows conclusively that the regular classes which close July 3 will swell the list close to 300 entries. With such stables as C. J. Hamlin, of Buffalo; A. H. Moore, of Philadelphia; San Mateo Stock Farm, of California; Augustus Sharpe, of Louisville, Ky.; Palo Alto Stock Farm, California; the Pleasanton stable of M. Salisbury; V. L. Shuler, of Minneapolis, Minn.; George Starr, of Terre Haute, Ind.; Marcus Daly, of Montana; Bob Stewart, Kansas City; H. C. Jewett, of Jewettville, N. Y.; John Poag, Toledo, O.; Ketchum Farm, Toledo, O.; Du Bois Bros., Denver, Col., and a vast array of smaller stables whose lights are equally as strong in proportion to their numbers, gives strength to the assertion that at no time in the history of trotting and pacing horses could there be gathered together a stronger element of speed than will be shown at the Blue Ribbon Meeting of 1893. $40,500 is the grand total of purses. The classes that will compete for these valuable prizes are the 2:35, 2:30, 2:27, 2:25, 2:24, 2:22, 2:20, 2:18, 2:15, F. F. A. and Merchants' and Manufacturers' Consolation purse, trotting, and 2:21, 2:18, 2:15 and F. F. A. pacing, thereby enlisting the speed of both gaits. The various railroads leading into Detroit have offered reduced rates, accompanied with ticket of admission. It will be the carnival week of the year. To miss it means the loss of the greatest week's pleasure in speed contests ever held in Michigan.

The Pleasures Of Toil

are unknown to many thousands in the world's grand army of toilers.

It's because so few of them labor with their heads as well as with their hands. Thinking pays; ideas are so much capital.

The McCormick No. 4 Steel Mower

It's an ideal machine. There are more good ideas about its construction than can be found in any other mower. Probably that's why its sales are so enormous. It has the best foot-lift to be found on any mower; is fitted with the McCormick cold rolled finger bar, and will stand the severest tests possible to a grass-cutter. Guaranteed to work where others fail.

It's a light draft mower, and it's durable. It's an easy winner of field trials. It's a really valuable mower in more ways than can be enumerated here—and it costs but little more than a "cheap" machine.

The Illustrated McCormick Catalogue shows the special merits of this mower. We furnish it—so do our agents.

G. A. R. NOTICE!

We take this opportunity of informing our subscribers that the new Commissioner of Pensions has been appointed, He is an old soldier, and we believe that soldiers and their heirs will receive justice at his hands. We do not anticipate that there will be any radical changes in the administration of pension affairs under the new regime.

We would advise, however, that U. S. soldiers sailors, and their heirs, take steps to make application at once, if they have not already done so, in order to secure the benefit of the early filing of their claims in case there should be any future pension legislation. Such legislation is seldom retroactive. Therefore it is of great importance that applications be filed in the Department at the earliest possible date.

If U. S. Soldiers, Sailors, or their Widows, Children, or Parents desire information in regard to pension matters, they should write to The Press Claims Company, at Washington, D. C. and they will prepare and send the necessary application, if they find them entitled under the numerous laws enacted for their benefit.
